"No," I said, using a word which is quickly becoming a staple in my baby-addressing vocabulary. "You can't have that. It's hot. Hot."

As I used my left hand to pull the baby back and my right hand to push the plate farther away, the baby grabbed the spoon and began banging it on the table. Less than 10 months ago, this baby had virtually no control over her hands. Now, she not only can control her hands, she seems to have sprouted six more to go with the original two. She's an octababy.

Although it provided a challenge, I got the baked potato peeled, mashed and ready to eat. I took a couple of bites while the baby watched. I guess she was making sure I was using proper form in my eating.

I put just a tidbit of baked potato on the fork and offered it to the baby. She turned her face sideways, lifted her hands and pushed the fork away.

"You don't want that? Fine, then daddy will eat it."

I ate a few more bites of baked potato, then started on the chicken. The baby watched with interest.

Maybe she wants some chicken, I thought. I cut off a tiny piece and offered that to her.

No good. Fended off again.

I finished the chicken and most of the potato and started in on dessert. Kathy had made those little Pillsbury cinnamon rolls for dessert and they were still warm.

I took a couple bites and offered some to the baby. Apparently she's inherited her father's appetite for junk food. She went for the cinnamon roll. I took another bite and offered her a second bite.

She bit down. Along with the part she bit into, the center, yes the very heart of the cinnamon roll broke off. The heart of a warm cinnamon roll is the best part and the baby had bit off more than she could chew. I thought about taking back the heart of the cinnamon roll before she gobbled it up. I didn't think she'd care.

But then I thought, no, if I can get her eating the cinnamon roll, maybe then I can switch back to the baked potato and get her to eat some of that. If that means sacrificing the best part of the cinnamon roll, then so be it. In the child psychology terminology of baby feeding, this is known as "priming the pump."

So I sacrificed the heart of a warm cinnamon roll, hoping it would lead the baby to a baked potato.

The baby took that cinnamon roll heart in her little hand, looked up, looked at me and looked down. Then she threw it on the floor and the dog ate it.

CLOCKWISE

BOB CLOCK

It's good, not perfect

This may sound as unpatriotic as all get-out, but I can't help feeling sorry for the newly liberated citizens of Eastern Europe who are getting their first taste of Western-style democracy.

Do those poor souls realize that they are going to have to suffer through "election" campaigns just like the rest of us? I doubt it.

For years, their political decisions have been made for them by their communist bosses, relieving them of the tremendous responsibility of self-government.

Now all of a sudden they have a say in who will run the show and they will be subjected to all the lies, hoopla and innuendo of party politics before they cast their ballots.

Take the recent TV spot in which Democratic senatorial candidate Tom Weiss of Gaylord accuses Republican George McManus of Traverse City of increasing taxes.

Holy Moses! I can't believe it!

The whole thing apparently stemmed from McManus's tenure on Northwestern Michigan University's board of trustees and McManus voted to refer a millage increase to the people. That's it.

Then we have the spectacle of Rep. Bob Davis, R-Gaylord, cozying up to McManus saying they'll make a great team when it comes to getting the message through to Lansing.

Which is OK. They're both Republicans.

But you'll remember that for many years Davis's personal representative in these parts was one Bill Huber of Hayes Township, who ran for the Republican nomination against McManus—and lost in the August primary despite Davis's support.

Somewhat it seems a bit awkward to hear Davis singing the praises of the guy who defeated his long-time buddy.

Is nothing sacred? I guess not.

THE PROBLEM it appears, is with party politics—with the emphasis on "party."

The founding fathers of this government (and mothers, too, if you want to include Betsy Ross and Molly Yard) were afraid the system would degenerate into a party system. And it did, almost before the ink was dry on the Constitution.

As a result we find otherwise sensible people voting the "party line" without giving two hoots for the merits of individual candidates.

About the nicest thing you can say about political parties is that they eliminate the need for the voter to do any serious thinking of his own about either issues or candidates.

If Joe Votegetter is a Republican (or a Democrat) he has to be OK. Let's vote for him. End of discussion.

WILL THE NEW democracies of Eastern Europe fall into the same trap? Probably so.

Running a modern-day election campaign—including television spots and color ads—is well beyond the financial resources of most candidates. They need a party organization behind them to pull off a victory—and hang the cost.

Carl Levin (D-Detroit), the Michigan senator, firmly believes that success at the polls shows a direct correlation to campaign spending—and he has been around long enough to know whereof he speaks. Even though Levin has a solid record of effectiveness in Washington and firm base of support and affection at home, he knows that he must match his challenger, William Schuette, dollar-for-dollar in campaign spending or he stands a good chance of losing his seat in November.

You would almost think Levin could run—and win—without spending a dime, but he dare not risk it.

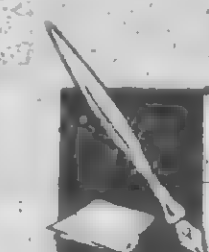

I wish the United States had been able to iron out some of these problems before we had so many hapless Europeans following in our tracks. But we have been reluctant to change, so I am afraid our friends will have to make the same mistakes as we—over and over.

Make no mistake. Our system of government is the best ever devised.

It's just too bad we haven't taken the time to make it better.

Letters to the Editor:

Political change supported

Editor:

The recent mayoral election in Charlevoix has confirmed that a change in City leadership is desired (62% voting for change). The Mayor and certain members of Council have placed many long-term and well-planned programs in jeopardy during the past two years. Such short-term decision-making lacks foresight and sensitivity to long term consequences. Cases in point include downtown lighting, committee appointments, launching ramp facilities, under-bridge walkway, traffic flow alternatives and the bandshell.

An equally damaging consequence of such short-sighted decision making is the decision of many elected officials to "throw in the towel" and not seek re-election because of the frustrations of public office.

In order to improve the quality of City government, our Mayor and Council must exhibit the same degree of professionalism and skill they demand from City staff and appointed committees and commissions.

The Mayor and Council must not confuse leadership with management. They must provide a balance between responsibility and responsiveness, and not just react to the "here and now" while otherwise disregarding community needs which transcend their term of office. In short, they must have a good attitude, skill and discipline if they are to attain good results.

Public input at the polls is essential to ensure the election of candidates who will act for the "long term" benefit of Charlevoix. Demand good government! VOTE ON NOVEMBER 6th.

Sincerely,
Ken Staley

Duke - Waggoner

Susan and Gordon Waggoner

Susan Duke and Gordon Waggoner exchanged marriage vows Saturday afternoon, September 8, in the First Congregational Church of Charlevoix.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Duke of Charlevoix, and the bridegroom, who lives in Farmington Hills, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Waggoner of Kalkaska.

The Rev. Philip Schairbaum officiated at the ceremony in which the bride was given in marriage by her father.

Approximately 235 guests were present as the bride walked down the aisle wearing a white silk satin gown designed by Ava Hanel Forsythe. The gown was fashioned with a tiered portrait collar and beaded Alençon lace on the bodice which also flowed onto the full skirt and bordered the hem. Her tiara was beaded with pearls and held a fingertip veil.

The bride's bouquet was a cascading crescent of Bendrobium orchids, white roses, stephanotis, and gardenias.

Bethany Revoir served the bride as maid of honor.

Glass - Thomas

Laura Glass and Scott Thomas

Laura Sue Glass and G. Scott Thomas were married Saturday, August 18, in a garden ceremony in Tonawanda, New York.

Mayer Alice Roth of the City of Tonawanda officiated at the ceremony before guests from Virginia, North and South Carolina, Maryland, Michigan, and New York.

The bride is the daughter of H. Dale and Janis Glass of Charlevoix, and her bridegroom is the son of Wayne and Judy Thomas of Kernersville, North Carolina.

The bride's off-the-shoulder wedding gown was fashioned of ivory jacquard brocade with a balloon hem and train. The bride designed her own veil and headpiece which featured ivory and pale peach satin roses on a headband with a double tier edged in ivory. She carried a bouquet of champagne and peach roses with Queen Anne's lace, bouvardia, and tiny white asters.

Mary Ellen Kolesnick attended the bride as matron of honor and Bruce Kolesnick served as best man.

The bride's mother arranged the flowers for the garden reception that followed the wedding. It was catered by Amanda Lowell of Rochester, New York.

Following a wedding trip through the northeast, the newlyweds are at home in Tonawanda.

Proceeds from the sales drive will be used to purchase uniforms and equipment for the instrumental music program, and to provide funds for trips, camp scholarships, and awards for band students. The fundraiser has been well received in the community in the past, with many enthusiastic comments about the cheese and sausage products. Anyone wishing to purchase cheese and sausage who is not contacted by a band member is asked to call the high school band room at 547-3234.

Gretchen McDonough

Mary Gretchen McDonough, 56, of Charlevoix, died Sept. 13, 1990, at Little Traverse Division, Northern Michigan Hospitals.

Funeral mass was 10 a.m. Friday, Sept. 14, at St. Mary's Church, Charlevoix. The Rev. James Gardiner officiated and burial was in St. Mary's Cemetery, Charlevoix.

The former Mary Gretchen Barkley was born April 28, 1934, in Detroit, the daughter of James R. and Louise (Erdman) Barkley. She grew up in Detroit and on Jan. 28, 1956, she married Robert Bruce McDonough in Detroit. They resided in Charlevoix and Mr. McDonough preceded her in death on July 2, 1975. Mrs. McDonough had resided in Charlevoix for the past 31 years.

She was a member of St. Mary's Catholic Church. Survivors include three sons, Ronald McDonough, Shawn McDonough and his wife Jean and Kelly McDonough, all of Charlevoix; four daughters, Mary Lou McDonough of Charlevoix, Mrs. Bill (Judy)

Longley of Texas, Mrs. Mark (Kathy) Ellis of Detroit and Mrs. Russ (Lisa) Nichols of Charlevoix; six grandchildren; three brothers, Richard Barkley of Lansing, William Barkley of Detroit and Mike Barkley of Southgate; two sisters, Mrs. James (Ann) Insell of Texas and Mrs. Roger (Kathy) Houghof of Detroit; many relatives from Beaver Island.

The family suggests memorials to the University of Michigan Organ Transplantation Center, Ann Arbor.

Child care costs decreasing

By Peg Ohle

Charlevoix County can look forward to at least one probable cut in expenses next year.

Probate Court will be asking for quarterly payments of $60,000 to carry on its child care program, compared with quarterly payments of $75,000 in the present fiscal year.

This anticipated annual saving of $60,000 is made possible by a change in philosophy, according to Juvenile Officer David Bitler.

"The reduction in cost is due to Judge Mulhauser's philosophy to get kids early and keep them in the home," he explained.

For that reason costs are going down but the caseload is increasing—more children are being placed in diversionary programs of both Juvenile Court and the Department of Social Services before they get into serious trouble. Also, more children are being supervised in the in-home-care program rather than being sent to institutions at $100 a day or foster-care homes at $15 a day.

Both the diversionary programs and the in-home-care program provide supervision of troubled youths by a trained caseworker who also works with a child's parents (or parent) as well as his school and other agencies when necessary.

However, Juvenile Court is realistic in setting up its child care budget for the coming fiscal year (October to October). Its budget calls for placing 12 youths in family foster care during the year and 4.5 youths in institutional care during the same period. In August of this year, there were nine youths in foster care and six youths in institutional care. The term of the last of these youths still in institutional care will end in July of next year.

A summary of child care placements for the last two 12-month periods shows that: The number of youths having petitions or written complaints filed decreased by 34 percent.

Police and security officers compete in shoot

Michigan State Police Trooper Michael Tilley was top gun at the Big Rock Point Turkey Shoot which took place Saturday, Sept. 8, at the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club. Tilley shot the highest score among 21 law enforcement officers and Burns International Security Services officers competing in the third annual event. It was the second year in a row that Tilley won the competition. Taking top team honors were Burns Security officers Ernest Brosseau, Russell Brosseau, Duane Donaldson and Jeff Brodin from the Big Rock Point nuclear plant.

The annual competition is co-sponsored by the Charlevoix Police Department and Big Rock Point. Participants in the marksmanship event are required to use standard side-arms on a 50-shot competition course testing their accuracy at various distances and positions using either hand. Trophies were presented to the winning marksmen by Charlevoix Police Chief Dennis Halverson.

Medad Thompson, who arrived in Charlevoix in 1854, is said to have harvested 80 bushels of apples from his 13 trees. He also had 900 maple trees which "produced enough maple syrup to promise an enterprising business." The syrup was sealed in air-tight cans and sold for $2.50 a gallon.

Holy Island, the small island in the South Arm of Lake Charlevoix, was used by the Mormons as a meeting and feasting place. One such feast, called "Feast of First Fruits", was held in the early summer of 1857, ostensibly to let John Dixon, Charlevoix first permanent non-Mormon resident, know he was not welcome.

With the harvest season approaching our area things seem to be picking up around local farms and woodlots. Farmers are busy clearing fields and preparing for the long winter months that lie ahead. Richard Farmer is busy too this time of year, but to him staying busy has been a major part of his life in Charlevoix.

*One summer a neighbor cut a

"Sometimes in the winter my father and two of the neighbors would sell hay to people in East Jordan. They put the hay onto sleighs for hauling because snowplowing was nonexistent and sleighs did better than a truck would. After they loaded the sleighs they would head for the lake early in the morning and travel down the lake on the ice. We did this because there wasn't a road between Loeb Farms and Ironton to use like today. Also,

"Sometimes we had to do a little work on the road to use it. The county would hire the neighbor and my family to disc the road in the winter months. We did the road into Norwood because the road would get bumpy from the sleigh teams and then freeze at night. When we disc'd it the road was a little more level for the sleighs to glide on. Everybody in the area had a team. And when you didn't have a team, like if you were coming home from school, you walked. I remember the snow being four feet high in places and the wind and snow blowing so hard you couldn't see. By the time you got home you were soaked clear through and your clothes were frozen stiff from the cold. Kids today will never experience things like that in their lifetime."

Emergency Services units practice for disaster

County Emergency Services Director Earl Muma arrived at the meeting shortly after it started to announce that at 6:36 that morning he had been advised by the National Weather Service in Ann Arbor of severe weather warnings; at 8:45 he received a tornado warning; and at 9:20 a tornado touched down at M-66 and Lord Road, proceeding into East Jordan, where there was considerable damage.

Muma asked the County Board for permission to declare the county in a state of emer-

Ludington race belongs to the Rayders

The Charlevoix boys' cross country team's philosophy for 1990: If we all run near the front of the pack, it makes it easy to keep track of each other, and our team wins the meet.

Charlevoix placed four runners among the top 10 finishers at the Ludington Invitational Saturday, beating the second place team, Big Rapids, by 40 points.

Cross Country meets are scored by adding the places of the team's first five runners. Charlevoix's top four runners placed: fifth, seventh, eighth and ninth in a field of more than 150.

Junior Mike Sevinski led the Rayders with a time of 17:02 on the 5K (3.1 mile course). Sevinski was the top finisher among runners from Class C schools. Sophomore Matt Smith turned in a 17:14. Paul Wakulat and Chris Meier finished almost side by side in 17:18.

Coach Pete Spieles has been hoping to close the gap between the defending Class C champion team's fourth and fifth runners. At the Ludington Invitational, Matt Stargardt was the fifth Rayder across the line with a time of 18:05, which left him in 36th place. Zack Pajtas finished 59th in 18:22. John Parish finished 106th with a time of 19:45. Parish has been running better, but had an off day Saturday.

Elsa Conlan led the team finishing 12th with a time of 23:31. Other Rayder girls' places and times were: Carrie Farkas, 16th at 24:11; Melissa Eaton, 20th at 24:53; Sandy Fer-shee, 21st at 24:55; Erin Wright, 23rd at 24:58; Melissa Cox, 26th at 25:14; and Ann Schlarbaum, 35th at 27:45.

Boys' junior varsity runners and their places were: Mike Ochs, 29th; Henri Dhasleer, 31; Josh Scheels, 51st; Josh Dhasleer, 52nd; Wally Nephan, 67th; and Sven Janja, 85th.

This Saturday the Rayders will compete in the Petoskey Invitational.

Soccer team wins

Charlevoix's soccer team easily took care of Alpena's junior varsity team with a 5-2 win Sept. 13 at Shanahan Field.

Sam Bingham scored four of the Rayders' goals. Brandon Jess scored the other goal.

Charlevoix took the lead early on two goals by Jess and never looked back. Halfbacks Mike Dobulis and Seth Arnold helped the Rayders control the midfield while fullbacks Brian Darrah, Paul Cunningham and Jay Livingston held down the back line. Goalie Jamie Ruizperez didn't have to block a lot of shots, but did make some excellent saves.

Football team wins 40-13

Charlevoix crushed, hammered, clobbered, destroyed (oh, you pick the verb) Harbor Springs 40-13 Friday night. The win brought the Rayders record to 2-1 and dropped the host team Rams to 0-3 on the season.

Rayder running back Brian Coolman ran wild. If anything were to have stopped him, it would have been a shortage of breath. Coolman totalled 130 yards on six carries. Yeah, get out the calculator. That's an average of 21.66666667...oh round it off, 22 yards per carry. He also had a 37-yard excursion called back because of a penalty. Eric McElroy ran for 86 yards on five carries and Scott Campbell ran for 85 yards on seven carries.

Charlevoix running backs totalled 357 yards on the night. Quarterback Dan Terryberry didn't give the ball to the running backs on every play because they kept carrying it so far away. He passed the ball nine times, completing eight passes for 135 yards.

Coolman, Terryberry, McElroy, Campbell and Brian VanLoo scored touchdowns for the Rayders. Parrish and Coolman scored two point conversions.

Although the Rams had problems defensively, their offense performed well. The Rams' offense totalled 310 yards for the evening. Rayder defensive back Ken Olinger stopped two long Harbor Springs' drives with interceptions.

Defensively for Charlevoix, Parrish collected a dozen tackles; Coolman, Campbell, Scott Kehrer and Robert Scholey each had eight. Kehrer recovered a fumble and VanLoo intercepted a pass.

Charlevoix's Scott Boyer (far right) tries to use his head to bump the ball away from Alpena defenders.

Charlevoix's girls' basketball team got rid of a hideous zero in their win column Sept. 11 with a 64-51 win over Boyne Falls, but two nights later lost to Harbor Springs 60-52.

The victory over Boyne Falls snapped a 23-game Rayder losing streak.

Charlevoix got off to a slow start at Boyne Falls, trailing 14-12 at the end of the first quarter. In the second quarter, the Rayder offense began clicking. Charlevoix outscored Boyne Falls 22-13 to take a 36-

27 halftime lead. Charlevoix also outscored Boyne Falls in the third and fourth quarters.

Sophomore Mary Jane Grunch led the Rayder scorers with 23 points. Junior forward Gina Webster turned in a double-double on the night collecting a dozen rebounds to go along with 19 points. Julie Gengle had eight rebounds.

Against Harbor Springs, Charlevoix trailed throughout the game. The offense sputtered in the first quarter as the Rayders scored only five points. The Rayders found their offense late in the game, scoring 25 points in the final quarter. Unfortunately they also gave up 19 in the quarter.

Grunch again led the Rayders, this time with 13 points. Gengle added a dozen and Webster 10.

Charlevoix also lost the junior varsity game.

The varsity loss dropped the team's record to 1-3 on the year. This Thursday evening, the Rayders will host Mancelona.

Golf team starts out well

LaBlance sets new school record at 35

When all of the scores were sorted out, Charlevoix's golf team ended up beating Petoskey, Inland Lakes and Mancelona Sept. 12 at the Belvedere Golf Course.

In a non league match, the Rayders defeated Petoskey 176-183. Luke LaBlance and Doug Sineway shared top honors for the Rayders, each shooting a 42. Dan Boss followed with a 43 while Wayne Joy and Cory Crain each shot 49.

In a league match against Mancelona and Inland Lakes, the scores of LaBlance, Sineway and Boss were used along with a 47 from Travis Blissett for a team total of 174. Inland Lakes shot a team total of 204 and Mancelona shot a 223.

In the Sept. 12 junior varsity match Charlevoix lost to Petoskey 200-210. Cory Ostrum shot a 48, Jeremy Doan 50, Richie LaVoie 55, Jeff Joy 57 and Jeff Hoffman 58.

Last Thursday at Cheboygan, Charlevoix again was victorious beating the Chief's 166-167 and Gaylord 166-179. LaBlance set the school scoring record with a round of 35, taking a stroke off the previous record set by Mike Custer in 1975.

Completing Charlevoix's varsity scoring were: Boss and Sineway, each with a 43; Crain with a 44; and Wayne Joy with a 50.

Charlevoix lost the junior varsity match to Cheboygan, 188-227. For Charlevoix: Blissett shot a 49; Ostrum 54; LaVoie 61; and Jeff Joy 67.

Bulmann's selling snowmobiles

Big Meadow Equipment has added Arctic Cat and Polaris snowmobiles along with snowmobile attire, trailers and accessories to their line of merchandise.

C. Keith Bulmann, owner of Big Meadow Equipment, says he added snowmobiles in response to public demand. The main snowmobile trail for the Jordan River Valley goes through Big Meadow's back field. Bulmann said the business will be open evenings and weekends to cater to snowmobilers. He also hopes to add gas pumps to allow snowmobilers to fill up their sleds.

Big Meadow Equipment will have 38 different snowmobile models for sale, ranging from 340 cc to 200 cc machines with both fan and liquid cooled engines. They will also have Polaris all terrain vehicles.

The addition of snowmobiles helps fill a seasonal gap for the shop which has sold and serviced farm and industrial equipment for several years. The business has also been selling and repairing used snowmobiles for the past three years.

Big Meadow Equipment is located south of East Jordan on M-66.

Lynn and Keith Bulmann of Big Meadow Equipment have added Arctic Cat and Polaris snowmobiles and accessories to their line of equipment.

Shop appoints new manager

Jeanine Wallace, owner of the Shop of the Gulls on Bridge Street, has announced the promotion of Thelma Dittlow to Store Manager.

Dittlow and her husband Edward (Pete) are long-time

Charlevoix residents. She has worked for Shop of the Gulls for several years and before that was employed by other Charlevoix Shops. She is also active in Beta Sigma Phi sorority, of which she was recently elected president.

"People who come in to the Shop of the Gulls know Thelma well," Wallace told the Courier, adding that she is glad Dittlow is able to take on the additional managerial responsibilities.

Banks announce affiliation

It was jointly announced today by David L. Fochtman, Chairman of Northwestern Bank Corporation, and David M. Ondersma, Chairman, President and Chief Executive Officer of First Michigan Bank Corporation, that a letter of intent to affiliate has been signed by both organizations.

The proposed affiliation is subject to approval of the various regulatory agencies and approval by the shareholders of Northwestern Bank Corporation. The affiliation would be accomplished through an exchange of debentures, cash and common stock of First Michigan Bank Corporation for all of the outstanding shares of Northwestern Bank Corporation. The total value of this transaction is estimated between $16 and $17 million, depending on stockholders equity at merger date.

Northwestern Bank Corporation is the parent organization of Northwestern State Bank. Northwestern State Bank has nine offices located in Atwood, Bellaire, Boyne City, Boyne Falls, East Jordan, Mancelona and Petoskey. The Bank currently has total assets of approximately $115 million.

Fochtman said, "The Board of Directors of Northwestern Bank Corporation feels very confident that the proposed affiliation truly represents the best interests of our shareholders, our customers, our communities and our staff. We strongly believe this merger will expand our available services to our customers. First Michigan Bank Corporation has a fine network of banks in West Michigan, and its standing in the financial services industry is excellent."

SCRAPBOOK

This picture will probably bring a smile to many old-time Charlevoix residents. Millie Withers, who loaned us the picture, has identified the actresses or dancers as follows: (on floor in front) Helen Mary Campbell (Bellinger); (kneeling) Dorothy Withers and Irene McCann (Seymour); (seated) Ann Sherer and Fran Milner; (standing) Isabelle Henderson, Lucille Usher and Lila Heise.

Arts group selects winners

Jordan River Arts Council raffle coordinator Tom Teske dropped two hundred sixty-six tickets into a barrel, council president Fran Pletz helped him shake the tickets, blind-folded seven-year-old Kara Steely drew a ticket, and Barb McArthur, Charlevoix, was one of five $100 winners.

The top prize of a choice of a trip for two to Paris or $4,000 was won by Shirley Timms of Boyne City.

The drawing concluded the council's third annual meeting Tuesday, Sept. 11, at Jordan River Art Center in East Jordan. The second prize of $500 went to Jeff LaRoux, East Jordan Middle School principal, who requested number sixteen when he bought his ticket. An excited LaRoux explained he has liked the number sixteen since winning a second place prize with it in second grade. Other $100 winners were Kerry and John Richter, Carol Derenzy, Ann Hite and Tim Malpass, all of East Jordan.

Teske said the council's profit on the raffle is $1,500 - a step toward the $10,000 the council hopes to raise to receive a matching Frey Foundation grant to hire a full-time director.

Other business included the election of new board members.

Council discusses cruise ship dock

Day after day, all summer long the Star of Charlevoix sat at the dock and went nowhere. No spiffy captain and crew, no guests in dinner clothes, no anything. It just sat there. It still sits there.

At Monday evening's city council meeting, council members went into closed session to discuss buying out the remainder of the Star's docking lease so that another cruise ship might operate out of the city marina.

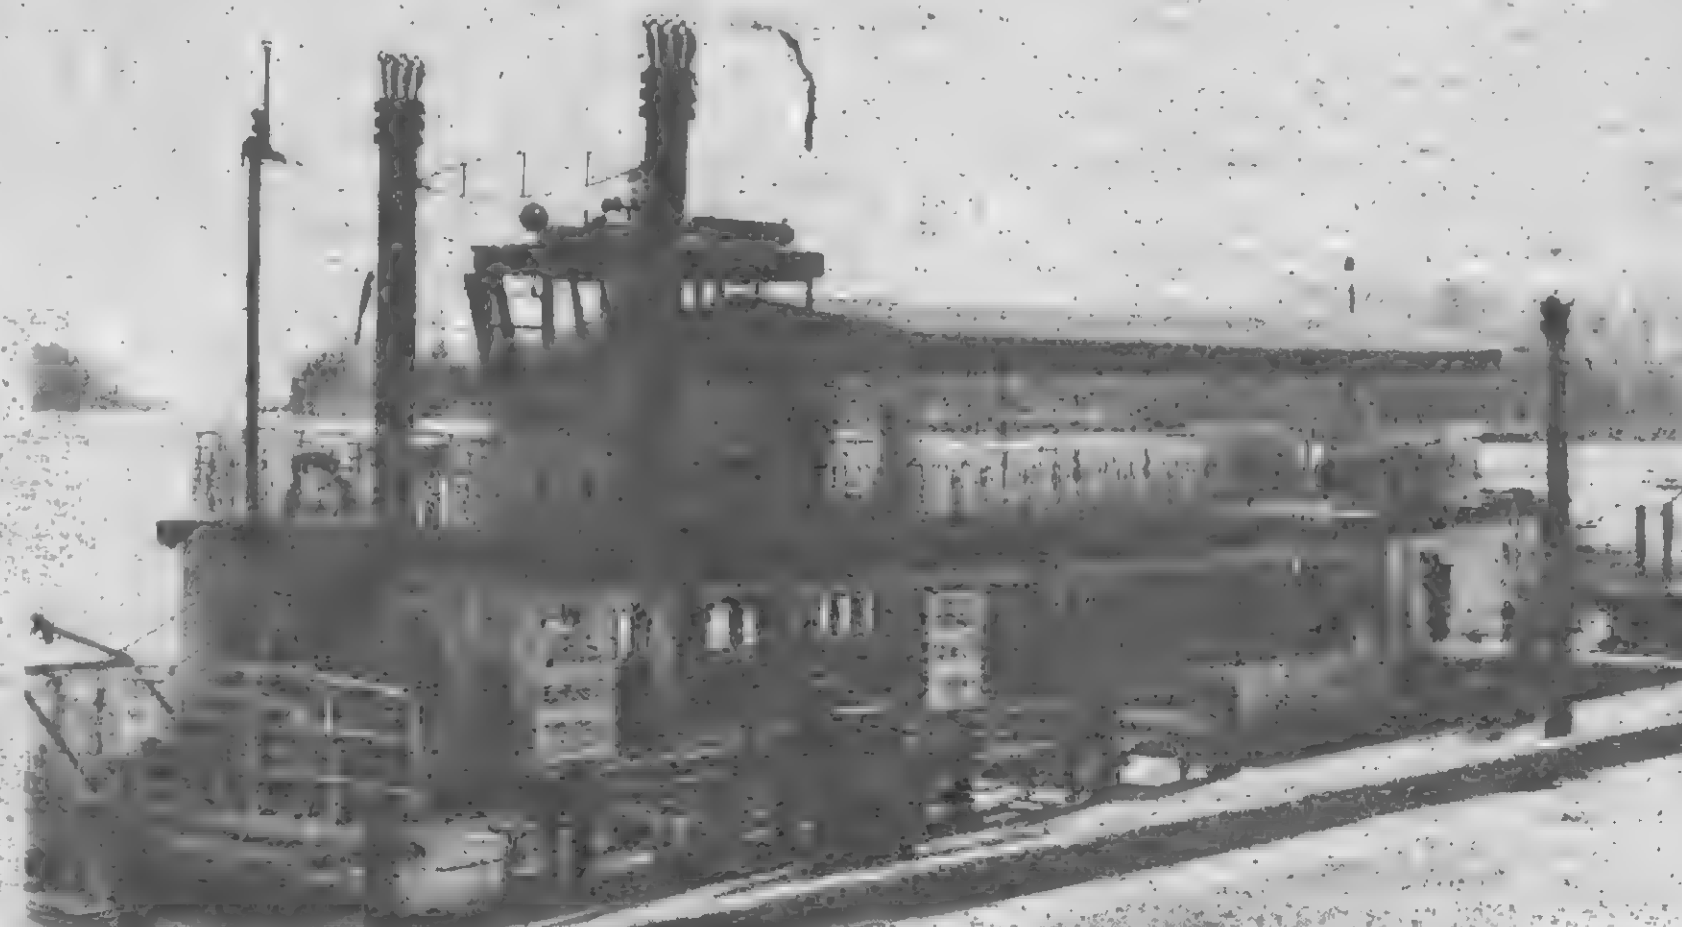

The Star of Charlevoix, operated by the Starline Corporation, is in the midst of a five-year lease which began in 1988 and runs through 1992. The Star of Charlevoix operated in 1988 and 1989, but closed following the 1989 tourist season.

Although there aren't any hot prospects on establishing a new cruise line to replace the Star, the city and chamber of commerce occasionally receive inquiries. Those inquiries will be easier to nurture if only one party, the city, has to be addressed in securing dock space.

Downtown merchants and area motel owners have often spoke in favor of having some type of cruise ship operate out of the harbor because of the business it brings to the community.

There have also been periodic quarrels during council meetings concerning the city leasing dock space for a cruise ship.

Monday evening, former councilman Norm Probert claimed that it was almost a executive director Jacqueline Merta said that the Starline Corporation paid for the five-year lease in advance, but the money was in an escrow fund until the city and company worked out some details of the agreement.

Senior Center project begins

Charlevoix senior citizens will soon have a home of their own.

Ground has been broken for renovating the old Charlevoix Township Hall at Norwood Road and Carpenter Street and constructing the first stages of an addition to the hall.

The Township Hall was deeded to the Charlevoix County Commission on Aging two years ago by township residents. Through diligent fundraising by the Charlevoix Senior Center and securing of grants from the Frey Foundation and the State Office of Services to the Aging, enough money is available to start construction.

Initially, work will be limited to making the old building comfortable for senior citizens to eat their noon-day meal and carry on their crafts and other activities. Work will include insulating, rewiring, drywalling, chimney replacement, new doors, barrier-free access, and several other smaller improvements.

The first stages of work on the addition to the hall will consist of building a bathroom, new entrance to the old building and a basement to house the heating plant. Initial work will also improve the first floor, siding and roof.

Architect Lou Orłowski of Charlevoix, who drew the plans for renovating the old building and constructing the addition, will oversee construction work, which will be done by Charlevoix builder Earl Weir.

It is anticipated Charlevoix senior citizens activities can be

Susan Lake hearing scheduled

The Department of Natural Resources will host a public hearing at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday, Oct. 7, in the Hayes Township Hall to discuss the Planned Unit Development called "Cedar Shores" on Susan Lake.

According to township clerk Ethel Knepp, some questions have been raised concerning possible problems with the waters of Susan Lake as a result of the development.

Some of the questions have to do with water skilling, sizes of boats and motors, and docks and moorings.

Cedar Shores development originally consisted of 275 acres, known as the Leo Berg property, on the Boyne City Road just west of Quarterline Road. All but about 25 acres of the property was turned over to a conservancy. The Planned Unit Development will consist of 21 single family homes on the remainder of the property, along the shores of Susan Lake.

The development was approved by the township this past summer.

Local Eastern Star hosts centennial

Charlevoix Chapter #72 Order of Eastern Star is celebrating their 100th year (1890-1990) as a chapter this year. A special celebration took place with grand officers as guests. Worthy Grand Matron, Hazel Chapman and Worthy Grand Patron, Joseph Holland shared the head table with Worthy Matron Ann Hufford and Worthy Patron Walt Hufford. Others at the honor table were: Alice Gellinger, Past Grand Ada and organist; (Alice was initiated in 1925); Frances Durance was initiated in 1924; Florence Adair, Grand Officer of the general grand chapter; Frances Strand, general grand committee member.

A nautical motif was the theme for this special event depicting Charlevoix being a city of the lakes. Blue and white colors were carried through on the tables with blue tankards filled with white silk flowers. Glass sun catcher anchors were favors at each place. A large emblem made by Carla Spencer enhanced the wall. The emblem was a picture of a lighthouse, sea gulls, waves and the setting sun. Place cards, guest tickets, and name tags were of a nautical design also.

After a catered dinner, the grand officers initiated six new members: Donald Carey, Amy Carey Russell, June Riley, Joan Wagner, Ann Wagner, and Ember Withhoef.

Charlevoix chapter was organized on August 27, 1890 with approximately 70 people gathered at the masonic temple. The meeting was called to order by worthy grand patron of the eastern star of Michigan, and the following officers were elected: Ida Emrey, Worthy Matron; Albert E. Mason, Worthy Patron; Carrie Hilton, Associate Matron; Bert McLeod, Secretary; Alice Hines, Treasurer; Florence Smith, Conductress; and Carrie Bates, Associate Conductress.

Charlevoix's chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star recently celebrated its centennial. Among the officers present were from left: Florence Adair, Right Worthy Associate Grand Conductress of the General Grand Chapter and Past Grand Matron of Michigan; Hazel Chapman, Worthy Grand Matron; Ann Hufford, Worthy Matron Charlevoix; Walt Hufford, Worthy Patron Charlevoix; Joseph Holland, Worthy Grand Patron; Frances Strand, General Grand Chapter Committee Member and Past Grand Matron of Michigan.

Over the past years grand appointments have been received by members: Carrie Hilton, Alice Miller, Dorothy See, Alice Bellinger, Mildred Hiller, Dorothea Kelley, and Anita Pontius. Grand Committee members have been: Elaine Belfy, Mildred Hiller, Beverly Plum, Janada Rehkopf, Chingua, Hazel Rehkopf, Robert Kelley and Dorothea Kelley. Ann Hufford served as a grand representative.

Meguzee was formed in 1912 which is our district association. The following sisters have been president: Laura Courier, Alice Bellinger, Mildred Hiller, Beverly Plum, and Ann Hufford. Charlevoix Chapter Order of the Eastern Star has always worked very closely with the masonic brother. They have helped in sharing responsibilities in maintenance, purchasing kitchen equipment, redecorating and helping to refurbish the lodge and chapter room.

State senate candidate brings campaign to Charlevoix

George McManus, the Republican candidate for Michigan's 37th District Senate seat, visited Charlevoix last week. McManus and Democratic candidate Tom Weise are running for the seat currently held by Mitch Irwin, D-Sault Ste. Marie. Irwin chose to not seek reelection.

McManus lives in Traverse City. He is a fruit farmer who was employed by Michigan State University from 1956 through 1982 as a district marketing agent, district horticultural agent and county cooperative extension director. He has served on the board of Northwestern Michigan College from 1970 to the present.

Like most state candidates, McManus is focusing on property taxes and educational funding in his campaign. And like most candidates, he is focusing on who pays the funds rather than how the funds are spent.

"People are very concerned about their property taxes and the largest portion is for education," McManus maintains. He feels Michigan needs to shift more of the educational funding burden away from property taxes and back to the state general fund.

When asked if that might lead to greater state and less local control of schools, McManus said he isn't suggesting that all of the burden be shifted away from property taxes.

To reduce property taxes, McManus proposes reducing State Equalized Values (SEV) from 50 percent to 40 percent of market value and capping annual SEV increases at five percent or the rate of inflation, whichever is less.

Funds local school districts lose due to this cut would be reimbursed from the state. He also favors eliminating the state practice of recapturing school funds, a practice which in essence allows the state to take back state money from school districts. McManus noted that 22 of 35 northern Michigan school districts are classified as "out of formula" by the state. He says his proposal would benefit both "in formula" and "out of formula" districts.

McManus also wants to exempt senior citizens from paying school property taxes if their household income is less

...Senior Center building begins

Local senior citizens will soon begin remodeling the Charlevoix Senior Citizen Center at the corner of Carpenter and Norwood Road.

Continued from page 1 moved to the renovated building some time in December. Until that time, meals will continue to be served in the VFW Hall and Adult Education classes will be held in the Lutheran Church. Remaining work on both buildings will be done as funds become available.

by EDITH GILBERT

Am I ever glad to be back in Charlevoix!

I spent last weekend in Chicago visiting a friend who lives in a beautiful new mansion. The place is loaded with security, starting at the front gate. It includes the front and back doors, the garage and all the windows and sliding glass doors in the house.

When I arrived, I was shown which buttons to press, given a sheet of instructions and told to "make myself at home. Having been left alone in this 'fortress', I thought twice about leaving the house for fear of being locked out for the rest of the weekend. I ordered a pizza, watched a little TV and went to bed.

At 2 a.m. the phone rings. "This is security," a voice says. "The alarm has gone off."

I look out the expanse of sliding glass doors and see giant bolts of lightning, hear explosive bursts of thunder and heavy rain beating down into the courtyard. "What do you want me to do?" I ask puzzled.

"Go downstairs and check," commands the voice.

With hesitation, I go from door to door. I feel like saying, "Here: burglar, nice burglar," but I resist the impulse.

Back upstairs, "Everything seems OK," I announce, to which the voice says, "What's the code word?"

I try to go to sleep, but I begin to wonder. Did my host return home unexpectedly? Is he lying bloodied and beaten in the garage? I go down again and check the garage. No car. So much for that and back to bed. I doze off and the phone rings. "This is the police. Come to the front gate." Tricky these security people! I reassure the 2 policemen with their squad car lights flashing that all is well.

Miracle of miracles! I fall asleep. A bell wakes me up. It's 9 o'clock in the morning. A flashing light on the phone shows me that there's someone at the front door. I press the right button and a voice says, "Federal Express and I take the envelope that's handed to me. Luckily I left the front door wide open so I'm not locked out. Whew!

To the kitchen for breakfast. While I'm enjoying reading the morning paper, I'm startled by a deep voice coming down from above. My first thought is, "It's GOD," but no, maybe it's the archangel! Wrong again. It's security. "The fire alarm is on. Leave the premises at once." I glance around and see smoke coming from the toaster. The phone rings. "The fire department is on the way!

"It's my toast burning—everything is fine! The code word is Wrigley Field." I shout into the phone, proud to remember the code word.

There were a couple of more exchanges with security before departing for Charlevoix. I told my host he should recommend me to the security company. They could send me around as a kind of Denis the Menace to test the equipment. I would do a superb job.

It's a relief to be home where I know every barking dog, on the north side by their first name; where I know the hiding place of my neighbor's doorknobs when they leave town; and where my neighbors call to tell me that I left the lights on in my car, or say, "look out the window, there's a deer on your lawn." Yup. It's good to be home.

Fighting the bull

The red cape isn't what annoys the bull. He's just angry by nature.

Sunday night, I watched a show about bullfighting. Public television broadcast the show. I was cruising through the channels, making full use of the remote control as all men tend to do, and stumbled onto the show.

Although I have nurtured an interest in bullfighting or otherwise, throughout my life, this show shed new light on the matter.

From what I gathered through watching this show, Mexican and Spanish people take this bullfighting stuff pretty seriously. They consider bullfighting to be an art, not just a good time.

Bullfighting as an art? I find that rather presumptuous. Here, in America, we've got rodeos and cow tipping, but it's all in good fun. If anything, we consider it recreation, not art.

I don't hold myself up as an expert on bullfighting, rodeo or cow tipping. I offer my opinions only as the observations of one who has never participated.

I once received an offer to participate in cow tipping. Some guys in college said they were going cow tipping and asked if I wanted to come along.

"What's cow tipping?" I asked suspiciously.

"Well, cows sleep on their feet," the guy explained. "And then you sneak up on them and try to tip them over."

"Why would you want to do that?" I asked.

"It's a good time," the guy answered.

It seemed like life too close to the edge for me and it sounded a bit like a snipe hunt, so I told the guys thanks for the offer, but they could run along without me.

With rodeos, my knowledge is closer to first-hand. I've seen rodeos and once was even bucked off of a Shetland pony. That was enough rodeoing for me. I hung up my spurs and stayed away from the bucking broncos and Brahma Bulls.

Despite all of the hoo-hah the Spanish and Mexicans make over bullfighting, I think it pales compared to rodeo. In bullfighting, the bullfighter just waves a cape and scampers out of the bull's way. In rodeo, the cowboy parks his butt right on top of the bull.

The bullfighters do what they can to make things interesting. First of all, they try to pick a mean bull. Fighting bulls are raised to not like people. When they're young, they're left out in the bull fields without contact with people for a long time. The only time they see people is when they're branded. And that doesn't leave them with a good impression. It's no wonder they generally keep their heads to the matador when they're in the ring.

As if the bulls aren't mean enough to begin with, the bullfighters poke them in the back with metal skewers. The matador also waves a red cape, but contrary to popular belief, the color red means nothing to the bull. The bull is pretty much color blind.

People who attend bullfight's aren't easily impressed. They want the bullfighter to fight the bull in the most dangerous manner possible. People at bullfights are almost as bad as hockey fans.

In the end, the bullfighter takes a sword and kills the bull. Then it's hamburgers all around. At American sporting events, we have concession stands and lean toward hot dogs.

Out of the Blue

Life is real and life is earnest.
But it still could be lived gaily—
Which is just how I'd be living it
If so much of it weren't so daily.

CLOCKWISE

BOB CLOCK

Still looking for color

If you plan to meander through the countryside looking for fall colors, I'd wait a few days. Maybe a few weeks.

Judy and I drove to Grand Rapids Sunday and I expected to encounter plenty of color once we left the Lake Michigan shore.

But I was disappointed. A few poplar were changing color along the Fife Lake cutoff, but by and large all of the deciduous trees were still July-green.

I have no idea why, but it probably has something to do with the fact we have just survived one of the coldest, wettest summers since the Ice Age. I think the woods are still waiting for a few nice days before putting on their autumnal finery. Or whatever.

Near Fife Lake we saw fields of tall pinkish grass. Very odd looking.

Elsewhere along U.S. 131 we saw fields of ferns that had turned a bizarre rust-green.

But woodlots along the highway were a deep, intense green that was incongruous with the 39-degree temperature at Cadillac.

True, some fruit trees in the vicinity of Williamsburg had lost all their leaves. But other orchards were in full leaf.

Nature's mysteries never end.

FOR YEARS, the skyline of Grand Rapids has been dominated by the Amway Grand Plaza Hotel, a chisel-shaped hostelry that rises next to the monumental-old Pantlind Hotel. The Amway is the first big building to catch the eye as travelers on U.S. 131 approach Grand Rapids from the north.

But before long, the city will have a downtown hotel even taller — and bigger — than the Amway.

The building has appeared as if by magic over the summer and most of the steel girders already are in place.

As Detroit withers and dies, it is nice to know that another Michigan city is rising to take its place.

My Grand Rapids contacts say there is some talk about changing Monroe Street back into a bonafide street again instead of an open-air plaza.

Mistake! Mistake!
The plaza is the heart of the city, so far as I'm concerned. Very cosmopolitan. It's a great place to stroll, shop and dine. Sometimes musicians stage mini-concerts in the plaza. You might even hear live dance music if you hit the plaza at the right time.

All big cities need more open space for pedestrians and the Monroe Street plaza meets that need. I hope the city fathers see fit to keep it.

IT HAS BEEN fun watching Charlevoix's so-called infrastructure improvements downtown, despite the traffic congestion.

But the work seems to be winding down. All the Chinadeep pits have been filled and the sidewalks are almost completed.

Before long Bridge Street will be repaved and we can have our town back.

It's going to be beautiful. And just in time for the Christmas shopping season.

HONEST-TO-GOODNESS surfers had a ball in Charlevoix over the weekend, with waves up to 12 feet tall rolling in.

The water has turned a mite chilly, but wet suits help.

We have had "fall storms" all summer, but last weekend's was a dilly. The surf was so powerful you wouldn't want to venture out there, unless you really knew what you were doing.

Of course, there are some calm and sunny days ahead, but the "storms of November" are barreling down on us faster than I care to think about.

I HOPE YOU haven't missed any of the episodes of "The Civil War" on PBS this week.

They are an exceptional example of what can be done on TV.

We all know how the war came out; but it is nice to be reminded how far the nation has progressed from ante-bellum days.

Fortunately, touches of humor lighten the grim scenario. Did you know, for example, that the Union general George McClellan was so cautious and moved so slowly that his compatriots called him "the Virginia creeper?"

The Ladies Auxiliary to the American Legion, Leslie T. Shapton Unit #226, held installation of officers recently at the Post Home. Goldstick; 2nd Vice Pres: Gertrude Holt; Secretary: Maxine Barber; Treasurer: Nancy Woods; Sgt.-at-Arms: Linda Webster; Chaplain: Josephine Bindi; Executive Committee: Sue Lochner, Mary Sevastian, Betty McKenzie.

The Auxiliary meets the first Tuesday of each month at the American Legion Hall, and is open to all wives, mothers, daughters, sisters, and granddaughters of service personnel.

Town kept beautiful

Editor,

The Charlevoix Area Garden Club wishes to say how truly beautiful we think Charlevoix has been this summer. We realize this has been a total community effort, but we would like to express special thanks to those who took care of the watering, cleared the triangle garden at the corner of Michigan and Petoskey Avenues and obtained and placed the stones in Memorial Park on East Dixon Avenue.

SEPT

Spiegl - Drewa

St. Mary's Church in Charlevoix was the setting for the September 1 wedding of Dawn Marie Spiegl and Daniel Lee Drewa.

The Rev. James Gardiner officiated at the double ring rites before approximately 200 guests.

The bride is the daughter of Albert and Margaret Spiegl of Charlevoix, and the bridegroom is the son of Geraldine Drewa of Charlevoix and the late Leo Drewa.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of satin and lace. The bodice was trimmed with pearls and iridescent sequins and the skirt featured tiers of lace and a chapel-length train. The bride's veil of illusion was attached to a satin bow and floral sprays. She carried a bouquet of blue sweetheart roses and baby's breath with matching ribbons.

Debbie Jensen Capp served as maid of honor and Mary Margaret Glem, sister of the bride, and Michelle Spiegl, niece of the bride were bridesmaids. They wore watercolor print tea-length dresses with V-backs and crisscross straps and a candy box bow. They carried a face fan with flowers and ribbons.

David Drewa, brother of the bridegroom, was best man, and Edward Spiegl and Joe Borhis served as groomsmen and ushers.

Music for the ceremony was provided by organist Jeanne Olach and vocalist Mae Charboneau.

A reception at the American Legion Hall in Charlevoix followed the wedding ceremony. The wedding cake was baked and served by Kathryn Marsh, the bridegroom's sister.

The rehearsal dinner was held at Alexander's Restaurant, hosted by the bridegroom's mother.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an off-the-shoulder white silk and tulle gown with a cathedral train. The bodice and train were decorated with Alencon lace, pearls, and sequins.

The bride's bouquet was a cascade of silk and organza flowers and pearl filaments. The bouquet and three-layer veil were made by the bride's aunt, Sally Mitchell, owner of Sara's Bridal Millinery of Royal Oak.

Lori Hall served the bride as matron of honor, and the bridesmaids were Julie Barker, sister of the bridegroom, and the bride's cousins, Sue Giddings, Karen Mitchell, and Julie Monroe.

Meghan Hall was flower girl and Michael Hall was ring bearer.

The bride's attendants wore iridescent peach tulle floor-length gowns trimmed with sequins. Their bouquets were made of peach and white silk roses and lilies.

Shawn Keenan served as best man, and groomsmen were Matt Meehan, brother of the bride; Jeff Lambert, cousin of the bridegroom; Eric Antrim; and Todd Lewandowski. Ushers were Chris and Brent Beer. The bride's parents hosted a reception at the Rochester Elks Lodge following the ceremony. They were assisted by Dan and Janie Beer.

The bridegroom's parents hosted the rehearsal dinner at Foxy's of Troy Restaurant.

The newlyweds enjoyed a trip to Hawaii and are now at home in Rochester, where the bridegroom is a sales representative for the Deck & Home Building Company and the bride teaches sixth grade English at the Van Hoosen Middle School. They are both graduates of Central Michigan University. (Photography by Tom Thompson).

Seibert - Poston

Michelle Lee Seibert and Terry Wayne Poston were married Saturday, September 1, at the Charlevoix United Methodist Church. Pastor David Yingling of the Birchwood United Methodist Church in Battle Creek, formerly of the Charlevoix church, officiated at the double ring ceremony.

For the occasion, the altar was decorated with ivory and rust silk lilies and ivory baby chrysanthemums. There was a single candle in each floral arrangement and a unity candle graced the middle of the altar. The pews were decorated with ivory bows and ivory and peacock blue ribbon streamers.

The bride is the daughter of Richard and Judy Seibert of Charlevoix, and the bridegroom is the son of W. C. and Merle Poston of Palestine, Texas.

The bride's father and mother gave her in marriage. She wore an ivory satin floor-length gown with a cathedral-length train. The V-neck princess style bodice featured panels of ivory Alencon lace. The neck and hem were also applied with lace and an applied face insert adorned the center of the train. The fingertip illusion veil was attached to a wreath of ivory pearl sprays and ivory lilies. The dress and veil were made by the bride's mother.

The bride's cascade bouquet was made of ivory and rust silk lilies, baby chrysanthemums, and English ivy. Ivory ribbons and pearls accented the bouquet. Linda DeGrow and the bride's mother made the flowers.

Trina Wiser Browe served as matron of honor, and Brenda Kiefer, cousin of the bride, served as maid of honor. The bride's sisters, Jennifer, Karry, and Jessica, were junior bridesmaids. The attendants wore Ivory lace tunics were worn over the dresses, which were also made by the bride's mother. The attendants carried bouquets of ivory and rust silk lilies and baby chrysanthemums, accented with peacock blue ribbons and pearls.

Frank Olney of the U. S. Coast Guard Rescue Station in Charlevoix served as best man. Coast Guardsman Rich Elam and Coast Guardsman Billy Plunk were ushers as was Len Wallace of Charlevoix.

Music for the ceremony was provided by Trina Wiser Browe, who sang the "Wedding Song," and Randy and Robin Mauer, who sang "Household of Faith." Robin Mauer also played traditional organ wedding music.

Following the ceremony, the bride's parents hosted an ice cream social reception in the Fellowship Hall of the church. The cake was baked by Jill Washburn and served by Cheryl Yingling and Judy Tripplehorn. The ice cream was served by Ida Nail and Valerie Kimble.

A second reception was given in Wisconsin by the bride's parents for their relatives and friends there, and still another reception was given in Texas by the bridegroom's parents.

The newlyweds are now at home in Charlevoix following a wedding trip to Wisconsin, Hot Springs, and Texas. The bridegroom is stationed at the Coast Guard Rescue Station in Charlevoix, and the bride is employed as a secretary-receptionist by the Beaver Island Boat Company.

Local song captures history

"November Bells," a song written by local songwriter Kurt Puffpaff recently has received attention on several fronts. The song centers around the Nov. 10, 1975 sinking of the Edmund Fitzgerald. It contains recorded radio messages from the night of the sinking.

Candace Eaton, executive director of the Little Traverse Historical Museum, will be using the song in conjunction with a presentation she is giving at the Michigan Historical Conference in November. Eaton said she will use the song as an example of how creative avenues can be used in recording history.

Puffpaff also entered the song in a Music City Song Festival contest in Nashville, Tennessee. He recently received word that "November Bells" and another of his songs, title "It Could Be You" placed among the top 10 percent of entries in the contest. Radio station WLTO has agreed to include "November Bells" on its play list beginning Oct. 1. Puffpaff has also been talking to other area radio stations about getting the song played.

Puffpaff has recorded and distributed two cassette tapes of his songs, and is working on a third. "November Bells" will be included on the third tape which he hopes to release in early 1991.

CHURCH

Area synagogue gets new rabbi

After 94 years of continuous existence and services in Petoskey, Temple B'Nai Israel has reached a milestone in its history. Rabbi Robert Shafraan has accepted the position of resident Rabbi and will be joining the congregation with his first service on Friday, September 27th, at Temple B'Nai Israel.

After graduating from the Hebrew Union College, Cincinnati, in 1980, Rabbi Shafraan practiced in Winston, N.C. For the past two years he has been in Jackson, Miss., serving as Rabbi in Temple Beth Israel and also the Jackson Prison. Instead of accepting a renewal of his contracts there, he has taken the initiative of becoming a part-time Rabbi in Petoskey so that he can pursue some of his other interests.

Rabbi Shafraan comes to Petoskey with excellent recommendations from his former pulpits. He has been creative and inspiring in his Shabbat services. He has led a successful Sunday School, working with parents and drawing in children from surrounding communities. He has related well to those with mixed marriages, inspiring them and drawing them into the Temple family. He has a strong musical background and considers music a vital part of religious services.

Rabbi Shafraan will be celebrating all the Jewish holidays with Temple B'Nai Israel and will give monthly Shabbat (Sabbath) services and bi-weekly children's classes during the school year. He will be providing weekly Shabbat services during the summer. He will also be available to provide other appropriate Rabbinate services for life-cycle events.

Temple B'Nai Israel is fortunate to have attracted a Rabbi who fulfills the needs of its members, and he considers himself fortunate to be able to become a part of the warm Temple family and be able to live among the natural beauty of northern Michigan.

Prior to Rabbi Shafraan's arrival here, Temple B'Nai Israel has been serviced through the years each summer and through the High Holy Days by very capable student rabbis from the Hebrew Union College, Cincinnati.

Yom Kippur services scheduled

This Friday evening, Sept. 28, marks the beginning of one of the holiest days in Jewish religion—Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement.

Temple B'Nai Israel in Petoskey will host Yom Kippur services at 8 p.m. Friday, Sept. 28 and 10 a.m. Saturday, Sept. 29. Children's service will take place at noon, afternoon service at 3 p.m., and Memorial Service at 4 p.m.

Rabbi Robert Shafraan will conduct the services.

Ellsworth schools hire new supt.

The Ellsworth Community Schools board of education has selected Rick Diebold as the district's new school superintendent. Diebold who is currently principal of Vanderbilt Area Schools in Vanderbilt, Michigan, near Gaylord, has been named to succeed former superintendent Dale McCarty who recently left Ellsworth to become superintendent for the Springport Schools near Jackson.

Diebold has been principal at Vanderbilt nearly five years, and was principal at Cheboygan Catholic Schools prior to that. Diebold was an Industrial Arts and Social Studies teacher at Ellsworth High School from 1981 until 1986.

Diebold holds a bachelors degree in secondary education from Northern Michigan University and a masters degree in Educational Administration from Central Michigan University. He is currently working on an Educational Specialists degree in Educational Administration at Central.

Diebold has been a resident of northern Michigan since 1969. He and his wife Jenny have two children, Ricky age 5 and Karla age 2.

"I am really looking forward to the opportunity to return to Ellsworth as superintendent. Having been there for five years as a teacher I am aware of the strengths of the district and I am aware of some areas that will need our attention.

"While I was a teacher at Ellsworth I was impressed with the community support for the school and with the genuine interest in kids by the staff and faculty. These are the two big reasons I was interested in returning."

Diebold sees the process of implementing new state legislation in Public Act #25 dealing with process for school improvement as one of the district's primary efforts. Public Act #25 focuses on implementing a procedure for identifying needs of the district and then establishing a plan of action to remedy these concerns, and a method to evaluate whether these goals have been accomplished. It also includes establishing a focused mission statement, developing an approved curriculum, and gaining school accreditation.

"The several facets of Public Act #25 are all aimed at making schools better. One of the benefits of the Act is that it promotes 'ownership' in the school program since not only school officials are involved in the process but parents, community members, teachers, other employees and even students share ideas and solutions for improving the schools."

Diebold will assume the superintendency on October 1, 1990.

Dennis E. Thael

Mr. Thael was born Nov. 3, 1950, in Mount Clemens, the son of Albert and Mary (Duvall) Thael.

He is survived by his wife, Norma LaRosa of Bay Shore; two daughters, Mrs. Marco (Tina) Yamun of Petoskey and Maria Thael of New Haven; two stepsons, Tony LaRosa of Bay Shore and Chris LaRosa of Charlevoix; two stepdaughters, Kimberly Ross of Novi and Marcella Strickland of Charlevoix.

BEACONS

by JAN BOSS
 Community Reformed Church

I rolled out of bed to the sound of rain drops coming down hard and steady. Fall is here and the sound of the rain and reel of the cool air made it very real to me today. It was a sweater day. I hauled out the knee-high socks but decided that long underwear was a little too much. This is going to be a day where I know, no matter how hard I try I will be cold. Sure enough the air was cold, the car was cold, the office was cold, the hallway was cold, everything was cold. But what I noticed the most was the fact the I WAS COLD! Nothing good could happen on a day when I WAS COLD! I just knew it wouldn't be a great day. In fact when the first good thing happened I didn't even recognize it as good. The second thing seemed nice, but I WAS COLD. Finally I got a phone call from a friend, "just wanting to say hi" and "wasn't the weather wonderful, it makes you feel comfortable, and isn't it great to life in a place where you can see the seasons change."

I said, "NO, I AM COLD. I still want warm weather."

I had let the weather dictate what kind of mood I would be in and even when good things came by way I refused to see them.

God created us in his image. We are the only living creatures who have reason - the ability to change situations just by the way we look at them. Here we are with so much potential, so many abilities, so much going for us and we react to our world by letting the weather dictate how we feel.

Each day should be as Philippians 4:8 says, "Finally, whatever is true, whatever is honorable, whatever is just, whatever is pure, whatever is lively, whatever is gracious, if there is any excellence, if there is anything worthy of praise, think about these things." How we view the day is up to us. We get to decide each day how we are going to feel and act. If we fill our minds with only the good, just think about how much joy and live we can spread around.

High winds appeal to local sail racers

Yachting Notes

Wind, glorious wind. Sorry fisherman and water skiers, but it was our turn last Wednesday. A beautiful northwest wind came up around 4 o'clock and stayed with us throughout the race.

So much happens in race like this. In pre-start maneuvering, skippers start with mind games, like looking around and seeing what other boats have up for sail combinations. Some skippers will keep their head sails on the deck until the last possible moment, just so the competition doesn't see their choice until the race has almost started and its too late to change sails. Some crews rely on visual cues such as wind and wave conditions to make these decisions, while other have wind speed and direction gauges. These skippers have a chart made up that tells them what sail combination to use for certain wind and wave conditions. Some of these boats even have instruments that will tell them what heading to take after the next mark, what the wind direction will be and what the wind strength will be when they get there. This sure gives a crew a big head start in the decision making process for sail combinations.

During the first leg, some boats headed to shore to cut down on the wind while others stayed out in the lake where the wind was stronger. At the first mark, up went the spinnakers and the fun began. It was a close reach and when a gust would come along, boats have a tendency to round up which happened many times.

At the next mark, which was the jibe mark, action became real exciting and marked the turning point for many a boat and crew. You have to get the spinnaker from one side of the boat to the other without it collapsing or losing boats' speed. How hard can that be right? Well, it was exciting to watch, and believe me, everyone watched the lead boats to see what kind of problems may be awaiting. Just a few of the different dilemmas that await the crew are: shackle stuck in the end of the pole, sail backwinds into and around head stay, spinnaker flies up and foredeck person cannot get to new guy (line tied to a corner of the spinnaker), shackle opens up, foredeck person falls over board from bouncing deck, plus other boats. One boat lost the shackle to the spinnaker and the spinnaker was left flying like a flag from the top of the mast. Another boat looked as if she was going on the beach at two mile point before getting her chute down, while another straightened out two tack hooks (they hold the headsail down at the bottom).

Most skippers sail with extra caution in this kind of wind because of the damage that could result from a collision, but there were a couple of skippers that forgot about the basic port starboard rule, lucky for them most crews were sailing heads up!

Half of the fall series is now over, only three more races in 1990.

Jam fleet: Bald Eagle, Canusa, Hot Mustard, Sunrise, Maureen, Cheemaun.

C-fleet: (by three seconds) Newsense over Hussy followed by Sunkist, Bandit, MIP, Allina-Y, Con-Faston, Sizzle.

B-fleet: Cabaret, Nice Going, Mielke, Blasen, Tireless, M-Joy, Sandpiper, Lost, Vermonter, Foxy Lady, Original Sin, Cygnus.

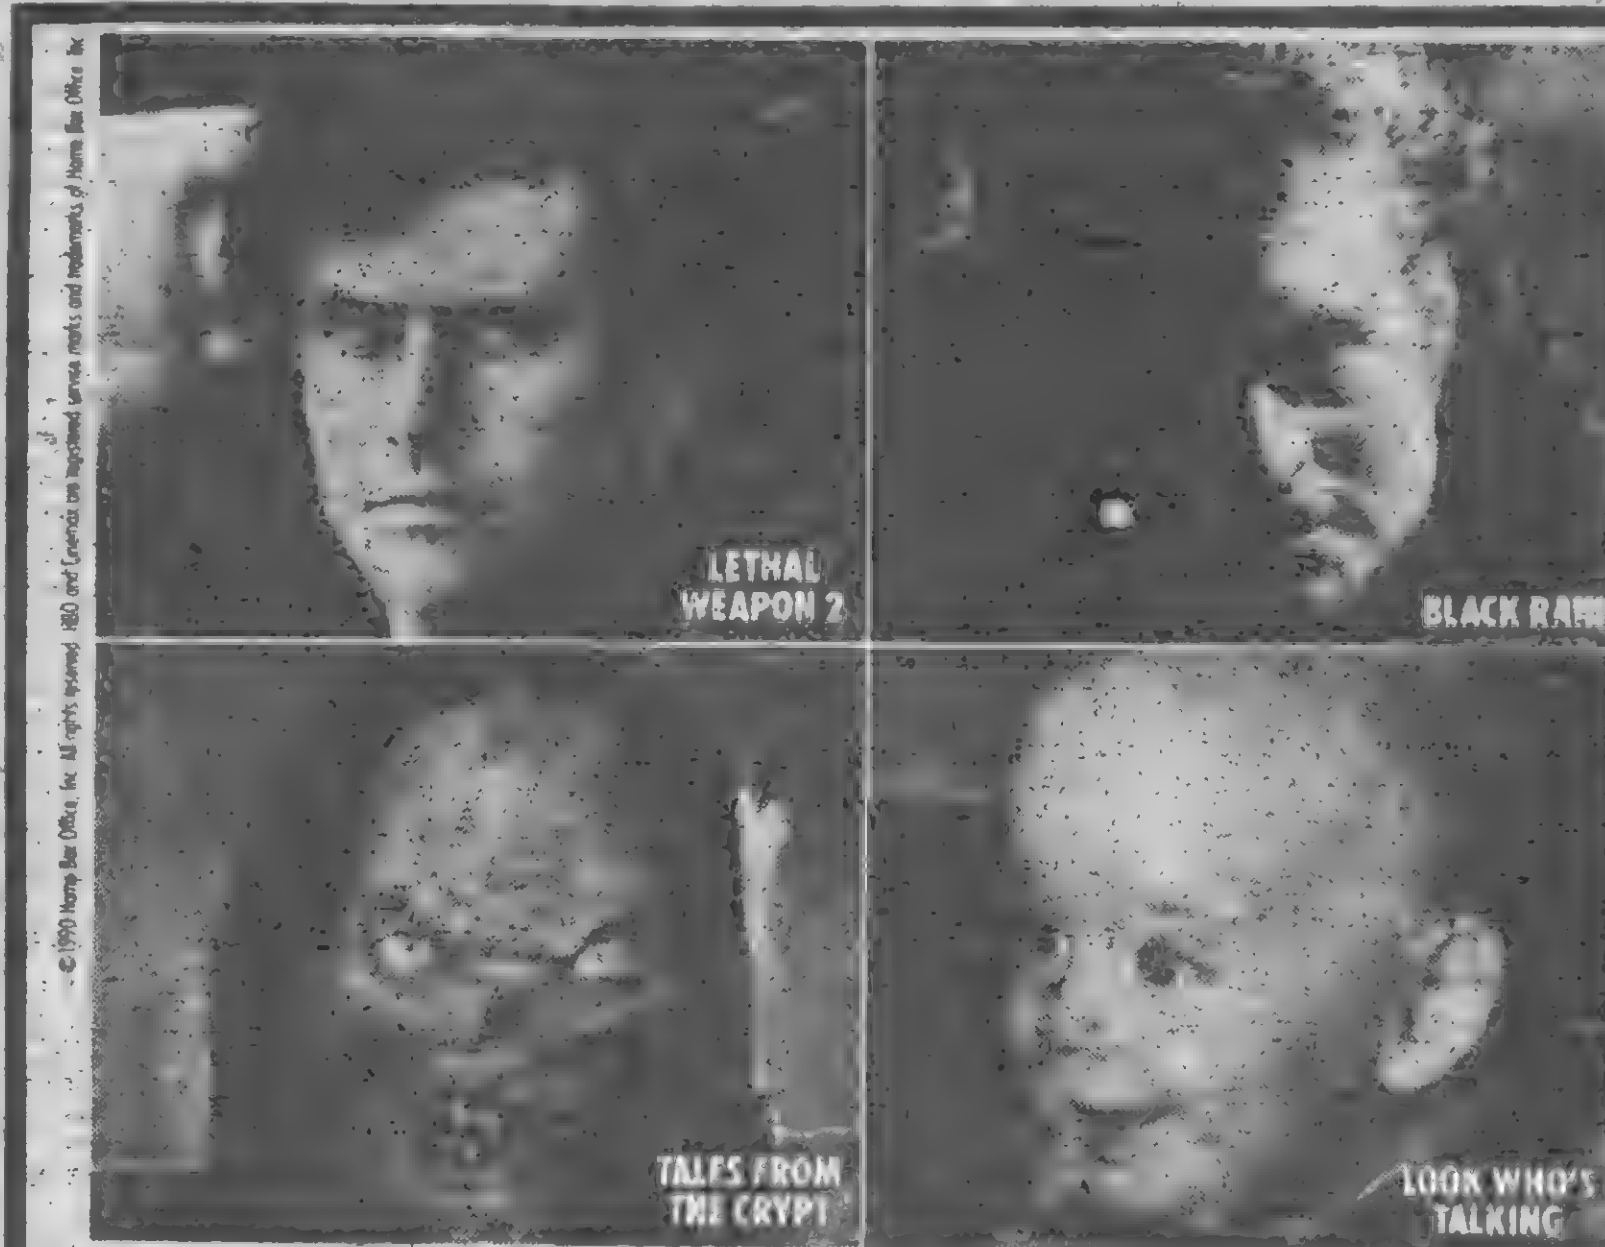

A-fleet: Apprentice, Mint, Jullip, Humbinder, Gotcha, Pygmalion, Flash.

Warm food is available after the races. The club will be closed on Fridays until next spring. Support your local schools sports programs.

Girls win in overtime

Charlevoix's girls' basketball team won an overtime nailbiter against Mancelona last Thursday. The 75-72 win raised the Rayders' record to 2-4 on the year. It was their first home victory since the '88-'89 season.

Charlevoix and Mancelona both have young teams. Charlevoix has only three upperclassmen and Mancelona is led by two sophomores.

The game saw-sawed back and forth. Mancelona led 13-11 after the first quarter. Charlevoix led 28-24 at the half. Mancelona led 44-42 after the third quarter. Regulation play ended at 68-68.

Both teams squandered opportunities to win in regulation play.

Charlevoix had the ball with less than 30 seconds. Contrary to the pleas of coach Toni Felter, rather than holding the ball for one last shot, the Rayders launched an errant shot with 12 seconds left.

The shot gave Mancelona the ball with enough time left to do some damage. But Mancelona turned the ball over to the Rayders with four seconds left. Charlevoix inbounded the ball, but rather than taking a shot, dribbled out the clock.

In overtime the Rayders quickly established a lead. With her team leading by more than two baskets and less than a minute left to play, Felter placed a moratorium on shooting. She could be heard during a time out telling her players, "Now, you got it? Nobody shoots!"

Gina Webster led the Rayders with 27 points. Webster has excellent quickness to go with her height. She beat the opposition to rebounds and utilized a variety of fakes to free herself for shots at the offensive end. Webster also helped the Rayders break Mancelona's full court press.

Mary Jane Grunch had 17 points for the Rayders, including three three-point rainbows. Grunch controlled the Rayder offense from the point guard position.

Jodi Allison, Charlevoix's

sophomore center, has started to assert herself and become a force beneath the basket for the Rayders. Allison had 15 points in addition to rebounding well and intimidating Mancelona shooters.

Heather Radle gave the Rayders a boost off the bench. Radle has been a steady defender all season, but sometimes has played out of control on offense. Against Mancelona, she played her normal strong game defensively and maintained her poise offensively to the point where she was a stabilizing influence.

When Allison, Webster and Marianne Pfister, three of Charlevoix's tallest players, fouled out, Tammy Holm was pressed into front-court service. Despite being matched up against taller players, she held her own and contributed to preserving the win.

Charlevoix's junior varsity also won, 53-37.

Charlevoix hosts Petoskey Sept. 27.

After faking a Mancelona defender, Gina Webster drives past an empty pair of hoops on the way to scoring two of her 27 points.

Golfers take third place

Charlevoix's golf team finished third in the Class C-D division of the Alpena Invitational Friday.

Houghton Lake won the division with a score of 356, followed by Roscommon at 368 and Charlevoix at 371.

Luke LaBlance led the Rayders with an 83 with Wayne

Joy shot 90, Dan Boss 96, Cory Crain 102 and Doug Sineway 103.

The Rayders will host Boyne City and Harbor Springs Oct. 3.

Rayders rally to win

What looked like it might be a calm outing turned into a bit of an adventure, but Charlevoix pulled out a 26-22 win over Elk Rapids Friday night.

Charlevoix led 19-7 at half-time, but Elk Rapids rose up in the second half and took a 22-19 lead before the Rayders came back to score the winning touchdown in the fourth quarter.

Eric McElroy scored Charlevoix's first touchdown on a 15 yard run in the first quarter. Brian Coolman picked up the Rayders' second touchdown later in the quarter on a 5-yard run. The extra point attempt failed and Charlevoix led 13-0 entering the second quarter.

Elk Rapids scored on a 10-yard pass to narrow the lead to six. Charlevoix reestablished the 12 point lead with a 10-yard touchdown pass of their own from Dan Terryberry to Ken Olinger.

But in the second half, Elk Rapids scored two unanswered touchdowns to take the lead. The Elk Rapids backs ran hard and Rayder defenders missed tackles. Rayder coach Roger Gowell juggled the defensive line up several times in an attempt to come up with the right combination.

After Elk Rapids took the lead, Charlevoix resurrected themselves and marched 68 yards with McElroy scoring the winning touchdown. The Rayder defense then held to preserve the win.

Coolman led the Rayder running attack with 83 yards on nine carries. B.J. VanLoe had 70 yards in eight carries and showed some exceptional speed returning kicks. Terryberry was five of 11 passing for 132 yards. Defensively, Coolman had a dozen tackles and a fumble recovery. Jason Parrish had seven tackles, including a quarterback sack, and intercepted a pass. Robert Scholey had nine tackles.

McElroy eight, Scott Kehrer and Todd Prevo six apiece.

Charlevoix is now 3-1 on the season, 3-0 in league play and will play at Traverse City-St. Francis Sept. 28.

Soccer team wins twice, 3-1 and 7-1

Charlevoix's soccer team won two games last week, beating Petoskey's junior varsity team 3-1 Thursday and the Sault Ste. Marie club 7-1 Friday.

Sam Bingham, Brandon Jess and Mike Dobulis scored in the Petoskey game, which was played at Charlevoix Township's Shanahan Field. Bingham also had two assists while Matt Harbison, Jake Porath and Seth Arnold each had one.

Rayder coach Tom Sikavitsas said both teams played well, but at times the Rayders were not aggressive enough in going to the ball. "When we did get the ball, we controlled it well," Sikavitsas noted.

Sikavitsas said Jess and Bingham applied strong offensive pressure while Arnold, Dobulis and Porath held the midfield and Brian Darrah, Jay Livingston and Paul Cunningham anchored the back line.

Charlevoix started slowly against Sault Ste. Marie. They Rayders didn't score until 14 minutes were gone in the first half and Jess hit Bingham with a perfect crossing pass. At half-time, Charlevoix led 2-1.

At the start of the second half, Charlevoix broke open the game on a fast break goal set up by Arnold and Dobulis with Jess passing to Bingham who deposited the ball in the net.

Sikavitsas said Jess and Bingham applied constant pressure. Bingham scored four goals and Jess three. Each scored two goals following up blocked shots.

Jess and Dobulis each had two assists while Darrah, Arnold, Bingham and Harbison each had one.

Dobulis and Arnold played strong at midfield, while Cunningham and Livingston held down the back corners. Sikavitsas said Darrah played an amazing game at sweeper, foiling several Sault attacks. Thanks to strong play in front of him, Rayder goalie Jaimie Ruiperez faced very few shots.

This Thursday, Charlevoix will play at Harbor Springs.

Cross Country team continues winning

Sure, Matt Smith could have run with the big kids, but since the Petoskey Invitational cross country meet is divided by grades, he had to go outrun some kids his own age. Smith, a sophomore, won the freshman-sophomore race in a time of 17:50 which would have placed him third in the junior-senior race.

Not to fear, even without

Smith, Charlevoix won the meet and took three of the top four places in the junior-senior race. Junior Mike Sevenski placed second in the race with a time of 17:45. Senior Paul Wakulat placed third at 18:21, just ahead of junior Chris Meier who finished in 18:22. Matt Stargardt also finished in the top 10 with an eighth place finish and a time of 18:55.

Charlevoix's boys won the meet with 38 team points. Benzie Central finished a distant second with 83.

Charlevoix's girls' team placed second with 75 points, three points behind Elk Rapids. Julie Bush was the top Rayder finisher, placing sixth with a time of 22:52. East Jordan's Holly Johnson won the race with a time of 21:23. Else Conlan also ran a strong race for the Rayders, finishing 12th with a time of 24:30.

The invitational also featured a short course for middle school runners. Eric Hess, Mike Bush, Travis Wood, Tim Terry, Chris LeButt, Robert Sineway, Jess Wood, James Conlan, Ian Powell, Rachel Newcomb and Duffy Stewart ran for Charlevoix.

DAVE NOVOTNY for MAYOR

RESPONSIBLE LEADERSHIP

Our elected officials must rise above the personality clashes which have disrupted City Hall. Council should foster a team approach with city staff and city boards to define and pursue common goals. City government may then, as a whole, act productively and consistently in the best interest of Charlevoix.

Big Rock shuts down for maintenance

Consumers Power Company's Big Rock Point nuclear plant has been taken out of service for a scheduled refueling and maintenance outage. Operators began shutting down the reactor at 10:17 p.m., Friday, September 21. The generator was disconnected from the Consumers Power electric grid at 11:42 p.m. The plant had operated almost without interruption since its last refueling was completed in August 1989.

During the outage, 20 of the plant's fuel bundles will be replaced and maintenance activities involving the generator and other components will be completed. Approximately 60 contractors and company support personnel are on site to assist with the work.

Owned and operated by Consumers Power Company,

Big Rock Point is capable of producing 67 megawatts of electricity, enough to serve a community of 50,000 people.

than $20,000 annually. In addition, he supports raising the Homestead Property Tax credit from $1,200 to $2,400 and then indexing it to inflation.
McManus isn't emphasizing any educational proposals which don't involve funding changes. He said he supports allowing parents to choose between schools, but doesn't feel that will be a significant issue in northern Michigan due to the distance between schools.

He said he hasn't really taken any position on teacher tenure. He said there are two sides to that coin; lifetime jobs for teachers on one side and protection from administrative vindictiveness on the other. McManus said he's not proposing any changes in the system at this time.
McManus said he favors testing programs to make sure students are making adequate progress and also would like to keep students in school until they're 18 or graduate. He said there should be alternative programs for students who are disruptive in a regular class room setting.

On environmental issues, McManus said that although he favors the philosophy of having polluters pay to clean up pollution, legislation has to consider how to determine who did the polluting. He said it also isn't appropriate to give the Department of Natural Resources free reign access to private property.

McManus said he is a strong believer in the rights of private property owners. He said growth and development need to be planned and managed, but the rights of property owners to do what they want with their property also must be considered. He said he's interested in the conservancy movement because it means there is some thought and consideration given to what needs to be preserved and funding for that preservation.

McManus said that in general, he believes less government is better government. He said legislation should be written in specific terms, leaving less room for interpretation by bureaucrats.

City considers lake ordinance

The possibility of adopting a city charter amendment to regulate the use of lakes and streams within the city is being discussed by city officials. City council members discussed the matter Monday evening and will take up the issue again at a work session to be scheduled with the planning commission and city attorney.

At the behest of the planning commission, the council had city attorney Jim Young draft a sample amendment. Young presented the amendment and related information at Monday evening's council meeting.

The draft amendment reads, "The Council shall have the power to regulate by ordinance the use of inland lakes, streams and other waters, including the submerged bottom lands of these water courses, within the city boundaries, subject to any limitations imposed by law."

The stipulation, "subject to any limitations imposed by law" is important, Young explained, because the city may run into one or more of at least three "road blocks" if they adopt such a charter amendment.

Young said legal questions may be raised questioning whether state zoning enabling legislation gives the city the power to adopt an ordinance regulating waterways. The state Inland Lakes and Streams Act may preempt authority over waterways. The third "road block" is that the state legislators are discussing waterway regulation and future state legislation resulting from that discussion may affect any ordinance Charlevoix adopted.

A charter amendment would have to be approved by city voters. The next regularly scheduled general election would be next August or November. One of the things council members will discuss with the planning commission is whether or not the matter is

School joins suit against state

by WENDI WRIGHT

At its regular meeting Monday night, the Charlevoix Board of Education unanimously passed a resolution to enter into a class action suit with 40 other schools against the State of Michigan. The suit is being filed in an attempt to obtain a preliminary injunction which would prevent the state from recapturing FICA taxes from the schools.

In the past, schools were not required as an employer to pay Social Security taxes (FICA) for its employees. This year, however, the state may be allowed to recapture this money, which, according to Rich Kelly, school business manager, could total as much as $300,000.

"We feel it's time to take a stand with some other school districts to see if this can't be stopped," he said. Kelly added that the main reason for filing the suit now is that next year the money involved could be significantly higher, and the state may decide to try to recapture retirement fund money.

Max Novak, board president, echoed this view. "We have to fight back legally now," he said. "To keep us in line with what we feel we should be receiving financially."

According to Kelly, the fees for filing the suit will total about $65,000, which will be split among the 40 schools involved. Each school will pay approximately $1600.

of such urgency to merit the expense of a special election. Young outlined several steps which must be taken for the amendment to be enacted. The first step would be for the council to formulate and propose an amendment and election date. Prior to the election, the proposed amendment would be forwarded to the state Attorney General's office for an opinion. Young said it might at least be worth the city's trouble to go that far into the process to get the Attorney General's opinion.

WE HAVE A TINY FEMALE HUMMINGBIRD WHOSE CALENDAR SEEMS TO HAVE BEEN MISPLACED. SHE IS STILL VISITING THE LAST OF THE TRUMPET VINE FLOWERS SEVERAL TIMES A DAY. SHE ALMOST Buries herself in the blossom while collecting nectar and then takes a brief rest, perched on an adjoining blossom, before she continues her search for food. Hummingbirds are absolute marvels of design. They are the smallest of all birds and yet they migrate to the Gulf of Mexico flying 500 miles non-stop. I certainly hope this one makes the trip before it gets any colder. Sept 15 is usually the last day for their stay around here.

REASONABLE TO ME

L. SCOTT SWANSON

Where'd you hide it?

For an instant, I considered purchasing a thousand little padlocks, one for every cabinet and dresser drawer in the house.

I would purchase combination locks, locks requiring a four-digit code to open. I would know the first two digits. My wife would know the second two. It would work like a safety deposit box. Anytime either of us went to put something away in a cabinet or drawer, the other would have to be present. That way we would both know where everything in the house is kept.

Why is this necessary? Because women "hide stuff." Oh, they'll deny it, because the truth hurts. But they "hide stuff."

According to women, they don't "hide stuff." According to them, they "clean" and "put things away." But you ask any man who's ever lived with a woman and he will verify what I'm saying. Women "hide stuff." Terms like "clean" and "put things away" are just female code words thrown in to confound men.

Sunday afternoon, my wife and baby were taking naps and I was watching the Lions snatch another defeat from the jaws of victory. During halftime, I decided to make use of the break and do a bit of paperwork. While working on a project, I came to a point where I wanted to glue two little pieces of paper onto a large piece of paper.

We have a little glue stick thing in our house. I know this to be true. I have seen it with my own eyes. I began searching for it.

I looked in all the obvious places: under the papers in the little basket on the file cabinet (I could have sworn it was there); beneath the pile of papers on the computer table (Still not finding what I was looking for, I could have just sworn); up on the shelf in the living room (No, not there); in the kitchen pantry (Fat chance, but by this time I was playing long shots).

The more I looked, the madder I became. I suspected that my wife had hidden this glue stick. If I'd been sure that she was the culprit, I would have stomped into the bedroom, woke her from her nap and demanded to know, "Where's the glue stick?"

The only thing keeping me from doing that was the possibility, the slim possibility, that I might have been the one who put the glue stick somewhere. There's nothing worse than being both the culprit and the victim.

After a few minutes of searching, I gave up and went back to the football game.

Somewhere during the fourth quarter my two sleeping beauties awoke and ventured into the living room.

"Where'd you hide the glue stick?" I asked.

It seemed like a perfectly reasonable question to me, but it seemed to perplex my wife. She thought it over for a few seconds and finally said, "I think it's in that little cabinet in the kitchen."

I grew perplexed. And why not? It was my turn.

"What's it doing in there?"

"I was cleaning and gathered up the glue stick and the scissors and all of the office supply type stuff and put them away."

There were those terms, "cleaning" and "putting things away." I cringed.

I tell ya. If men ran the world, there wouldn't be any of this "cleaning" and "putting things away." Stuff would be left out on the floor and in piles on tables and chairs—the way nature intended. It'd be a cluttered world. You'd have to watch your step and be careful where you sat down, but you could find things.

Choosing to think

Just a smidgeon on politics—again.

A member of the family who happens to be affiliated with education received a telephone call the other night.

It was from a staff worker of one of our candidates for public office. The worker wanted to know if our family member would be interested in donating some time toward Mr. Candidate's election campaign, since Mr. Candidate had been endorsed by the Michigan Education Association (MEA).

The broad assumption apparently is that since our family member, who belongs to MEA as a condition of employment, automatically supports some guy who has secured the backing of the MEA governing board.

I have heard since that other teachers and retired teachers living in Charlevoix have been approached with the same offer.

You'd think the MEA would give its members—all educated people—credit for independent thought.

The deeper we get into this election, the more I favor a box on the ballot that reads: "None of the above."

Furthermore, I am continually turned off by television ads that do nothing more than attack the opposition.

I, for one, would like to hear some positive things about what Mr. Candidate—or Ms. Candidate—will do once elected. I don't want to hear what the opposition is likely to do because it is all conjecture, every word of it.

I try to tell myself that all this negativism is not coming from the candidates themselves but from their campaign managers who have absolutely no concept about what the voting public wants and expects. But I know it's not true. The candidates themselves set the tenor of their campaigns, and so far they all have turned me off.

ARE WE HEADED into a hot war in the Middle East? I somehow doubt it. Iraq's president Saddam Hussein certainly must know that he and his army are no match for the rest of the world.

He also knows he is losing barrels of money each day the impasse in the Middle East continues.

I think it's a good sign that Saddam and his henchmen are soft-pedaling talk about a "holy war" against the United States and other infidels in the West. A "holy war" means that rational thought has gone out the window. Witness the mayhem that continues to rip apart Northern Ireland.

Iraq invaded Kuwait over money—oil money. And that's an issue that can be resolved peacefully.

It's certainly nothing worth dying for—or destroying an entire civilization over. And that's certainly what would happen to Iraq if Saddam persists in his foolishness.

Let's give the Bully of Baghdad credit for having a few brains.

IF YOU HAVE a few minutes, stop at the new modular housing development across from Kmart on M-66 and visit one of the odels.

I think you'll be pleased. I'll admit I had some misgivings when I first heard the project described as a "trailer park"—with all that name implies.

But the units now on display are beautiful—with double the space inside than there appears to be from the outside. It must be some kind of optical illusion.

One unit—a single-wide—even has a massive hot tub in a separate boudoir off the master bedroom—something you might expect in Buckingham Palace or the White House, but not in a pre-fabricated home.

Residents will have the use of a club house on the premises with a kitchen, a big meeting room with a fireplace, an exercise room, spa, showers and eventually—a swimming pool.

The development promises to be a handsome addition to Charlevoix the Beautiful.

As the new bandshell is going up, fundraising efforts are also moving closer to completion. Although the project still lacks needed funds, organizers of a fundraising campaign say they will reach their goal.

Bandshell becoming a reality

Money is still being collected to complete the new bandshell currently under construction in East Park.

Bandshell committee cochairman Gary Stutzman says that approximately $10,000 is needed to complete the project. Stutzman and committee treasurer Bob Hoffman both expressed confidence in the committee's ability to raise the additional money.

"Donations have been coming in on a regular basis since the project started," Stutzman said.

"Debate over the bandshell design and problems with bids stalled the project more than once. Construction finally began in mid August. Some people hesitated in contributing to the project until they were sure a new bandshell was going to become a reality. Stutzman said those people are now coming forward.

Cost figures for the new bandshell jumped around several times during the planning process. According to current figures, construction costs for the new bandshell will be between $174,000 and $177,000. That figure includes the cost of 28 cement pilings which had to be poured to support the structure. It also includes savings which resulted from deleting several things, including a sound system, which were incorporated in the original design.

As of May 1990, the bandshell committee needed to raise $25,000 to complete the project. Through cost reduction and fund raising, that figure is now down to $10,000.

An alumni concert which took place in conjunction with the Venetian Festival raised approximately $5,000.

The bandshell is expected to be finished by the end of this fall. If the $10,000 has not been raised by that time, fund raising will continue through the winter and spring. If more than $10,000 is raised, the additional funds will go toward the sound system and other things which were deleted to cut down construction costs.

Keith Mead, the site superintendent for construction, said the visible progress on the bandshell will go in spurts. The contractor for the project is Goodin and Higelow Inc. out of Traverse City.

There will be a dedication concert July 7 at the new bandshell. Former students and colleagues of the late Clarence Odmark will be coming from across the country to participate in the dedication. Stutzman said the dedication will probably end up being a whole day of music capped off by a big evening concert. He said musicians have already been calling to make plans to get to Charlevoix for the concert.

People who would like to make a contribution to the bandshell may contact either Stutzman or Hoffman.

Gieken recalls corner store

by GEOFFREY REYNOLDS

Not many Charlevoixans can recall the days when the corner grocery store and the man behind its counter were the only things to keep you in food, ice and kerosene for your portable stoves. Every neighborhood had one and Mary Margaret Orlowski Gieken was one of the people that could help with your daily grocery needs.

"My grandparents came to Charlevoix from Ohio about 1880 and settled in Hayes Township near the south end of Susan Lake. Their names were Severin Orlowski and Mary O'Leary Orlowski. In Hayes township they built a log cabin and had a little farm until they decided to move into town and try their hands at the wholesale/retail grocery business. This was a partnership between my grandfather and father which started about 1891 and worked out really well throughout the following years. It was called 'S. Orlowski and Son Grocery'. Initially they started the

Are you the picture of health?

Looks can be deceiving, so why not let mammography be the judge? A mammogram is a simple x-ray examination that detects breast lumps long before you or your doctor can feel them. While 80% of breast lumps are normal, all should be checked. If you are a woman over age 40, set a date for a mammogram. October is National Breast Cancer Awareness Month—a good time for you to determine if you are the picture of health.

I want to be reassured by the facts. Please send me free information about breast cancer and today's treatment options.

the money was available, they bought the lot on the corner of Hurlburt and Bridge Street and soon after built the brick building that stands there now. This was where the family business existed until about 1939 or 1940. Then in 1910 my father built the family home, which is still across the street on the opposite corner.

"Some things I remember about working in the store are funny. I will always remember when Coca-Cola was becoming popular. It had just come out and we would have to order great big truckloads of the stuff for the store. We would order it from a distributor in Traverse City and they always showed up in the middle of the night with the Coke and my dad would have to go open up the store for them.

"We also did a real good business in the summer delivering groceries to the private resorts and other summer people. We would get phone orders for groceries and bottled spring water about seven o'clock in the morning and by brother, Louis, and I, or one of my aunts, would deliver the groceries about nine o'clock so that the resorters could fix lunch and dinner later in the day.

"When it became fashionable for women to smoke, my father used to say to me, 'I would much rather run short of cigarettes than would run short of bread in my store.'

"When thinking about my grandfather I always remember him with a short cigar in his mouth, a small dark cap that sat on his white hair and feather duster in his hand, so that he could dust the shelves of groceries and the glass cases full of candy and bread. He would go down one shelf and up the next so he did the whole store. He never was an idle man until the day he retired from the grocery business."

DNR hearing concerns Susan Lake

The public hearing being conducted by the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) this evening (Oct. 3) in the Hayes Township Hall was called by township residents, especially those near Susan Lake, to consider possible future problems with the waters of Susan Lake.

As the land near small inland lakes becomes more inhabited, public bodies are seeking to retain water quality. To do this, they are meeting with the DNR to study controls such as number and size of boats on the lake, docks and moorings, wakes, water skiing, etc.

Rik Lobenz of Vacation Properties, which is developing a part of the Susan Lake shoreline, was instrumental in asking for the DNR meeting. It begins at 7:30 p.m. in the Hayes Township Hall on Old U.S. 31 North and Burgess Road.

Matyes win Blazer in Chamber drawing

The car now belongs to Reinhard and Lilly Matye, whose ticket number 193 was the winner in the Chamber of Commerce drawing last Thursday evening.

The drawing took place aboard the Beaver Island before approximately 150 other ticket holders and their guests. Two other Charlevoix residents were winners in the drawing for cash prizes.

Charles Whitney, with number 87, and Elbert Kaiser, with number 213, each won $250. The $500 cash prize went to Joan Keating of Arlington, Virginia.

Music for the occasion was provided by Chamber member Joe Trojanek and his group, and the hors d'oeuvres were provided by Chamber member Dave Starzyk of the Edgewater Cafe. Yachting Notes

Petoskey, which with a 5-3 record is off to its best start since 1982, moved the ball well offensively. Petoskey players passed the ball quickly around the perimeter and were set to shoot when they received passes. They released their shots before the Rayder defenders reached them. Petoskey also went to the glass aggressively for rebounds.

Agencies propose Grant Street buildings

By Peg Ohle

The area around Garfield Avenue and Grant Street will soon take on a new appearance.

Ever since 1971, when the Sheriff's headquarters and jail were built in an open field purchased by the county, the location has been in a state of change.

Following the Sheriff's headquarters came the county animal shelter, then, on adjoining property, the Pine River Place apartments for senior citizens. Now, two new county buildings are planned for the area.

District Health Department No. 3, which serves Charlevoix, Antrim, Emmet, and Otsego Counties, will construct a new headquarters building on the corner of Garfield and Grant. The 80 by 120-foot building will be built on property deeded by the county to the Health Department with certain use restrictions. The building will house all the services now provided by the Health Department in the County Building Annex on Antrim Street as well as most of the clinic activities now taking place in the East Jordan Health Center.

Actual construction of the Health Department building will be undertaken by the Northern Health Foundation, who will lease it to the Health Department for 15 years with purchase options.

Gerald W. Chase, Health Department administrator, told the Courier the only approval the project now lacks is by the city Planning Commission. He will seek their approval at the commission's Oct. 24 meeting.

The other building planned is a new court house, to be built in the area south of the Sheriff's headquarters, facing Grant Street. The 200 by 117-foot building would house offices and judges' chambers of Circuit, District, and Probate Courts, the prosecuting attorney, a law library, and courtrooms.

If a November millage proposal passes, court house construction would be paid for by monies raised by a 2.5 mill tax levy for the next three years.

The monies would be put into a sinking fund until collections provide enough to start construction. Some of the monies raised by this millage levy would also be used to renovate the existing county building.

A mill is $1 per every $1,000 of state equalized value (SEV). The owner of a $50,000 house ($25,000 SEV) would pay an additional $62.50 each of the next three years to pay for the new court house and renovation of the county building. The proposal will be on the November 5 General Election ballot.

Garden Club plans to meet twice

The Charlevoix Area Garden Club will meet at 1 p.m. Oct. 9 at the Doris Lundieigen home on 305 Burns with Lois Simmons, Joyce Totten and Maggie Wilson co-hosting. The program on composting will be given by Doris Lundieigen.

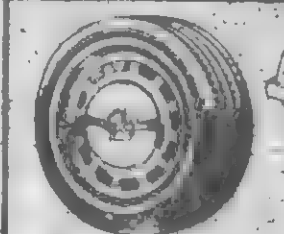

The District 5 Area Garden Club meeting will be held at the Embers in Traverse City Oct. 16. If you plan to attend please contact Garden Club Secretary Nan Vandenberg by Oct. 8 for reservations. Donations tickets are $11 per person. Make checks payable to Elk Rapids Garden Club. Everyone will meet at the Glen's parking lot by 8:30 a.m. where transportation will be arranged.

American Mold retirees share dinner

The Grey Gables was the scene of the 5th annual Retirees Dinner for retired personnel from the American Mold Engineering Corporation. The dinner was attended by fifty-six retired employees and their spouses or dates. The program was chaired by Malcolm McDonald and Leroy Niclo. The committee for the 1991 dinner will be: Teri Jaskerski, Rose Elzinga, Betty Pearsal and Fern Best. All retirees and their dates and spouses are invited and urged to attend the 1991 dinner. If there are any changes in address, please contact one of the above committee with your new address.

Hospital employees post signs in yards

Charlevoix Courier Wednesday, October 3, 1990—PAGE 15

The familiar blue and white "H" hospital directional signs will begin appearing around the area with a slight variation. They will be placed as yard signs at the homes of hospital employees and will say "We Care."

The signs are being distributed by the Michigan Hospital Association during the political campaign period in order to indicate the widespread support in each community for helping our hospitals survive.

"This is a statewide campaign which is meant to awaken elected officials to the importance of maintaining our health care," says Richard Krueger, Charlevoix Area Hospital administrator. "We want to get our elected leaders committed to a healthy future for everyone in Michigan."

The Michigan Hospital Association points to serious concerns that threaten the continuation of quality health care in many communities. Over one million Michiganders are without health insurance. In addition, the state has a high infant mortality rate, a poor medical liability climate, and governmental underfunding to health care providers. The lawn signs will serve as a visible indication of the economic impact the hospital has on the community, also. "We are one of the largest employers in the community," Krueger says, "with an annual payroll of approximately $3.5 million."

Pedestrian lights to be installed

Charlevoix will soon have pedestrian lights advising people that it is best if they "Don't Walk" in front of moving vehicles. The lights will be installed at the intersection of Bridge and Clinton Streets.

City council members approved an agreement Monday evening which will allow the city, state and federal government to share the cost of installing and maintaining the lights.

The lights will cost $15,760 to install. The federal government will pay $14,327 of that cost. The state will pay $717 and the city will pay $716. The city and state will split the cost of maintenance which is expected to be $1,008 per year.

OPINIONS

EDITH

EDITH GILBERT

An enthusiastic German group at Charlevoix's Village Pub added a tiny spark to the international jubilation that took place all over the world in celebration of the unification of Germany. Despite some puzzled glances from a few onlookers at the next tables, TV's Channel 7 reporter recorded the event for the 11 o'clock news last Wednesday.

Vera McKown represented the euphoria felt by local Germans that night. "I never believed it was going to happen. I wish my parents were alive!"

Vera and John McKown bought the Bridge Street Inn two years ago. Former summer visitors, they now feel this is the ideal community to live in. Both were eager to split the high pressure corporate world, where Vera owned her own travel agency and also worked as Ambassador Hotel in Chicago, and more recently hotels in California.

Born in Berlin, Vera spent a bewildering, chaotic childhood during World War II in the former capital. "It was like living through a war movie," recalls Vera with a shudder. She also lived through the air blockade in '48-'49, and she was there visiting her parents when the Russian wall went up overnight in 1961. Therefore, this re-unification of the East and West government on Oct. 3 last week was truly an incredible day for her. Glued to CNN, Vera gleefully phoned relatives on both sides of the wall.

She recounts that last fall, as an American citizen, Vera had no problem going through check-point Charlie, the famous border crossing between East and West Berlin. She was having lunch in East Berlin with her cousin Klaus, an engineer. He was deeply discouraged and asked, "What am I going to do? It's so oppressive here. I want to leave. I can't even go for a ride. The whole city is like an island surrounded by the Russian Zone. We're all hemmed in. There is no hope, no opportunity here." The decision to remain was made for him when the cursed wall came down three days later, after massive peaceful freedom demonstrations in East Berlin.

It's difficult for us to imagine what the wall has meant to Berliners. Picture, if you can, a wall going up in Charlevoix, blocking the bridge. No one on the north side of town would ever be able to see friends or relatives on the south side of town or visa versa. Where one side of town would be ruled by a communist form of government and the other side by a democratic form of government. Where one side of the town would prosper and the other side decay.

First the wall, then the re-unification of Germany. "I never expected to see this happen in my lifetime," I heard several Germans say at the Village Pub as they raised their steins of beer.

Earlier that evening, not beer but two bottles of champagne were popped simultaneously. At exactly 7 p.m., Charlevoix time and midnight Berlin time, Vera and Klaus toasted this momentous event together over the telephone. Together they toasted FREEDOM. "Thankfully, we are all winners!" they both cheered.

Anyone interested in collecting an authentic piece of the Berlin Wall may visit the Art Tree Sales Shop at the McCune Art Center in Petoskey.

REASONABLE TO ME
L. SCOTT SWANSON

"Ppphhh!"

I'm an enlightened parent. I believe that as a father, I should play an active role in the development and education of my child.

Why, just the other evening I taught the baby a skill which I'm sure she'll find invaluable later in life.

We were sitting in the living room, drinking a mixture of ice cream and ginger ale and watching the Red Wings getlobbered. Left to my own devices, I'd never consume junk food and watch sports on TV, but the baby enjoys doing these things so I go along with it just to humor her.

While taking a hit of ginger ale, the baby happened to pucker her lips and exhale. In doing so, she made a noise that went "pppphhh." She also sprayed a little ginger ale around.

She hadn't made that noise before and it seemed to surprise her. She looked at me for a response.

I wasn't sure what to do. I mean how do you respond to a "pppphhh"? So I did what any parent does when faced with an unforeseen situation: I improvised. I looked the kid straight in the eye and went "pppphhh" back at her.

The baby thought this was just as funny as could be. She giggled, then regained her composure and went "pppphhh" again. Once again I returned the volley. And she giggled some more.

So for the next 15 minutes, we sat there matching each other "pppphhh" for "pppphhh." By the time we were through, I had the kid pretty much taught to "pppphhh" on command. Come to think of it, that's currently one of the scant few things this baby does, or doesn't, do on my command.

I can't wait to show the grandparents.

I'll say, "Katrina. Tell

Grandma 'pppphhh.' And then I'll watch the baby giggle as Grandma wipes the specks of baby spit off of her glasses.

The grandparents are all excited because the baby's started walking, but wait until they see this.

Not that I'm deceiving myself about the comparative value and longevity of "pppphhh" versus walking. I'm sure that in the great scheme of life the baby will walk more often and much later into life than she will "pppphhh."

But at this stage of life, both the baby and I get a bigger kick out of her going "pppphhh." Of the two, she's more proficient at "pppphhh."

The baby walks like a drunken sailor. She staggers and sways and progress is slow. But the lack of stability doesn't bother her, because again like a drunken sailor she's just happy to be standing at all.

It took the baby a while to recognize the benefit of walking. She's been coordinated and strong enough to walk for at least two weeks. She would stand in the center of the floor, crouch like a baseball catcher to pick something up, stand again and look around, but she refused to take a step unless she was holding onto something.

When she decided to go somewhere, she would drop to her hands and knees and shift into four-wheel drive. That got her around as fast as she wanted to go. From her standpoint, she saw no reason to learn how to walk.

So walking took a while. "Ppphhh" she learned in no time.

I'm going to have to explain this to my wife when she figures out that I've taught the kid to go "pppphhh."

"Sorry dear. The baby's just like anyone else. You can only teach them what they're willing to learn."

And whole again — at least such of it
As we drive over, past, and around —

CLOCKWISE

BOB CLOCK

We wonder what to do

My big sister, who has lived in Detroit and Detroit suburbs all her life, wonders how her little brother and his family can stand the trauma of life in a small town.

"We have terrible things happen down here," she explained. "But we don't know the people involved. We only read about them in the newspaper."

By contrast, she feels her Charlevoix relatives are personally involved in every tragedy, every accident, and every dastardly deed that happens in town.

"You seem to know all the people involved, who their grandparents are and where they fit into the grand scheme of things," she said.

"I couldn't stand it," she concluded. "It's bad enough reading about it without knowing any of the principals."

She is right, of course. Charlevoixians - and I think the same thing must be true of all small town residents - are more like kin to each other than friends or neighbors. The bad things that happen to one of us hurt us all. The good things make us all feel happy.

But we have not had much to feel happy about since the mysterious disappearance of young Heather Kleiber Aug. 17. Heather's family, friends and law enforcement officers are leaving no stone unturned in their desperate search for her.

The rest of us are on tenterhooks, wanting to help but not knowing which way to turn.

Was Heather's disappearance simply a case of an unhappy teenage girl running away from home - or are there other more sinister considerations - like abduction or bodily harm?

Last week the city was shocked by two additional incidents: an attempted murder and the arrest of four young men on charges of grand larceny. All were members of - or associated with - Heather's peer group.

ALTHOUGH police and sheriff's deputies have stopped short of making any connection between Heather's disappearance and the ensuing incidents, they have to be thinking along those lines. Nothing happens in a vacuum.

In the first instance last week, five young people allegedly plotted to steal "suitcases full of money" from the 71-year-old widow of a former Charlevoix patrolman. The actual assault was carried out by two young men, who bound her with tubes from her oxygen apparatus, smothered her with a towel and left her for dead.

The victim suffers from emphysema and has not been in robust health for some time.

Fortunately, the intruders were spooked when a car pulled into a neighbor's driveway. The young men fled from the widow's house, apparently without finding the alleged hoard of cash. As they ran, the victim revived and called police.

One of the young people who reportedly plotted the robbery was the victim's granddaughter.

Before the week was out, four other young men were arrested and charged with a long string of break-ins and thefts. Police confiscated a quantity of stolen goods from the boys' rooms at a downtown hotel.

Directly or indirectly, these incidents have touched just about every household in town.

THE CONCERNUS on the streets is that these things just do not happen in Charlevoix - a pleasant resort community far removed from the slums, poverty, deprivation and depravity of metropolitan areas.

Assaults and break-ins are big-city type crimes that shouldn't happen in a small town - a place where everybody not only knows everybody else but also knows their kids, their parents and their grandparents.

But something has gone wrong, terribly wrong.

Some of our young people are coming of age without a very good image of themselves; their friends, their families and their fellow townspeople.

Many obviously have never tasted personal success or approval, or they would have more respect for their friends and themselves.

What are we going to do about it?

Alumni work with young players

Alumni of the Charlevoix High School girls basketball program laced up their shoes and went back to the gym Saturday.

Saturday afternoon, high school coach Toni Felter, a dozen alumni players and the high school varsity team conducted a mini camp for 37 middle school players. In the evening, 16 alumni players played a scrimmage game against this year's varsity team.

Charlevoix has only had a high school girls basketball team for fewer than 20 years. Early on, the program was very successful, then went up and down and in recent years has been down.

Now the program appears to be at the beginning of an upswing. Six of the nine players on this year's team are sophomores. Although the team has won only two games, that's two more than they won last year. The high school teams are getting stronger as the season progresses and the middle school program has some exceptional young players.

Basketball is like many other games. The longer you play it, the more little tricks you learn. The alumni players have been willing and able to impart some of their years of knowledge to the middle and high school players.

Basketball coach Toni Felter received a basket of flowers from her former players Saturday evening.

ings officer within 24 hours after apprehension to determine if there is probable cause to believe a crime has been committed and probable cause to believe the person charged may have been involved or have knowledge of the crime.

In Stradiner's case, all three charges were adjourned pending additional investigation.

In Przybylski's case, the attempted murder charge was adjourned while the other two charges were authorized, meaning they will go to the next step before the probate judge.

In Leadabrand's case, all three charges were authorized. Prosecutors have filed a petition to have Leadabrand waived from probate court into the adult (i.e. district and circuit) court system. A waiver hearing is scheduled for Wednesday, Oct. 17.

Prevo has been petitioned into the adult court system and faces preliminary examination in district court on charges of attempted murder, breaking and entering an occupied dwelling and attempted unarmed robbery.

As of Monday, with the exception of the Oct. 17 waiver hearing, specific court dates have not been set in the case.

Prevo is in the Charlevoix County jail. The other three are in secured detention juvenile facilities; one is in Eaton County, the other two are in Oakland County. There are no secured detention juvenile facilities in northern Michigan.

Northern Michigan voters will have an opportunity to learn where candidates for public office stand on environmental and social justice issues at a Candidates' Forum beginning at 7:30 p.m., Thursday, Oct. 11 at the Petoskey High School auditorium.

Six area organizations have teamed up to present the forum. Sponsors include the Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council, Northern NOW, the Growth and Development Forum, Northern Michigan Planned Parenthood, Sierra Club, and the Women's Resource Center. Candidates from both federal and state races, representing the area, will be present.

Participating in the forum will be incumbent Bob Davis, Republican, and his Democratic opponent Marcia Gould, in the U.S. Congressional race; Democratic Tom Weiss and Republican George McManus, running for the State Senate seat vacated by Mitch Irwin; incumbent Democrat Pat Gagliardi and his challenger Republican H. Rae Swanton, running for the 107th State Representative Seat; Democrat Ellen Addington who is vying for the 103rd State Representative Seat held by Ralph Ostling; and Lieutenant Governor candidate, Republican Connie Binsfield.

"We organized this forum because important issues such as the environment, child care, housing, and reproductive choice unusually don't receive much attention during a campaign," said Martha Lancaster of Northern Michigan Planned Parenthood. "The co-sponsoring groups felt it is important that voters know where the candidates stand on these issues."

BEACONS

by REV. BRUCE HAMILTON

With the return of the chilly weather, how many of you have already gone back to lighting woodstoves and fireplaces? Did you ever contemplate the wooden matches that you use to get those fires going?

A match is a pretty fascinating thing to consider. In one neat, compact little package, you are faced with something that has explosive potential. It is there waiting for just the right moment to give its very all. The only thing it needs is something to rub up against it, something to set it off.

Faith is a lot like that match. It really is a neat package to be blessed with. It has virtually unlimited potential. It lies within each and every one of us just waiting for the right moment to change our lives forever. All it needs is for you to rub it up against something. Or maybe I should say Someone.

Jesus said, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." Too many people have the mistaken impression that faith will harrow their options in life. They think it will keep them from enjoying all the "fun" that this world had to offer. The whole point of inviting Jesus into your life is to set off faith's real potential. God is waiting to explode His love and His grace in your life.

There is something fascinating about watching a match burst into flame. There is something discouraging about looking at a match once its energy is gone. Unlike a match, the faith that God wants to ignite in your heart will never burn out. If you truly harness its potential, faith will never leave you looking at life as charred remains.

Faith seeks to light up constantly new and different horizons for you to explore. Faith endeavors to bring up new sources of strength and courage that you didn't even know were there to get you through the tough times. Faith reminds you on even the darkest night that the warmth of heaven's love is only a prayer away.

We will all be concentrating on warming up our homes as the cold winds blow more frequently. Don't forget to warm up your heart. God has placed a tremendous source of potential within you. He's just waiting for you to ask that He set it off.

Cross country teams sweep meet

A Cadillac runner tried to close ground in the home stretch, but Charlevoix runner Mike Sevenski would have none of it. He was running on his home course. He was leading his team to a win. Those people whooping and cheering were his friends. This was his race. That second place runner had thoughts of catching Sevenski? Best, he think again.

Sevenski won the boys Class A, B and large C race in the Ninth Annual Claire Martin Cross Country Invitational with a time of 16:19 for the 5K (3.1 mile) course. He beat the second place finisher by seven seconds.

Charlevoix runners Chris Meier, Matt Smith and Paul Wakulat ran in a cluster finishing sixth, seventh and eighth to seal the win.

Charlevoix won the race with 190 points, nine points ahead of second place Cadillac. Charlevoix is the two-time defending Class C state champion and is ranked number one this year.

Charlevoix's top four runners have run near the front of races all year. The Rayders have been looking for someone to step forward at the fifth spot. Saturday, Matt Stargardt and Zack Pajtas both finished in under 18 minutes.

Charlevoix's girls team also ran well Saturday. Two time all state runner Juli Bush led the Rayder girls to a first place finish in the Class C and D division. Bush finished ninth overall with a time of 21:03.

Elsa Conlan also got in with a time of less than 22 minutes as she finished 20th with a time of 21:59.

The race, which took place on a beautiful autumn morning on the Belvedere Golf Course, drew 412 runners.

This Saturday, Charlevoix will run in the Shepherd Invitational.

Basketball team loses to Rudyard

Those Uper hoopers could shoot. Rudyard scored 72 points in taking a 72-58 win over the Charlevoix girls basketball team last Thursday. Charlevoix stayed close early in the game, but the home team from Rudyard steadily pulled away as the game progressed.

The Rayders trailed 20-16, 37-30 and 59-42 at the quarter marks.

Charlevoix got some solid play from its front court players, Marianne Pfister and Gina Webster each had double-doubles. Pfister scored a dozen points and was all over the glass like a freeway fly on a car windshield as she collected 23 rebounds. Webster finished with 10 points and 17 rebounds.

This Thursday, Charlevoix travels to Boyne City.

DAVE NOVOTNY for MAYOR

RESPONSIBLE LEADERSHIP

Our elected officials must rise above the personality clashes which have disrupted City Hall. Council should foster a team approach with city staff and city boards to define and pursue common goals. City government may then, as a whole, act productively and consistently in the best interest of Charlevoix.

Rayders win homecoming game

Much to the delight of a large homecoming crowd, Charlevoix's football team clobbered Mancelona 41-6 Friday evening.

Charlevoix running backs Scott Campbell and Brian Coolman ran wild and free through the Mancelona defense. Campbell averaged nearly 20 yards per carry, collecting 155 yards on eight carries. Coolman accumulated 107 yards on 10 carries and might have run farther on four occasions, but there was no point in going beyond the end zone.

Quarterback and homecoming king, Dan Terryberry did what he could to make a royal pain of himself to the defensive secondary, completing eight of 15 passes for 107 yards.

For the night, Charlevoix's offense totalled 441 yards.

The defense also played well, allowing only a single touchdown which came late in the first half.

Coolman scored the first touchdown less than two minutes into the game on a one-yard run. Campbell matched that midway through the second quarter.

Late in the second quarter, Coolman had a long touchdown run called back because of a penalty. Just so nobody thought that run was a fluke, on the next play he took a screen pass and went 35 yards for Charlevoix's third touchdown.

Coolman got his third and fourth touchdowns in the third quarter on 10-yard runs.

The final touchdown came in the fourth quarter on a 20-yard pass to Doug Benoit.

Defensively, Campbell has 10 tackles and Luke Porath nine. Todd Prevost collected eight tackles and Jordan Spencer six. Scott Kehler also played a strong game in the middle of the Rayder's defensive line. Chris Pease, a sophomore called up from the junior varsity squad, applied some substantive hits and intercepted a pass.

Charlevoix is now 4-1 in league play and 4-2 overall. This Friday Charlevoix will host Petoskey in a nonleague game.

Golfers place fourth

Charlevoix took fourth among 10 Class C and D teams competing in the Traverse City Invitational this past Friday. Detroit Country Day placed first with 335 points while Charlevoix shot 370.

Cosey Crain led Charlevoix with a 45-42-87. Other Charlevoix scores were: Luke LaBlance, 44-44-88; Wayne Joy, 50-47-97; Doug Sineway, 47-51-98; and Dan Boss, 53-46-99.

Earlier in the week Charlevoix placed second behind St. Ignace in a three-way meet hosted by Petoskey.

In that match, Joy shot 43, LaBlance 44, Sineway and Crain 47 and Boss 49.

Yachting Notes

OK Mother Nature, no more letters! Wow, you sure went overboard with the wind last Wednesday night, wind gust in the forties! Obviously the culprit that upset you did not race Wednesday, we will find the culprit.

There were five boats that came out into the lake but never made it to the starting line and two more that started but didn't finish. One boat had a crew mutiny after being unable to turn the boat into the wind to get the sail up. As we headed out the channel we saw a dingy trying to get out to a mooring without much luck, another boat and all of its crew on one side trying to keep it away from the dock so it could get going, while another was passed coming back into the marina with the crew just shaking their heads. Two other fair weather captains came down to the lake, looked it over, and decided to go and watch from the comfort of Nanny's porch. A couple of boats even saw a small water spout as they were pounding through the waves trying to get to the start line. Oh how I love having some wind!

We had a guest aboard, a power boater, that had never been in a sailboat race let alone one in heavy air, boy, was he in for a treat! The starting line was pretty wide open as most boats were still sorting equipment and crew out as their starting guns went off. It looked like everyone had a little sail up as possible without being bare pole, no sails at all. Keeping your eyes open and weight on the high side was the order of the day. About half way through the first weather leg we took a tremendous knock down, which was witnessed by MI-Joy and she said that our spreader tip was just a foot off the water. Our guest crewman looked like a muppet character with eyes as big as ping pong balls. No one saw it coming so the captain and crew were taken by surprise also. We never got hit by another one all night.

Once we rounded the first mark the small J-Boats just had a ball. They looked like jet boats when a gust would come along and pick them up and shoot them ahead with spray flying from all around the boat. Our shipboard guest is still hanging, literally, in there. I think there were only about five chutes down on the second leg, which was the leg to do it due to the wind direction, but only one kept it up on the third leg. Captain Jack Begrow's Mint Julip. What a sight to see, totally out of control. The wind almost seemed to pick up near the third mark, we guessed it was about a steady 35 mph. If you don't think that is a lot of wind, next time you're in the car stick your hand out the window and see how it feels.

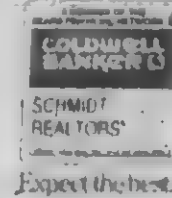

Amazingly, because most people were sailing very conservatively, there didn't seem to be any broken equipment, maybe one torn chute, and no one fell overboard. It sure was a lot different from the week before with no wind.

Waste plan still hung up

By Peg Ohle

After three years in writing and almost two years of consideration by the state Department of Natural Resources (DNR), the Charlevoix County Solid Waste Management Plan has been conditionally approved by the DNR.

The condition of approval has to do with the county indicating how it would determine where to put another landfill in the county if that were to become necessary. The criteria adopted by the county are more stringent than those suggested by the state and are, therefore, not acceptable to the state.

A comparison of the two criteria follows:

Soils: Both the state and county prohibit locating landfills in an area where the soils exhibit wetland characteristics.

Surface waters: The state requires a 100 foot minimum distance from the surface water (lakes). The county requires a 2,000 foot minimum distance from lakes and/or permanent flowing bodies of water (streams) and a 500 foot distance from any water impoundment (pond) and/or intermittent flowing bodies of water (run-off).

Ground waters: The state requires a ten foot minimum distance from the bottom of the refuse to the ground water level. The county requires a minimum distance of 40 feet from an aquifer used for human or animal consumption.

Residential development: The state requires a 300 foot minimum distance from residential development. The county requires a minimum distance of 1,500 feet.

Property boundaries: The state requires a 100 foot minimum distance from adjoining properties. The county requires a minimum distance of 300 feet.

Service roads: The state does not consider proximity to all-weather roads as a criteria. The county requires that a landfill be located adjacent to an all-weather road or be served by a paved, private road which connects directly with an all-weather road.

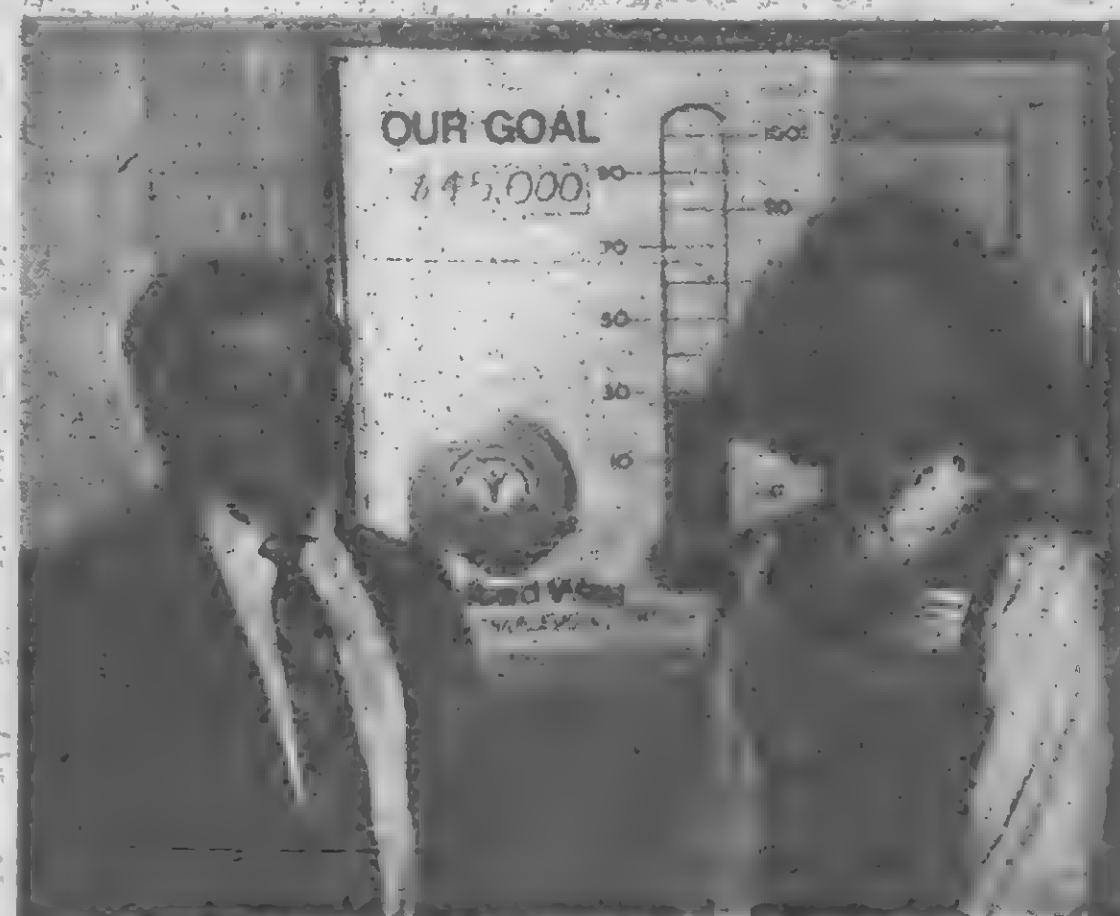

Zoning: The state allows a solid waste management plan to supersede local zoning. The county requires that a landfill must be located in an area zoned for that use and the landfill must meet all regulatory aspects of the zoning.

These are the differences in thinking between the state and the county which are holding up final approval of the county's Solid Waste Management Plan. All other portions of the 66-page document, including sections on waste separation, energy recovery, volume reduction, composting, collection and transportation of waste, recycling, and transfer stations, have been approved by the state.

County Planner Larry Sullivan, who guided the writing of the Solid Waste Management Plan, is awaiting further information from the DNR about how the differences in landfill placement criteria can be resolved.

If the DNR does not approve the plan, that agency could write its own plan for Charlevoix County, in which case the county would have to surrender all its authority for landfill operations and solid waste collections.

Bob Hoffman and Kathy Staton are co-chairs of this year's United Way Drive. This year's goal is $45,000. The drive officially kicked off with a get together at Stafford's Weathervane last week.

Chamber recognizes industry's importance

Manufacturing plays a much greater role in Charlevoix County's economy than most people realize. There are many statistics that verify the integral role of industry contributing to the growth and economic well being of the county.

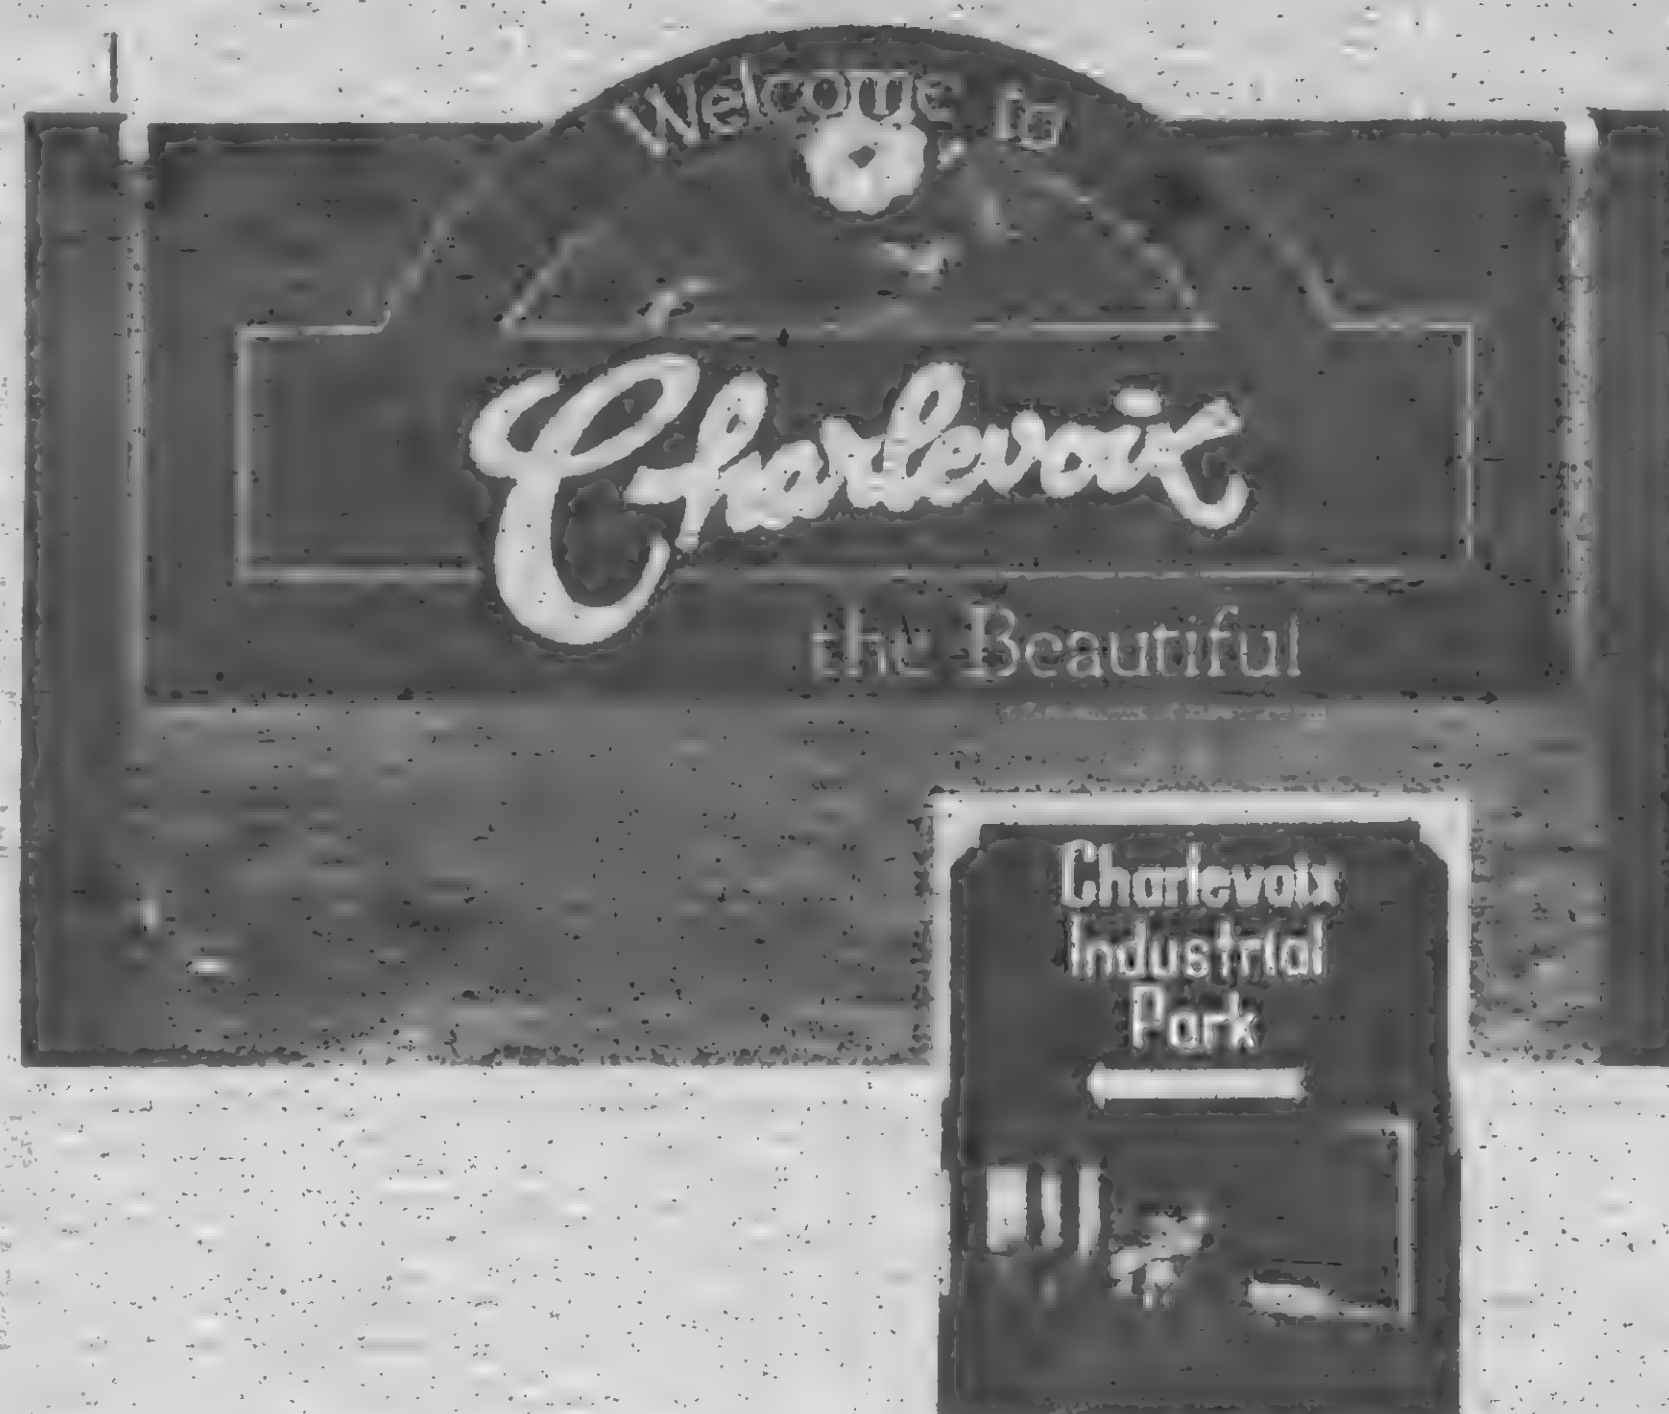

Charlevoix County ranks 17th among state counties for the percentage of tax dollars created by its industrial tax base. Charlevoix County's rate is 8.5 percent compared to Emmet at 1.4 percent and Grand Traverse at 1.9 percent.

Manufacturing jobs in Charlevoix County, according to 1984 statistics, totalled about 2,450 positions or 38 percent of the job base. Emmet County's industrial jobs are about 12 percent of total employment. The state average is 27 percent.

The Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, City of Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township have established a joint committee to study, seek and promote industrial development and expansion in the Charlevoix Area.

Members of the committee and their affiliations are: Gary Probert, Charlevoix mayor; Mike Wiesner, Charlevoix city manager; Jim Haler, Charlevoix Manufacturing Co.; El Kaiser, Medusa Cement Co.; Don Voisin, Charlevoix Agency Inc.; Tom Wieland, farmer and member of Charlevoix County Planning Commission; Walt Hufford, Key Controls; Bob Kern, Kern Realty; Oscar Stroud, Charlevoix Township supervisor; Ralph McKee, former mayor; Dan Patton, Chamber president; Jackie Meritz, Chamber executive director; Roger Strigley, Creative Marketing Concepts.

On behalf of the entire Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce membership and it's Board of Directors, we wish to extend Special Thanks to LoAnne Brown, Gordon Wellman and the members of Charlevoix County State Bank for developing and organizing the Charlevoix County Industrial Fair.

We, the business organization of the Charlevoix area, SALUTE Charlevoix County Industries and their contribution to the growth and economic well being of the county.

"THANK YOU" for providing:

- Year Around Jobs
- Increased Tax Base
- Community Pride
- Involvement in Community Activities
- A Good Neighbor Atmosphere
- New Payroll Dollars to Circulate in the County

Industrial Fair provides the answers

The Charlevoix Industrial Fair provides answers for people who drive past area factories and find themselves wondering, "Just what is it that they make in there?"

Charlevoix area manufacturers will fill the Charlevoix High School gym Friday and Saturday, Oct. 12 and 13 as they exhibit their products and explain Charlevoix's place in the industry of the world. Students from area high schools will attend the fair Oct. 12 and the general public will attend Oct. 13. A crowd of at least 1,500 to 2,000 is anticipated.

The 1990 industrial fair will be Charlevoix's fourth since 1984. It is sponsored by the Charlevoix County State Bank and coordinated by bank vice president LoAnne Brown and bank president Gordon Wellman. There are no fees for exhibitors. The bank foots the bill.

In 1984, Brown read in a magazine about a bank in a southern state which had organized a similar type of industrial fair. Suspecting that such an event might also be of value to Charlevoix manufacturers, Brown wrote to the southern bank and asked for information.

That letter led to the first industrial fair in 1984, a second in 1985, a third in 1987 and this year's fair. The fair isn't scheduled annually or biannually, but is on an as-needed basis. When enough new industries come to the area and established industries grow and modify product lines, the bank sponsors another industrial fair.

"We want to make people aware of what is made up here," Brown explains.

Wellman notes that the fair is designed to be educational rather than a sales opportunity. However some orders have resulted from the fair. Wellman says there have been occasions when area businesses have gone to the fair and found that some part they had been ordering from afar can be obtained from a local manufacturer.

There are two main reasons for bringing high school students to the industrial fair: to let them know that there are jobs available for them in northern Michigan; and to give them some insight into what skills are necessary to obtain and be successful in those jobs.

Brown said the fair also serves as a tool in attracting additional industry to the area. It is scheduled in conjunction with the Apple Festival because there are more people than usual in town that weekend.

The Charlevoix County State Bank is once again sponsoring the Charlevoix Industrial Fair. The fair began when a bank officer read about a similar event which took place in a southern state. She felt Charlevoix might benefit from an industrial fair and after writing for information, got the project off the ground. This is the fourth Charlevoix Industrial Fair.

Brown also invites state and federal politicians to the industrial fair "so they can see that we're not just a resort town."

Preparations for the autumn event begin in April.

"When it finally gets here, I'm really enthused about it,"

Brown says. Industries are responsible for bringing and manning their exhibits, but Charlevoix City Fire Department volunteers provide muscle to assist with set up and clean up.

Builder emphasizing custom homes

With an eye to the new decade, Town and Country Cedar Homes of Petoskey, will be showing more emphasis on their custom designed homes and less on their line of cedar log homes at this year's Industrial Fair. "We are very proud of our heritage, and we do still build a significant number of log homes, but the majority of our sales are now custom-designed cedar homes," explains Chuck Meyer, Managing Partner, for the Residential Division of Town and Country.

"Many people only think of us as that log company down on 131. While we are still on 131 and do build some log homes, our major business is being done in the custom area," Meyer continued. "This past summer we completed an authentic Victorian home in Harbor Springs as well as a Frank Lloyd Wright inspired home."

"Currently, just in the immediate area, we have a 4,000 square foot contemporary home under construction on Walloon Lake, a 4,000 square foot French Country style home on Lake Charlevoix, a unique Carriage style home on Mackinac Island and homes ranging from a 1,200 square foot Chalet to 2,000 and 3,000 square foot contemporary cedar homes," Meyer said.

Town and Country's "thermocore wall system" which is used in both their custom contemporary wood homes and their log homes was recently awarded a Seal of Approval from Muir's Original Log Home Guide. Town and Country was one of only three companies to receive this seal. Doris Muir, publisher, further called Town and Country's wall system the "best of the best."

"We're excited about the growth we are experiencing locally, throughout the U.S. and internationally," Meyer continued. "Our international business is really growing with the recent addition of our new Korean distributor, but our local ties are strong as we particularly enjoy being able to have a closer hands-on relationship with our Northern Michigan home clients."

"Of course," says Meyer, "while we enjoy the special challenges of custom home building, we get equally excited over building that special log home or cabin retreat. That's our heritage, builders of the finest cedar log homes in America today."

Town and Country's model home is open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Saturday 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.; and Sunday noon to 4 p.m. The model and offices are located at 4772 U.S. 131 South, just four miles south of Petoskey.

"The Finest Natural Wood Homes in the World"

Big Rock provides power and jobs

Completed in 1962, the Big Rock Point nuclear plant was the first commercial nuclear power plant constructed in Michigan. The General Electric-designed plant was built in two and a half years at a cost of $27 million by the Bechtel Power Corporation.

Groundbreaking at the site four miles north of Charlevoix took place in July 1960 and the first power was generated on Dec. 8, 1962. Because the plant was a pioneer in the nuclear industry, it was a popular tourist attraction hosting as many as 100,000 people a year. Tours are still conducted today on an appointment basis.

During the course of its more than two decades of operation, the plant has earned a number of awards. Seven times it has earned the President's Award from Consumers Power Company for its exemplary safety record. It has earned the National Safety Council's Award of Merit twice.

As nuclear power plants go, Big Rock Point is small. But its economic impact on Northern Michigan is substantial. With a total of 200 people working on-site, it is one of the largest employers in the area. The annual payroll amounts to approximately $6 million. In addition, the plant pays property taxes of almost $800,000 per year.

Dozens of local businesses benefit from the plant as well. Construction contractors, electrical equipment companies, lumber yards, trucking firms, office suppliers, hardware stores, industrial specialty companies and many others do hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of business with the plant each year. In addition, local hotels and restaurants provide meals and lodging to the many out-of-town workers and visitors who come to the plant from around the country.

As an employer, Big Rock Point provides work to people with many types of skills. Operators and engineers make up a large part of the work force, of course. But the staff also includes trained technicians and maintenance personnel, computer specialists, workers trained in radiation protection and health physics, training instructors, secretaries and security specialists. Many of the plant's employees bring considerable amounts of training to their jobs.

Medusa Cement Company

20 years of innovation, renovation, reclamation

It was in 1967 that Medusa Cement Company started production at its South Point plant in Charlevoix Township.

The abundance in the area's geology of the natural materials needed to manufacture cement plus the ability to ship to major Midwestern markets by large lake carrier made the 1,350-acre Charlevoix location an ideal one for Medusa.

The cement produced by Medusa is known as the Portland variety and is used primarily for road construction, block work and other large-scale building projects.

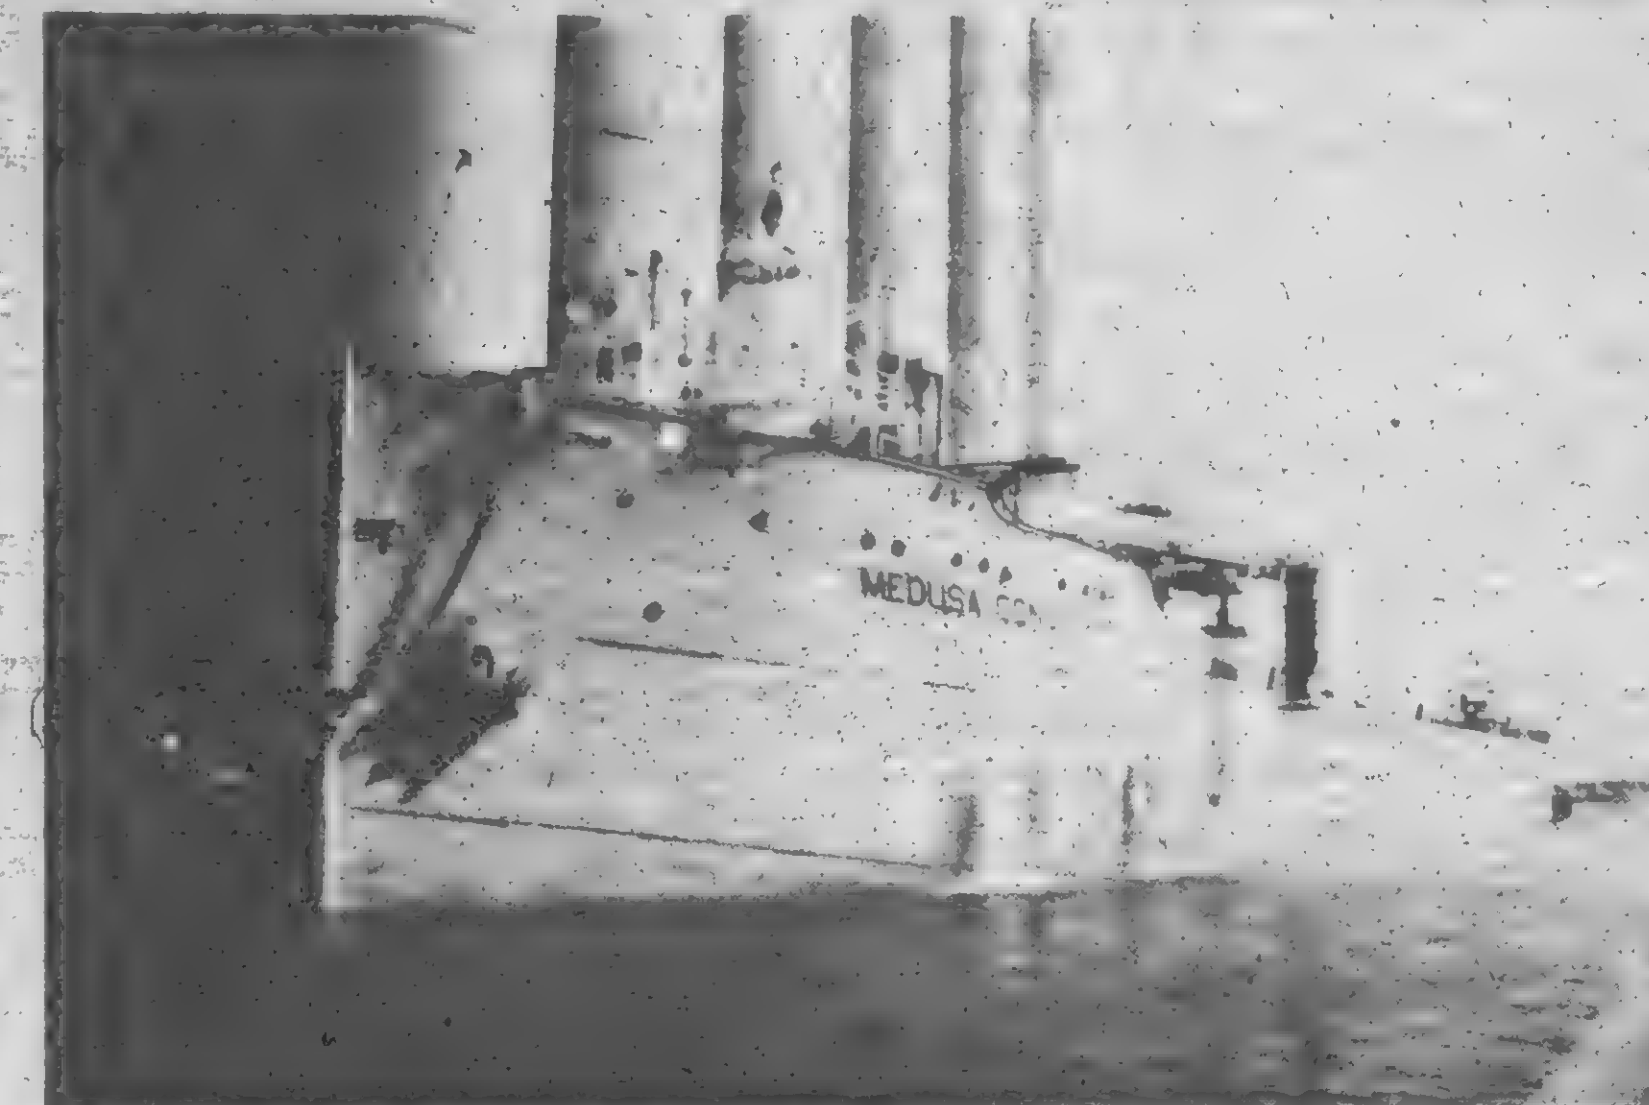

The plant has a production capacity of 1,264,000 tons of cement from its kiln process and 1,360,000 tons of clinker on the grinder end.

Limestone and shale, two of the raw materials used in the manufacturing process are mined from two surface mines on the Medusa site.

An innovative land reclamation project has been ongoing at the plant in which areas where mining has been completed are restored to their natural states using sludge from the City of Charlevoix's waste treatment plant as fertilizer.

At present, there are 110 hourly and 25 salaried employees at Medusa. The plant's estimated annual payroll for 1990 will be $5 million. Medusa's corporate headquarters are in Cleveland.

Shipping of the cement from the Charlevoix plant is done largely by lake carriers. The 552-foot Medusa Challenger is capable of carrying over 11,000 tons of cement; the Medusa Conquest 8,500 tons. Cement is shipped to Great Lakes ports of Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Toledo, Milwaukee, Mantowoc and Grand Haven.

The plant underwent a major renovation project in 1979 when it converted from the "wet" process of manufacturing cement to a "flash calcining" system, a more energy efficient system developed in Japan in 1966.

The $50 million conversion included the addition of state-of-the-art equipment that makes the Medusa facility one of the most technologically sophisticated cement manufacturing operations in the world.

In flash calcining, the kiln feed, a mixture of finely ground limestone, sand and shale is metered and transported to the top of the preheater tower.

The preheater consists of a series of four cyclones and a flash furnace in which the hot waste heat gases contact and heat the kiln feed prior to the feed actually entering the kiln. After a third preheater stage, the kiln feed is discharged into a flash furnace where fuel is burned to further increase the temperature.

The flash furnace discharges to a fourth stage where final preheating occurs prior to the feed entering the kiln. During this process the particles of kiln feed are suspended in the gas stream resulting in very efficient heat transfer.

The resulting "clinker" discharges from the kiln into a cooler where ambient air is used to cool it to a compatible temperature for handling and storage.

Wojan 1st in aluminum doors and windows

Wojan Aluminum has set the pace for the window and door industry ever since Walter Wojan introduced his aluminum windows and doors 30 years ago.

In 1983, he proved to a skeptical industry that properly constructed aluminum windows are energy efficient, durable, maintenance free and economical.

Today, Dennis and Kenneth Wojan oversee a growing business, with a growing demand for Wojan Aluminum Products.

Wojan's engineering staff keeps pace with the needs of home owners and businesses north and south wherever energy efficiency means savings.

At Wojan Aluminum's modern 45,000 square foot facility on Stover Road, the company designs and manufactures single, double and triple glazed windows and doors.

Each is carefully engineered with Wojan's unique combination of triple weatherstripping and thermal barrier, offering home owners, architects and contractors a wide range of choices.

Wojan Windows are tested by the American Aluminum Manufacturers Association (AAMA) in approved testing labs. These tests have shown that Wojan products all surpass AAMA standards for thermal performance, structural performance, air infiltration and water infiltration.

In hot climates, where the cost of air conditioning can be more expensive than heating in harsh northern climates, Wojan products keep the heat out and the comfortable cool air in.

In the north, Wojan's Triple Shield Windows, with the highly perfected hollow vinyl tubing thermal break and triple polypropylene weatherstripping keep the heat in and the cold out.

Ionex is a high-tech success story

When Jim Barnard founded Ionex Inc. in 1989, he envisioned himself and maybe one or two other guys providing heat treating services for area industries. In less than a year, the company has far exceeded those expectations.

While Ionex is doing some heat treating, the dominant activity at the plant is manufacturing high temperature vacuum furnaces. Customers for these furnaces include: Michigan Tech University, the U.S. Air Force, Pratt and Whitney, Lockheed, and the Korean Institute of Metals.

"They're finding us," Barnard said of his national and international customers. "In any industry, the world is small. In less than a year, we have built a strong reputation."

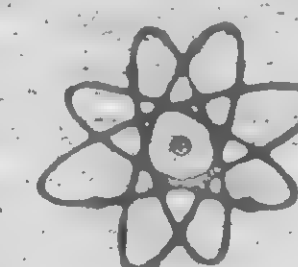

Customers use Ionex furnaces for high temperature testing and processing of ceramics and metals. Barnard explains that advanced ceramics are going to be the wave of the future, something like plastics were the wave of the past.

Barnard is a metallurgical engineer. That background allows him to understand what his customers need from a furnace. Once the needs are defined, Barnard and the Ionex staff design and manufacture a furnace which will answer those needs.

The building Barnard took over had sat empty on West Carpenter Street in Charlevoix for two years. Currently it houses an active business where Barnard and 12 employees work hard and put in long hours to keep up with orders.

Only last year, Barnard was cleaning up floors in the building and hoping to start a small heat treating shop. Now, he hopes to eventually expand the heat treating end of the business. For now, he's concentrating on keeping a thriving manufacturing company growing in a controlled and financially sound fashion.

Hospital program helps business

Charlevoix Area Hospital is working hard to keep area industrial employees on the job and to cut workmen's comp claims for employers.

As a result of the hospital's "work-hardening" program, employees are returning to work sooner and companies are reducing their lost-time injuries.

Bob Gorkiewicz, chief physical therapist, directs the program which returns employees to work who have been injured on the job or who may have overuse injuries, he says. "We try to simulate the movement the patient uses in their work and analyze their ability to return to work or their tolerance to continue the tasks required of them." Some have fear of returning to work and reinjuring themselves. Others are eager to return before they are ready and thus risk further injury. "Through the correct exercises for their problems, we can help them gain confidence that they can do the work," Gorkiewicz says.

Individualized conditioning programs are developed by evaluating both the employee and their job. The employee's strength and mobility are studied along with the kind of tasks he or she must perform. "We analyze the movements necessary to perform the tasks and we simulate that movement. It may be necessary to change how the person performs the tasks or even change the person's job," he explains. He points out that some people must make as many as 600 movements per hour and overuse certain parts of the body such as the back or wrist.

Gorkiewicz is available to visit work sites to talk to employees about proper lifting, reaching and bending techniques. "By working directly with companies both before and after injury, we can make a direct impact on the number of workmen's compensation claims. When there are claims, we can reduce the length of time an employee is off the job. And, once they return, there will be less risk of re-injury," he says.

In addition to the work-hardening, environment assessment, and back injury prevention programs, Charlevoix Area Hospital also offers hearing tests, comprehensive laboratory tests, and X-ray exams for pre or post employment physicals. Pulmonary function, blood pressure, cholesterol, and diabetes tests, as well as other tests required by OSHA, can be performed at the work site. Hospital staff are also available to present programs on smoking cessation, CPR and safe weight loss.

How Can You Reduce Lost-time Injuries?

- Employee instruction in back injury prevention
- Work-hardening therapy for employees suffering from on-the-job or overuse injuries
- Work station analysis to prevent injuries

Charlevoix Area Hospital's Physical Therapy Department can help you keep employees on the job and cut workmen's comp claims. Call for further information.

Counters can be both durable and beautiful

Charlevoix Courier Wednesday, October 10, 1990—PAGE 11

Being a kitchen counter isn't easy. All day long, people put things on you. Hot things, cold things, things that scratch. It's not an easy life. Kitchens North of Charlevoix understands the hardships a counter-top faces and provides counters that are up to the challenge.

Kitchens North, located near the corner of Antrim and State Streets, is installing Corian counter tops. Corian is a special material made by Dupont. It allows homeowners flexibility in the configuration and design of kitchen counters and perhaps even more importantly is extremely attractive and durable.

Kitchens North owner Jim Fank says that Corian not only looks good when it's new, but continues to look good. Corian is a solid piece of material which is the same color all the way through. Stains or scratches can be sanded out. Abrasive cleaners don't hurt Corian. In fact, they make it look better.

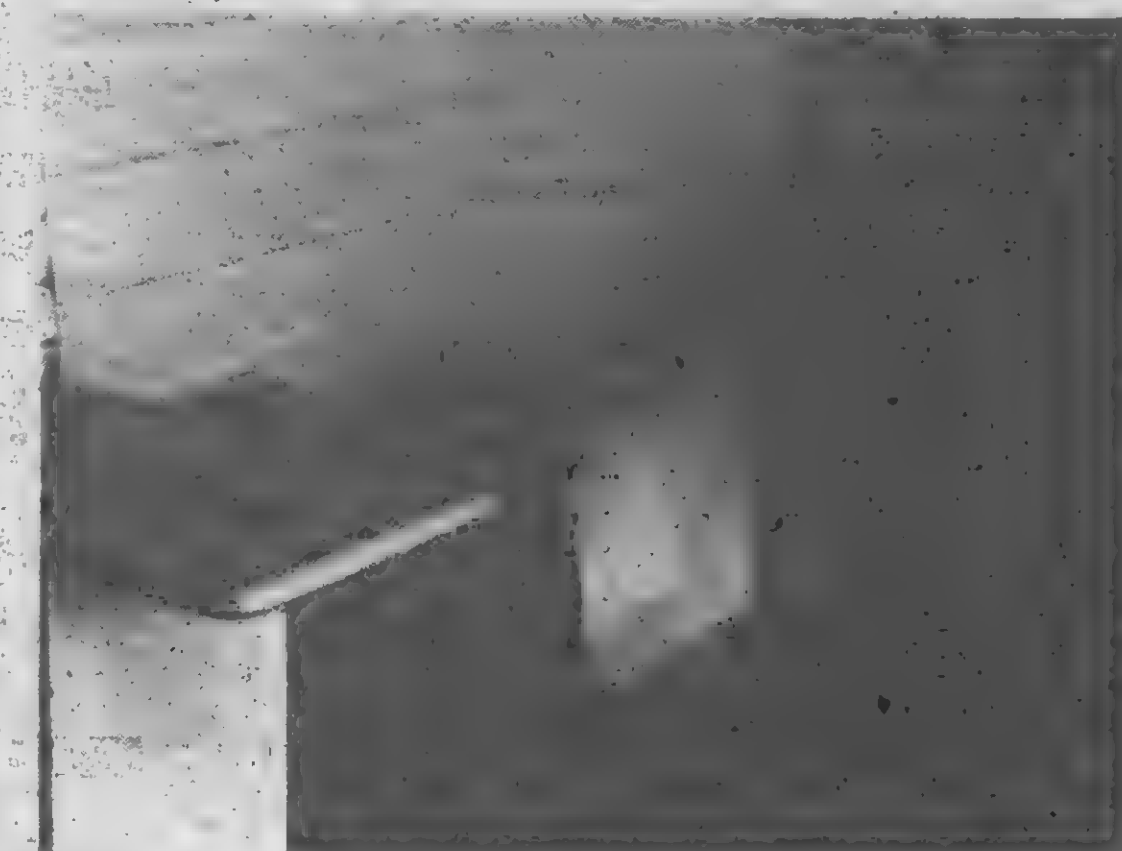

Corian, which is a blend of acrylics and natural minerals, also allows the sink bowl to be placed along the counter top where ever the homeowner wants it placed. The bowl is attached to the top by a molecular fusion process. The bowl and the shelf essentially become one piece. There is a seam, but it's almost impossible to see.

Molecular bonding also allows different color shelves to be bonded together to create custom designed counter tops.

In addition to molecular fusion, the Kitchens North staff uses high power, carbide cutting tools to create custom edges for the counters. In terms of cost, Corian is more expensive than formica, but less expensive than marble or granite. In terms of quality, it's closer to marble or granite. Dupont warranties both the material and labor for 10 years.

Key Controls masters machinery

There's nothing worse than a machine which seems to have a mind of its own. Key Controls is a local manufacturer which designs, engineers and constructs programmable controllers and control panels to help humans control machinery.

Walt Hufford and Ted Felter formed a partnership and founded Key Controls in 1989. Hufford says the company is off to a strong start and is growing.

"In the last year, we've had jobs all the way from the Soo to Grayling," he explains.

Two of the company's current projects involve a waste water treatment plant in Grayling and a Bell Telephone office in Cheboygan. Hufford said Key Controls is a general contractor, but emphasizes industrial and commercial work.

Much of the company's work is developing control systems for special machinery designed for a specific task.

Hufford feels the business will grow toward energy management and process controls for industrial and commercial businesses. That will involve designing and installing control systems which allow businesses to make more efficient use of heating and cooling systems.

Key Controls will have a computer and controller apparatus set up for display at the industrial fair.

Much Success to the 1990 Industrial Fair

Mechanical Components Division

Wickes Manufacturing Company
East Jordan, Michigan • Mancelona, Michigan

Wickes manufactures Mechanical Components

The Mechanical Components Division, Wickes Manufacturing Co. (formerly Gulf & Western Stamping, Gulf & Western Manufacturing Co.) employs nearly 300 workers and is one of the county's largest employers.

The 117,000 square foot facility on M-66 in East Jordan assembles automotive components from parts that are stamped in Mancelona, the location of the other Mechanical Components Division facility.

The division supplies such items as parking brake assemblies, shifter assemblies, hood hinges, hood latches, window regulators and other automotive hardware.

Customers include manufacturers of all automobile makes and models but most business is done with the Big Three in the U.S. — GM, Ford and Chrysler. Products are shipped not only to Detroit-area factories but to plants in California, Kentucky, New Jersey, Georgia, Illinois, Mexico, Canada.

The East Jordan Plant was built in 1953 when Mount Clemens Metal Products Co., a fastener manufacturer which had expanded from its Mount Clemens base to Mancelona in 1947, decided to expand again.

The decision to locate at its present site was aided by efforts from the East Jordan Industrial Development Corp.

The post-war years saw the company's product line concentrated more and more on automotive stampings and mechanical assemblies.

In 1968, both the East Jordan and Mancelona plants were acquired by Gulf & Western Industries. In 1986, the Consumers and Industrial Products Group of Gulf & Western Industries (of which the stamping division was a part) was acquired by Wickes Companies Inc.

The Stamping Division was renamed Mechanical Components Division to more accurately identify with the type of products produced and to better reflect the future direction of the company's product lines.

Together, the two facilities have employed as many as 700 Charlevoix and Antrim County residents. The payroll at the East Jordan plant alone is in the $5 million range.

Recycling comes to northwest Michigan

Northwest Recycling has allowed Charlevoix to join in the growing recycling movement.

Skip Canfield established the Charlevoix recycling center on Petoskey Avenue near the north end of town in early 1989. Canfield had been, and continues, operating a recycling center in Traverse City.

Northwest Recycling in Charlevoix accepts industrial, commercial and residential recyclables.

Not only does Northwest Recycling accept recyclables hauled to the center, but it has also added curbside pick-up service.

For residential customers, Northwest Recycling accepts recyclables at the center Fridays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturdays from 8 a.m. to noon. For $2 per month, Northwest Recycling will provide curbside pick-up to homes in Charlevoix, Petoskey and Harbor Springs.

Recycling in the Charlevoix area is expected to get a boost this month due to local waste haulers changing to a pay-per-bag from a pay-per-month collection system. Home owners will be able to reduce their waste hauling costs by recycling.

Northwest Recycling recently expanded beyond collection and into manufacturing and marketing a product from materials collected. The company has developed a machine which shreds old newspapers and bales them so they may be used as bedding for livestock.

Newspaper is perhaps the most easily recycled material, but it is only the tip of the iceberg. Other items the recycling center accepts include: tin cans; aluminum; green, brown and clear glass; cardboard boxes; computer print-out and office paper; plastic milk jugs, cider jugs and other containers; car batteries; appliances; and used oil.

Certain materials such as clear plastic, plastic foam and ceramic cups and plates can't be recycled.

The recycling center provides information sheets explaining what can and can't be recycled and how recyclables should be prepared for the center. People may also phone the center at 547-0317.

Company provides electrical solutions

Electrical Concepts North (ECN) was founded in 1988 as a division of Wilmot Electric Inc. to better serve the industrial control needs of the area. ECN is a full service systems house with design/build capability dedicated to providing turnkey solutions to industrial automation problems.

Specialties of ECN include coordinated variable speed drives, programmable controllers, energy management systems, and motion controls including CNC and servo systems.

In the area of variable speed drives, ECN is an authorized distributor and service center for Safttronics drives. By applying Safttronics drives and accessory circuit boards, ECN has become an industry leader in the use of multiple drive systems to coordinate the speed of multiple motors performing related tasks, such as batch processing or conveyor load sharing.

Programmable controllers have been employed by ECN in a number of different applications including: wire drawing mills, wire flattening mills, drying ovens, pumping stations, metal-working lathes, woodworking lathes, plastic injection molding presses, multi station assembly machines, automatic welders, automatic wire benders etc. ECN can design/build a control system from scratch for a new application, or they can retrofit a new control to an existing machine.

ECN also offers energy management services to its customers. Through the use of sophisticated data gathering equipment ECN can perform an analysis and develop a strategy. They will then design equipment and procedures to implement the strategy. Equipment can include automated banks of power factor correction capacitors. Also automatic load shedding, load leveling, as well as load scheduling may be employed to help reduce peak demand. Typically these techniques produce savings which pay for themselves within one or two years.

Probably the fastest growing segment of business for ECN has been in the area of computerized numerical control (CNC) installation. ECN can take an existing machine tool with an obsolete numerical control, remove that control and replace it with a new CNC. The result is a machine tool which rivals a brand new one in features, productivity and reliability at a fraction of the cost.

In addition to ECN's design/build services, ECN also employs a full-time staff of service technicians to respond to any production emergency. These experienced troubleshooters not only support ECN installed equipment but will also pinpoint and repair problems in other systems.

Lexalite honors plant's employees

Lexalite was incorporated in 1963 and 25 years ago built its original 9,600 sq. ft. plant in Charlevoix. Today, they have 150,000 sq. ft. of molding, decorating, engineering, tooling and assembly operations in three plants.

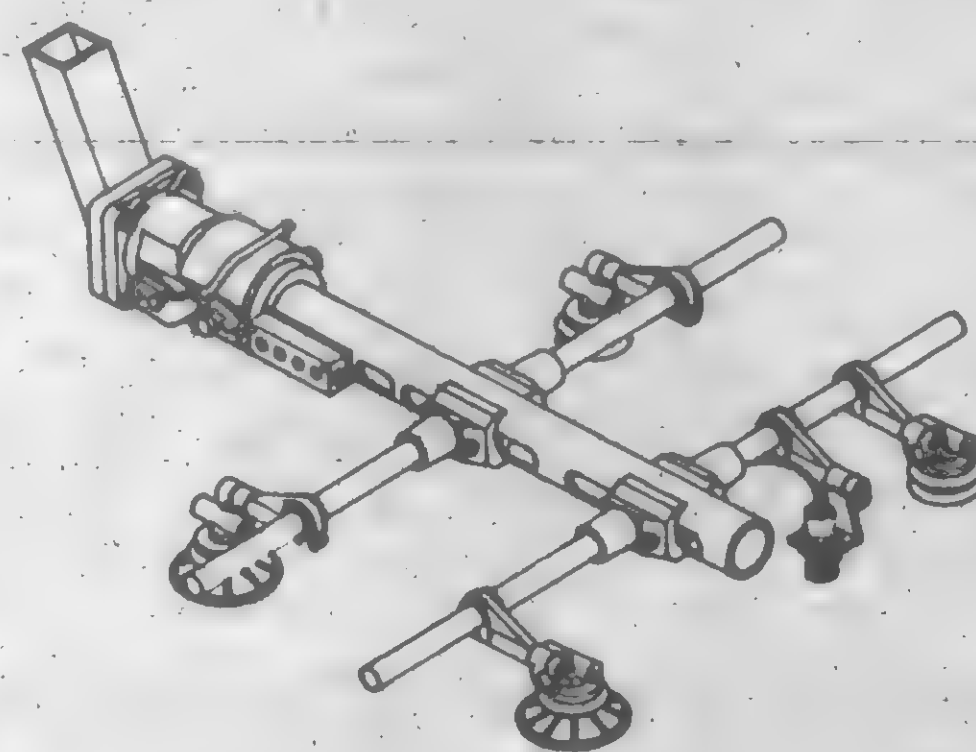

Lexalite attributes its success to its people. In 1976, Lexalite began an Employee Stock Ownership Plan which today owns more than one-third of the outstanding shares of the corporation. Many employees also own shares outside the ESOP, bringing total employee ownership to approximately 52 percent.

Employee Ownership Week was Oct. 1-7. Lexalite took the opportunity to thank its employee-owners for their contribution in achieving a record year of sales in excess of $20,000,000.

Power cooperative is a partner to business

Top O' Michigan Electric's partnership with business in northwestern lower Michigan spans more than 50 years.

The rural electric cooperative based in Boyne City owes its existence to business people whose vision and hard work led to the creation of the member-owned cooperative in 1937. Farmers wanted electricity so much they organized their own electric distribution cooperative to get it.

Today farming joins many businesses and industries that rely on Top O' Michigan to meet their power needs. In recent years several new businesses and industries have become Top O' Michigan members. They include Temprel Products, RBL, Lexamar, Altair International, Trumco, Prestige Press, Boyne Precision Die & Engineering and Wal-Mart.

In the last five years, the number of businesses served by Top O' Michigan increased by 14 percent. In addition, residential memberships increased by 12 percent. That includes permanent and seasonal residents.

The cooperative maintains a 5,200-mile network of distribution lines linking more than 42,000 meters in a 12 county area. It is the largest electric distribution cooperative in Michigan. Its service area stretches into Charlevoix, Emmet, Otsego, Antrim, Cheboygan, Crawford, Grand Traverse, Kalkaska, Missaukee, Montmorency, Oscoda and Wexford counties.

Top O' Michigan is one of seven electric distribution cooperatives in Michigan buying power exclusively from Wolverine Power Supply Cooperative, a wholesale generation and transmission cooperative owned by its seven member systems.

Unlike other businesses, Top O' Michigan is owned by the customers it serves. Each customer is a member-owner. Each year member-owners meet to elect directors from the membership to serve on the cooperative's governing board.

As cooperative owners, Top O' Michigan members receive patronage capital refunds. Patronage capital is revenue in excess of the cost of electric service. Some $9.1 million in patronage capital was refunded to members in the last seven years.

Top O' Michigan employs 87 people. Last year its annual sales totaled 340 million kilowatt-hours with revenues of $28 million. It contributes $5 million annually to the area economy in payroll, property taxes, and local purchases of supplies, services and equipment.

The cooperative is actively involved in education, safety and training programs for employees and members. Among its programs is a portable power line safety demonstration shown to schools and service clubs.

President Warner Cheyne addresses the membership at the 1990 Top O' Michigan annual meeting in Boyne City.

We're your connection to a world of power.

Plant produces enclosures

Control Engineering is an affiliate of the Jervis B. Webb Co., one of the largest producers of material-handling systems in the world.

It has three plants operating in northern Michigan employing 300 employees. These plants are located in Harbor Springs, Pellston and Boyne City, where 63 are employed.

Lewis Poole, of Boyne City's Control Engineering facility, explained their product.

"Our product is stainless steel and custom designed electrical enclosures. The enclosures are used by the machine tool industry, the food processing industry, the automotive industry and chemical companies."

Boyne City's Control Engineering produces only the sheet metal portion. Electronic components are installed elsewhere.

Poole pointed out that the enclosures house the electronic equipment for industry, i.e. conveyor lines and machine tool industries.

Control Engineering also manufactures automatic guided vehicles used in loading and unloading materials.

Additional plants are located in Farmington Hills and Atlanta, GA. Their products are shipped to all 50 states and overseas.

For 36 years, Bergmann Center workers have been provided meaningful work experience and training with the goal of becoming competent employees in the competitive work place. The Bergmann Center recently was reaccredited for three years as a rehabilitative work site.

The activities of the Bergmann Center are overseen by a nine-person board of directors, with the guidance of the northern Michigan Community Mental Health

Harbor Industry takes its case to the world

Harbor Industries is one of the largest full service manufacturers of permanent and semi-permanent displays in the United States. With facilities in Charlevoix, Grand Haven and Los Angeles, CA, there are more than 400,000 square feet of manufacturing and warehousing in the three locations.

In 1981 Harbor Industries merged with Freedman Artcraft, an innovative leader in display cases, particularly for greeting cards. This brought together businesses which had paralleled each other for more than 30 years. Freedman Artcraft had specialized in wood products while Harbor Industries was moving into extensive use of plastics and metals.

Moving into the '90s, Harbor Industries' modern facilities house state-of-the-art automated equipment for wood, wire, metal and vacuum formed plastics. From greeting card display racks to electronic touch tone control display showcases for General Electric products, Camcorder displays for Sears, carpet displays for Evans Black and pet food displays for Hills Pet, Harbor Industries designs units to enhance the presentation of any product.

Combining engineering skills and tradition has brought growth to the Charlevoix plant. Major accounts include: Borden, Clorox, DC Cook, General Electric, Gibson, Hills Pet, Oneida, Silversmiths, Philip Morris, Sears, Shaw Industries and Wal-Mart.

A major acquisition and expansion was made in May 1989 at the Charlevoix plant. The installation of a $270,000 Vinyl Laminating system for laminating thin paper, saturated paper, vinyl and foil onto particleboard, hardboard and plywood increased the work force by 10 people.

Several groups assist new industries

Several organizations have been formed to promote business and industry in the Charlevoix County area. Some date back many years and were responsible for assisting industries which have become mainstays of the local economy. Others are new and represent efforts of local government to join with the state, business, industry and citizen's groups to improve our northern lower Michigan economy.

The following Charlevoix County groups are working to maintain and attract business to the area:

Northern Lakes Economic Alliance: Initiated in 1984, the organization helps bring new business and industry in to its Antrim-Charlevoix-Emmet County service area, and assists with the retention of established businesses. It is funded by contributions from local counties, cities, townships and industries. Those funds are matched by the state.

The main functions of the economic alliance are:

- Assisting local governments in establishing their development policies.

- Coordinating efforts between local development groups and the state.

- Creating an industrial site inventory.

- Retaining local industries by assisting with problem solving and company expansions.

- Marketing the area for industrial development, contacting new prospects and following up on business leads.

The main goal of the economic alliance is to create full-time, year-around base jobs for local residents. The officers of the board of directors are:

President, Susan VanWierent; Asst. Superintendent of Vocational Education for the Char-Em ISD; Vice President, Shannon Brower, Emmet County Commissioner; Secretary, Jim Wibby, President of First of America Bank; Treasurer, W.R. Frykberg, Boyne City Manager.

For more information about the alliance, phone interim coordinator Sheri Rhodes at (616) 582-6482.

Charlevoix County Economic Development Corp.—The Charlevoix County EDC was organized in 1981 to provide tax exempt industrial revenue bonds under the state act authorizing EDC's. It also promotes business and industrial development in the county.

The Charlevoix Co. EDC acts as a development arm for the county as a whole.

Anton Philipp fills new needs

Anton-Philipp Laboratories was founded in 1988 as a subsidiary of DCL Inc. for purposes of exploring business opportunities other than those provided by the bulk material handling and pollution control industry.

Anton-Philipp is headquartered at the new DCL office facility located at the Hufford Building on Petoskey Avenue.

Some of their recent projects have included hospital operating room fixtures and furniture and the production of miscellaneous urethane products.

Anton-Philipp recognizes that waste recycling has rapidly become a necessity and, in some cases mandatory in many communities. Their recent achievements include a recycling bin called "The Eco-Depo" which is designed for home, office and business use. The bin has been test marketed throughout the country and has received an enthusiastic response. The Eco-Depo recycling bin is being introduced in this area for the first time and will be displayed at the industrial fair.

Iron Works: 100 plus years of service

East Jordan Iron Works has been an integral part of the Charlevoix County economy for more than 100 years.

At the time the foundry was established by William E. Malpass, East Jordan was the center of lumbering operations. Railroads had not yet penetrated this region and 11 sawmills and the Pine Lake Iron Company were dependent on water for transportation.

Hand-hewn timbers were floated to the mills and as many as 14 lumber schooners could be seen loading simultaneously at the East Jordan docks.

All this activity created a demand for the foundry and machine shop operation. The foundry was built in 1883 and was followed by a machine shop two years later. Casting demands for miscellaneous machine parts, ship parts, agricultural and eventually castings for the railroads later followed.

Closing of mills and lessening of lake shipping in the 1920s were met by changing types of manufacture. In 1928, the machine shop was enlarged and the production of fire hydrants, water works valves and street castings began.

Through the support of the community and many dedicated employees, the company grew and has continued to do so. Today East Jordan Iron Works employs approximately 500 people and has an annual payroll of $12 million to $14 million.

Besides the corporate office and manufacturing facilities located on the South Arm of Lake Charlevoix, the company operates branch offices and warehouses in Grand Rapids and Detroit, Cleveland and Columbus Ohio, and Chicago Illinois. Additionally there is an extensive network of product distributors. A central distribution facility is located in Synfield.

East Jordan Irons Works manufactures a variety of gray and ductile iron casting to remain flexible in a fluctuating market and economy. Products include a full line of street castings, such as manhole covers, grates, and frames.

Additionally, the company is a major supplier of fire hydrants, valves, water main fittings, valve and service boxes, tapping and repair sleeves and supplementary water distribution supplies.

The company also manufactures industrial castings such as tractor and trailer brake drums, off the road brake drums, gear housings, valve bodies and other specialty items.

East Jordan Iron Works services and facilities include:

Sales and Engineering departments to assist customers in placing their order and in assuring that the customer takes advantage of the right casting for the job. All sales data such as orders, inventories, and production schedules are computerized on an IBM Systems 38 computer linked to numerous individual terminals including sales offices and yards.

The Engineering Department includes manufacturing, industrial, product, and process engineering. Continuous evaluation of procedures and processes assures efficient, accurate and reliable production resulting in on-time delivery and competitive pricing.

A complete pattern shop ready to construct any new pattern required. East Jordan Iron Works also maintains thousands of patterns.

A number of core making technologies including automated shell core, no-bake and oil sand.

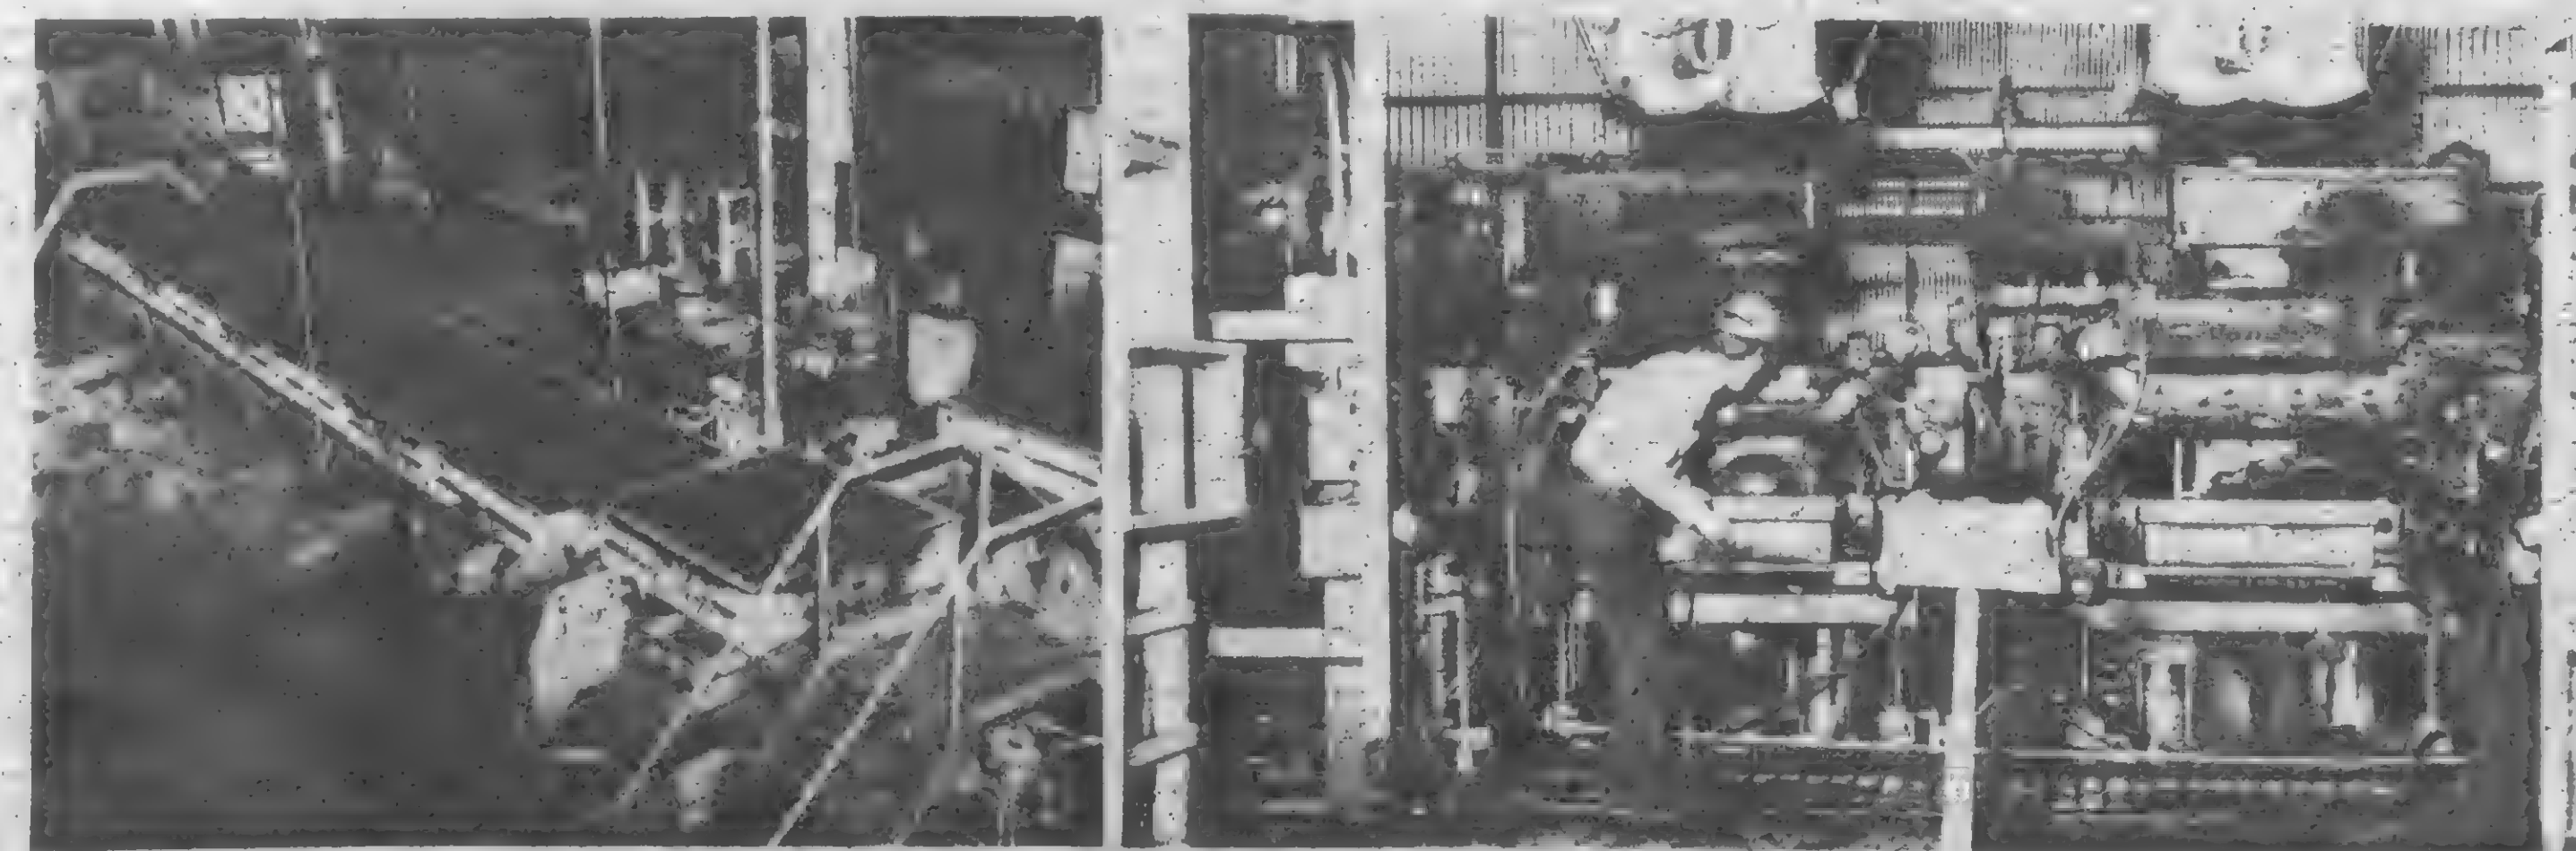

A state-of-the-art water-cooled cupola with a 1,000-degree recuperative hot blast oxygen enrichment system capable of delivering fifty tons of molten iron per hour. This is coupled with a 40-ton electric induction holding furnace to insure that the iron is delivered to the molding centers at the proper temperature and analysis.

Machining operations are performed on computer numerical controlled vertical and horizontal turret lathes from 10-inch chuck size up through a 68-inch swing diameter. These lathes are programmed in the engineering department utilizing Compact II computer assist, a graphic plotter, and floppy disc storage. Additional manual and automatic metal working equipment includes milling machines, radial drill presses, multi-spindle drills, horizontal lathes and grinders.

One of the largest casting inventories in the world, ready for immediate delivery. Rail and truck delivery are available for on-time delivery of all products.

Sand lab to assure that sand mix prepared for each molding center has been properly formulated. A melt lab where testing of the iron's physical properties are performed. Additionally, chemical analysis on an in-house spectrometer, and microscopic inspection of the iron's structure are performed.

East Jordan Iron Works, Inc. and its employees continue to be one of the most stable, progressive, well-tooled, manufacturing facilities in the nation and are vigorously working to meet future demands for quality products.

East Jordan Iron Works is one of the leading Independent Automated Foundries in the United States. Always having been located in East Jordan, it is one of Northern Michigan's oldest and most respected industries.

The Iron Works produces a wide array of gray and ductile iron castings. It is noted for an outstanding workforce of many skills, using some of the most modern tools and technology available.

Schooner cruises being discussed

A yacht chartering operation has expressed interest in operating a 49-passenger schooner from the dock currently occupied by the Star of Charlevoix.

The Charlevoix Star operation is no longer in business, but the paddle wheel boat still sits at the city dock near the end of Clinton Street. Two years remain on the Star Line Corporation's five-year lease.

Bill Allgair and Rick Garton of Bay Breeze Yacht Charters approached city officials about placing the schooner in Charlevoix and were directed to the Chamber of Commerce. Allgair and Garton spoke to the chamber board at the board's Sept. 25 meeting.

Allgair and Garton explained that the schooner is approximately 65 feet long and is Coast Guard certified to carry 49 passengers per trip. It would run a regular schedule of three trips per day: noon to 2 p.m., 3 p.m. to 5 p.m., and a 7:30 p.m. sunset cruise. Prices would range from $12.50 to $21.50 for children and from $20 to $32 for adults. The schooner would spend much of its time on Lake Charlevoix, but would also occasionally venture into

The schooner would spend much of its time on Lake Charlevoix. It also would sail on Lake Michigan.

After hearing Allgair and Garton's presentation, the chamber board passed a resolution supporting establishing the schooner operation where the paddle wheeler is currently located, provided the city retains the right to relocate the sailing charter should a dining or cruise operation be reestablished.

Chamber officials presented that information to the city council at the council's Oct. 8 work session. Council members expressed interest, but said they wanted more information about the present dock lease and the proposed schooner operation before they make a decision. That information will be presented at a future council work session.

The sketch above shows a 49-passenger schooner which owners of a Traverse City yacht chartering business are considering basing in Charlevoix. The businessmen have talked to city officials and the Chamber of Commerce about operating the schooner from the dock currently occupied by the Star of Charlevoix.

Board considers landfill enforcement

By Peg Ohle

Charlevoix County has been a good neighbor to its nearby counties for some time.

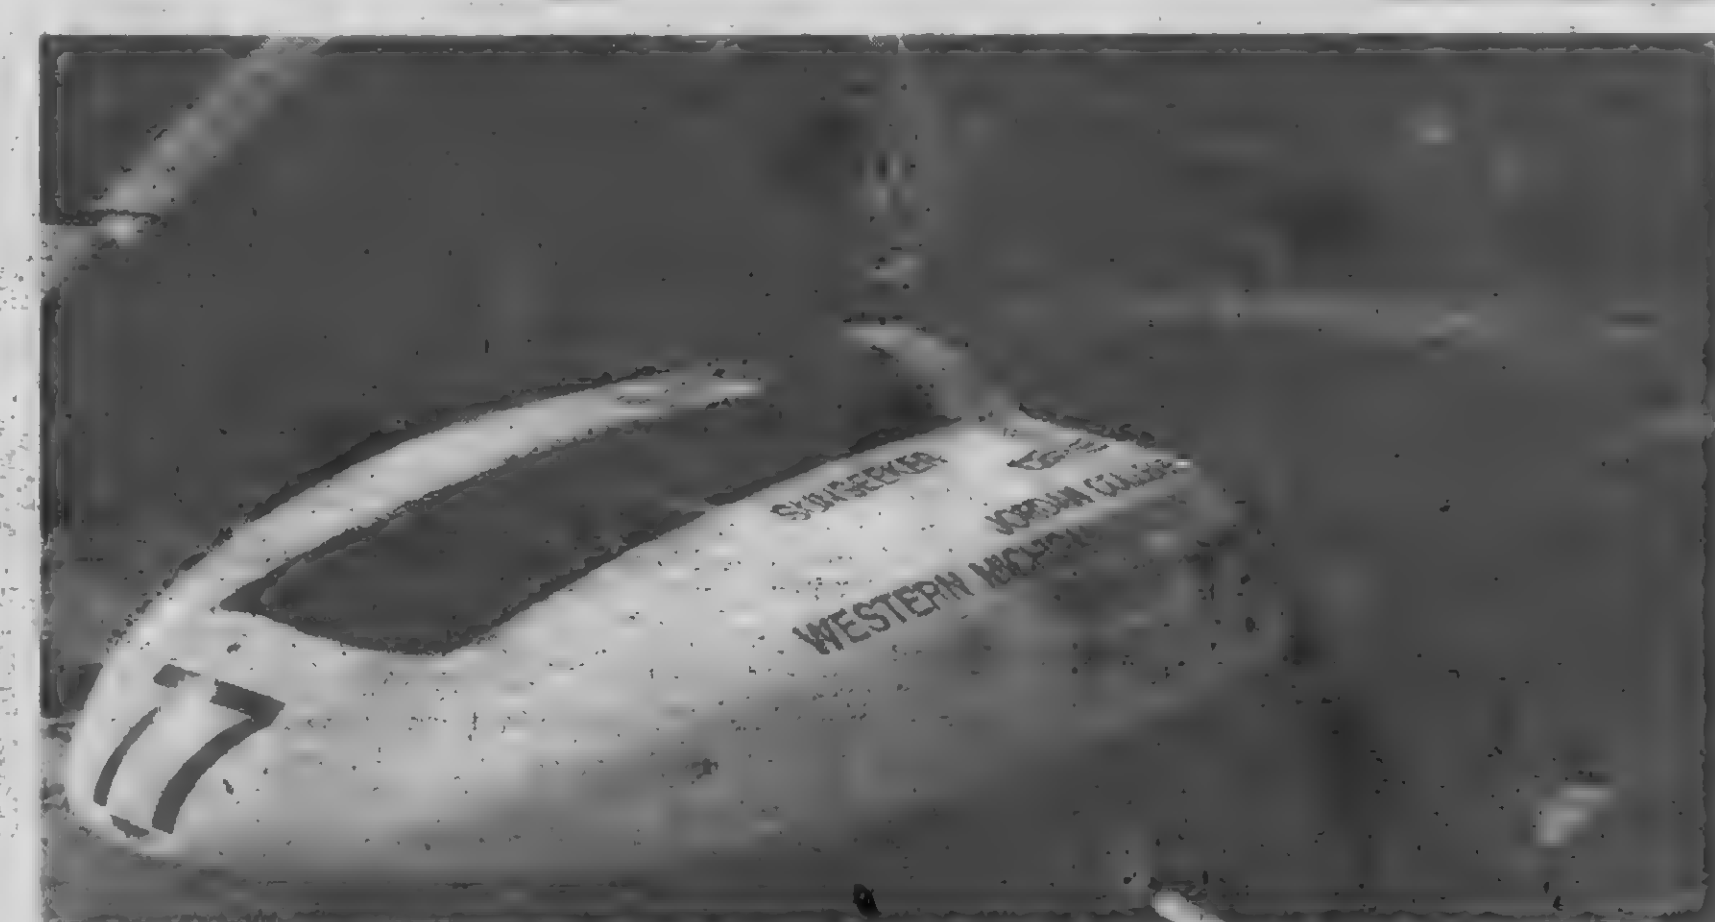

Rather than use the term "NIMBY" (not in my back yard), the county has permitted garbage and other waste materials from nearby counties to be deposited in Cedar Ridge landfill in Eveline Township, but there are going to be some changes made.

Although the landfill is privately operated, it is governed by the Charlevoix County Solid Waste Management Plan, which designates the counties from which garbage and waste materials will be accepted into the landfill.

Waste Management, Inc., which operates the landfill, has been accepting materials from Emmet, Antrim, Otsego, Crawford, Presque Isle, Roscommon, Kalkaska, Cheboygan, and Grand Traverse Counties, but the revised County Solid Waste Management Plan which was recently approved by the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) makes only five of these counties eligible to use the Cedar Ridge landfill.

These five are Emmet, Antrim, Otsego, Crawford, and Presque Isle Counties which, after signing operating agreements with Charlevoix County, may deposit their wastes in Cedar Ridge. The other four counties will have to find other means of waste disposal.

...landfill discussed

All of this was discussed at a meeting of the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners last week, which was attended by representatives of Waste Management. Barney Way, site manager of Cedar Ridge, was concerned because he wanted to know how much time he had before cutting off service to Roscommon, Kalkaska, Cheboygan, and Grand Traverse Counties.

Commissioner Don Smith offered a resolution that would have put the ban into effect immediately, but it was defeated by "no" votes by Commissioners Walter Hufford and Ralph Harmon. Hufford said he objected to the resolution because there had been no prior notice of it and he wanted time to study the resolution. Before the County Board meeting adjourned, members voted to permit these counties to use the landfill until Oct. 25. The County Board will meet again Oct. 24, at which time it is expected a permanent resolution of the problem will be made.

Smith's resolution also gave Emmet, Antrim, Otsego, Crawford, and Presque Isle Counties until Jan. 1 to prepare and sign an operating agreement with Charlevoix County to use the landfill. Because of the resolution's defeat, that, too, will be discussed at the Oct. 24 meeting.

Charlevoix County's Solid Waste Management Plan was written over a period of two years by a committee appointed by the County Board and advised by the County Planning Department. Members of the committee were concerned about over-use of the landfill shortening the life of the facility as well as the effects of possible water and air pollution. Therefore, they limited use of the landfill to only five counties in addition to Charlevoix County.

Sherry and Bob Black of the Charlevoix Senior Citizens Center recently returned from a week's stay in Lansing during which they participated in the Senior Citizens Legislative Program. They worked in the office of participating legislators, including State Senator Mitch Irwin (left), and attended training sessions explaining the legislative process.

New point system needed

Gilbert and Slowinski and I took our lives in our own hands and began discussing archery hunting in a small room with neither pitch fork nor waders present.

Hunting is a wonderful sport, but there are certain aspects which could stand improvement. To begin with, there's no proper way of scoring it.

About the only point system available is the Boone & Crockett system. And that's only useful to hunters who get a buck. Just that one little drawback excludes the majority of archery hunters.

The Boone & Crockett point system is used for scoring the antlers of big bucks. It involves counting times, taking measurements and then doing some mathematical computations to come up with a total score to determine if you've shot a deer worth bragging about.

I am proposing a new point system, a system which goes beyond simply scoring the buck and allows a hunter to score all facets of the archery hunting season.

Being modest I shall leave my name off of the system's title and instead call it the Gilbert & Slowinski point system.

The Gilbert & Slowinski system for scoring an archery hunting season is as follows:

Add five points if you work late and go out to hunt even though there's less than an hour left of daylight left. A hunter's devotion to the sport must be rewarded.

Add four points if you climb a tree. A spirit of adventure should always be recognized.

Subtract five points if you fall out of a tree. A hunter must pay a price for being a klutz.

Add five points if after you fall from the tree, you get up, dust yourself off and climb that same tree again. No real hunter will let a tree get the best of him.

Subtract four points if you come in early because you get cold. Big game hunting isn't a sport for winos.

Add two points if you get cold, but still stay out until dark. A real hunter can cope with the elements.

If you get frostbite, measure the widest point of the frostbitten area and multiply that figure, in inches, by 2.75. Add the resulting number of points to your score. Courage in the face of adverse hunting conditions must be rewarded.

If you get frostbite so bad that you must be hospitalized, measure the area of frostbite lengthwise and multiply that figure by 4.8. Subtract the resulting number of points from your score. There are limits to the merits of being courageous.

If you see a deer, add one point. At least you were in the right part of the woods.

If you later lie to someone about how big the deer was or how close you were to it, add two points. Many a hunter who couldn't shoot straight has still been able to win the admiration of other hunters due to an ability to lie.

If you hear a deer snort, add one point. At least you were alert.

If you miss a shot at a deer, add three points. The addition of the points might in some small way compensate for the disappointment.

If you miss such an easy shot at a deer that you're too embarrassed to tell anybody about it, add three points. Hunters are a proud breed.

If you miss an easy shot and then make up a creative excuse such as "The wind took my arrow" or "I neglected to compensate for the curvature of the earth," add four points. Creativity is desirable among hunters.

If you actually get lucky and kill a buck, stop scoring immediately. Any hunter who kills a big buck is banned from using the Gilbert & Slowinski system. It's not for successful hunters. Successful hunters are to use Boone & Crockett system. And they don't need to be flaunting their scores to those of using the Gilbert & Slowinski system. We have our own standards of success.

CLOCKWISE

BOB CLOCK

Like father, like son? Not always

How far does the apple fall from the tree?

Sometimes quite a way. Occasionally one will roll into the next yard.

An example are the election campaigns being waged by Gary Probert, who is seeking re-election as Charlevoix mayor, and his dad, Norm, who would like to return to his old First Ward seat on the city council.

In his campaign literature, Gary Probert stresses the great strides the city has made during his administration in improving Charlevoix's so-called "infrastructure"—a $5 word for sewers, water lines, streets and other appurtenances of life in the big city.

Gary thinks his administration has done a first-rate job, and I have to agree. Sure, there have been some inconveniences with canyons dug in the middle of Bridge Street, traffic rerouted down State Street and the sidewalks torn up and hauled away.

And sure, it has cost a bundle of money. No doubt about it.

But the work needed to be done and the city looks better every day.

Sometimes it is frightening to think how much of Charlevoix was here before any of us were born and how very little the past few generations have done to fix things up.

How long should we expect to live off our inheritance?

Now comes Gary's dad, Norm, telling us that the downtown improvements have subjected merchants to a terrible hardship, costing them both customers and sales.

In an election flyer, Norm says he has supported infrastructure improvements, but in the present instance "excessive spending has effected (sic) the ability of our business community to operate competitively with surrounding communities."

"The excessive infrastructure programs have left our city streets blocked and in disarray. We are over extending the use of our facilities and the present council has left our unique community at the crossroads."

Norm is right when he says the construction has been a pain in the butt.

But the merchants would probably lose more money over a longer period of time if Charlevoix were content to rest on its oars for another generation or two while the rest of Northern Michigan moves ahead.

When the present reconstruction projects are completed, downtown Charlevoix should look as neat and polished as downtown Boyne City—which will be quite an accomplishment.

It is odd that the Proberts, father and son, look at city improvements from such different perspectives.

ALL MY LIFE, ever since I was no taller than a garbage can, I have been intimidated by waste haulers. Or garbage men. Or trash men.

Or, as we used to call them, "bogeymen."

When I was a kid in Detroit, household refuse was picked up by a scruffy old man in tattered clothes who drove a horse-drawn rig. When I'd hear the horse clapping down the alley, I would run and hide between our house and Weirs next door so the "bogeyman" wouldn't grab me and put me in his cart along with a lot of potato peelings and melon rinds.

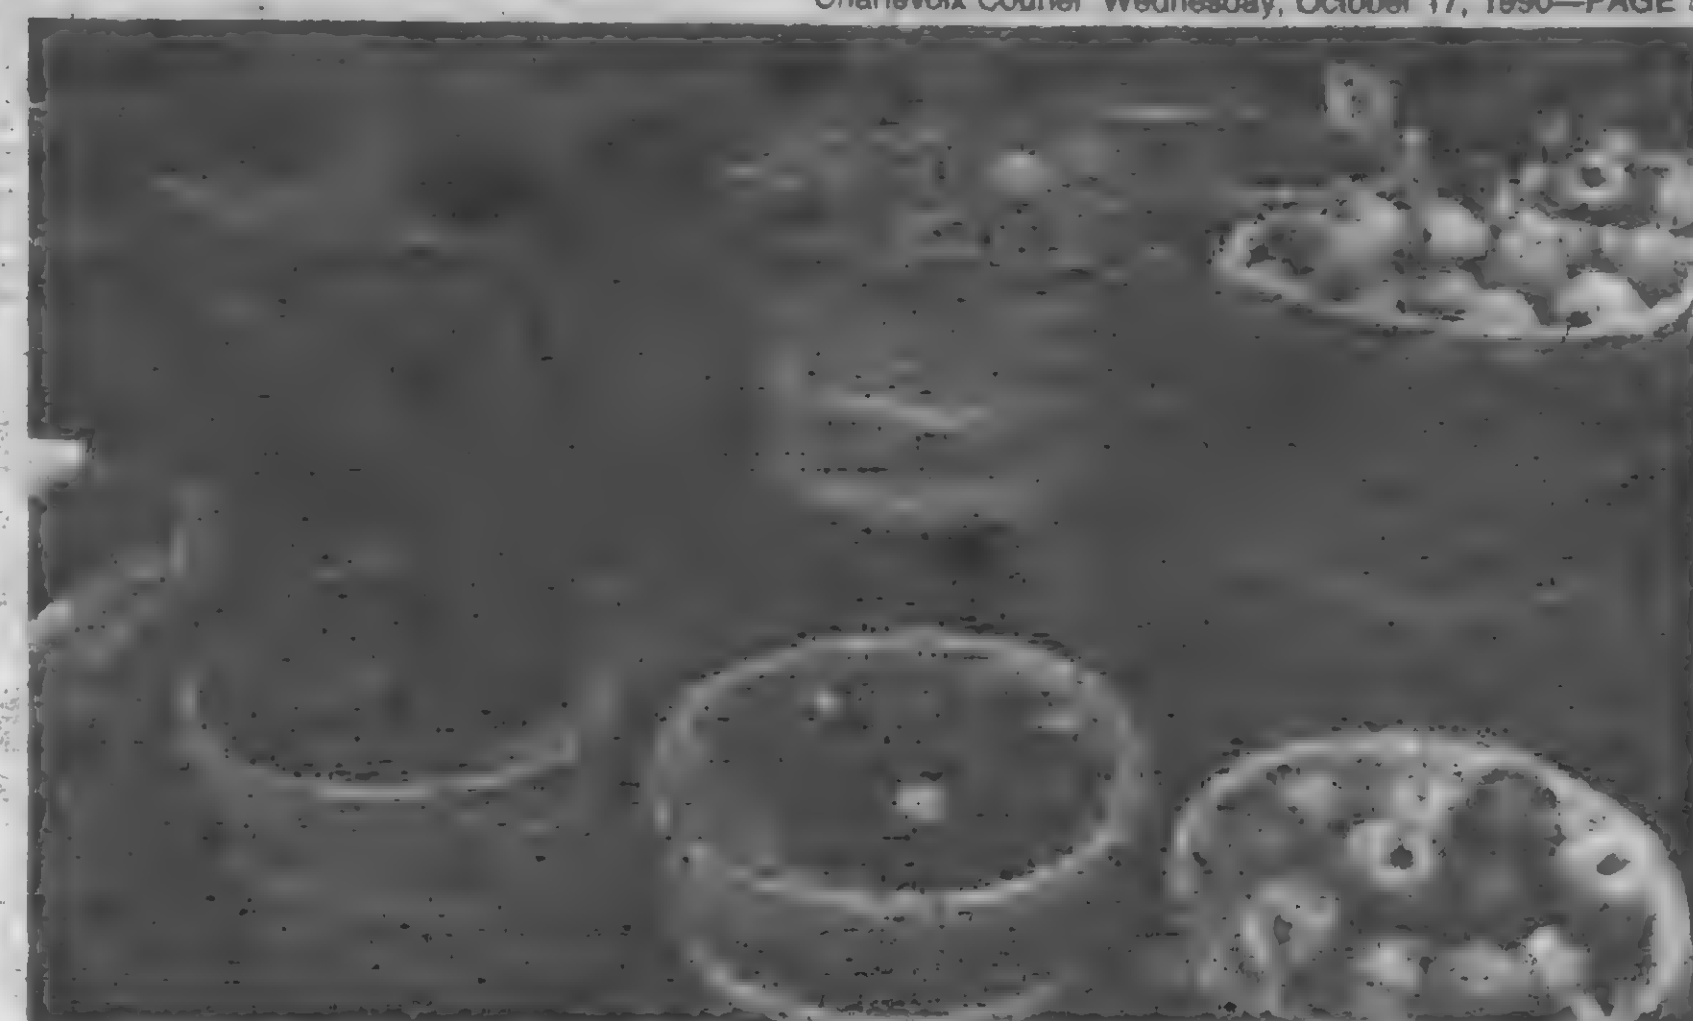

I would watch trembling from the shadow of the houses until the horse and wagon moved on. Then I would return to the backyard to play—saved once again from an ignominious fate at the hands of the "bogeyman."

Today's trash haulers are nattily-dressed young men working for a firm called Waste Management of Northern Michigan, which sounds like an agency of the United Nations.

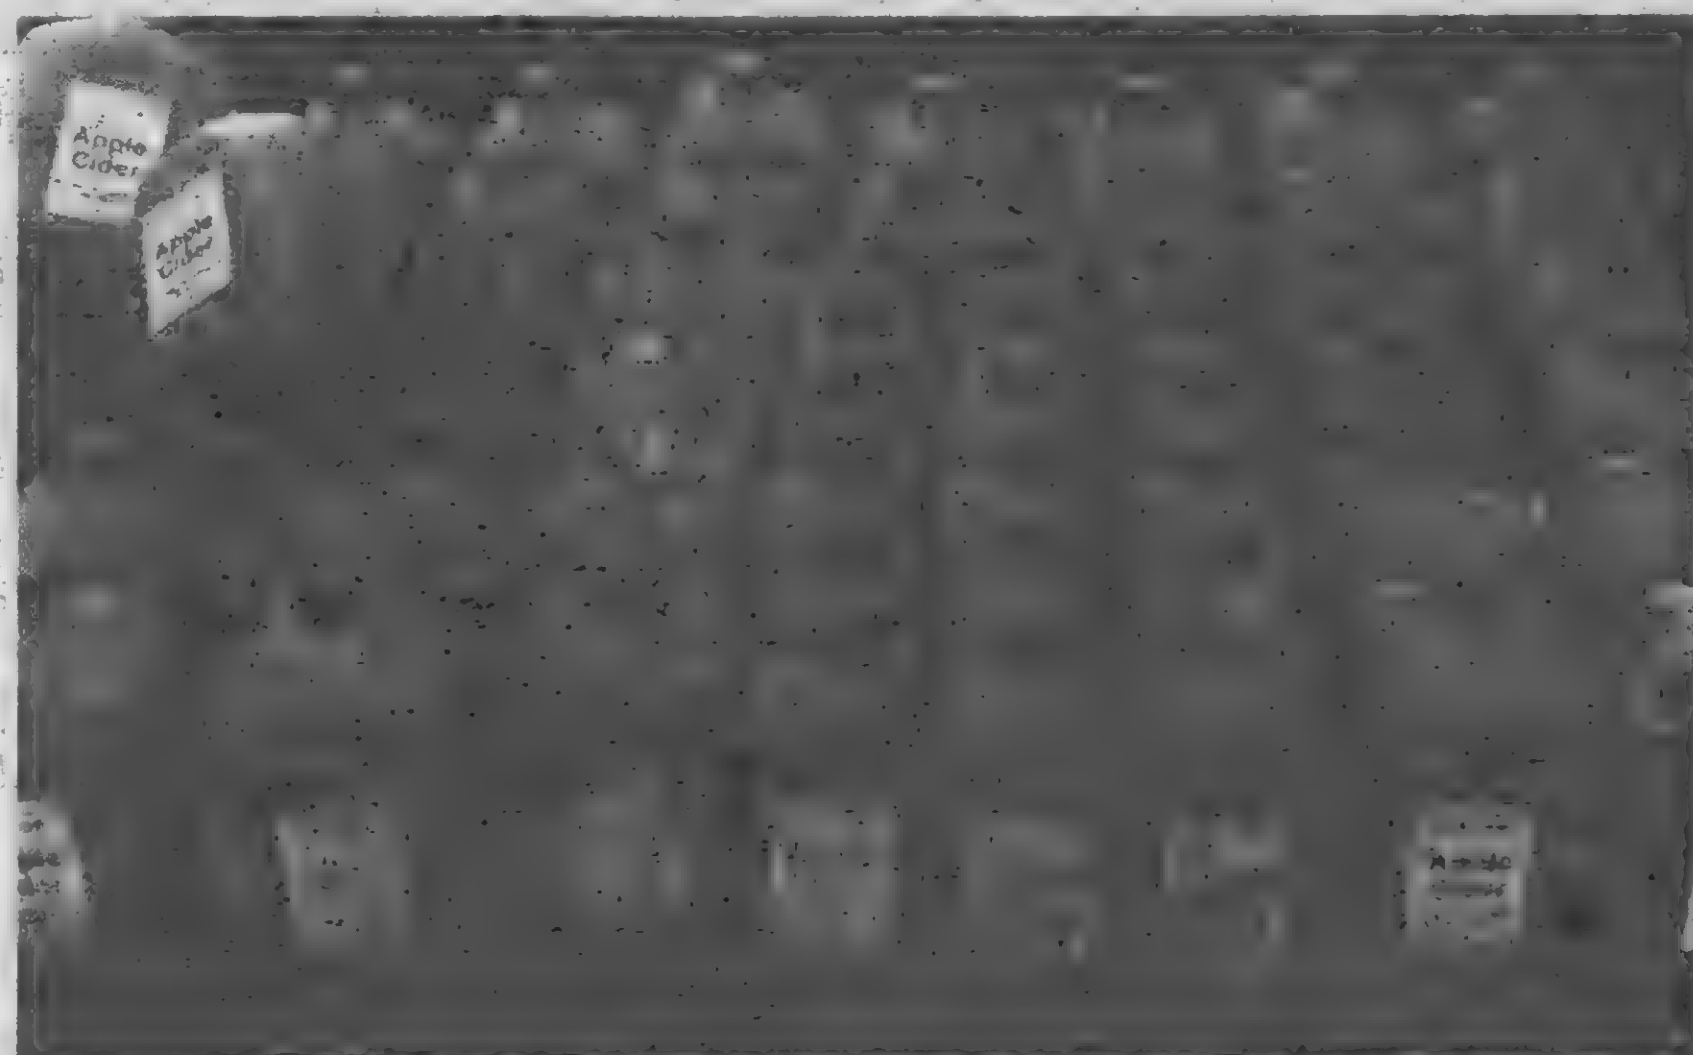

They tell me my pickup time is 7 a.m. Thursday morning, and if I don't have my trash at the curb by then I'll have to spend another week sniffing unsavory aromas from the back porch.

Some of my braver neighbors put their trash out the night before, and take their chances that no marauding animal will get into it as scatter egg shells and pork chop bones all over the front lawn.

But I am thoroughly intimidated. I can scarcely sleep Garbage Eve, fearful I won't awaken in time to get my trash out to the curb before the waste managers move into view.

These apples were among millions, well at least a lot of thousands displayed and sold at Charlevoix's annual Apple Festival. The weather cooperated reasonably well Saturday, but turned ugly Sunday and send customers and vendors scurrying for cover.

What would autumn be without apple cider? Apple cider is one of the things that soothes the loss at the end of summer. Jugs, jugs and more jugs of cider were for sale at this weekend's Apple Festival.

Hoffman - Miller

Elis-Jane Hoffman and E. Clayton Miller exchanged marriage vows Saturday afternoon, September 8, in St. Mary's Church in Charlevoix.

The bride is the daughter of Robert L. Hoffman of Charlevoix and Joan Hoffman of Gaylord. The bridegroom who lives in New York City, is the son of Frederick and Marcia Miller of Norman, Oklahoma.

The Rev. James Gardiner officiated at the double ring ceremony before approximately 180 guests. For the occasion, the church was decorated with lighted tapers and ivory pew bows tied with greens. Altar flowers were mauve and ivory orchids with ivory and green lilies.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a bridal gown of ivory satin with a Sabrina neckline appliques in Alencon lace and pearls. A butterfly bustle accented with a satin rosette extended to a chapel-length train and the fingertip veil was secured with a head band of ivory lace and seed pearls. The bride carried a bouquet of cascading white and ivory roses, stargaze lilies, and white freesias accented with ivory orchids.

Carla Sue Hoffman served her sister as maid of honor, and bridesmaids were Sandra Miller, Barbara Davidson, Anne Marie Haasch and Cheryl Frank. They wore forest green velvet tea-length gowns with satin sleeves and skirts fashioned with bows at the waist and sweetheart necklines. Their headpieces and jewelry of matching fabric were fashioned by the bride. Their cascading bouquets were of ivory and mauve stargaze lilies and roses.

Robert Miller served his brother as best man, and Paul Chronis, Michael Murray, Gavin Wilson, and Ken Morrison were groomsmen. James Flannagan and Ken Morrison were ushers.

Music for the ceremony was furnished by organist Jeanne Olach, and vocalists Mary Ann Stephan and Vincent Chew. The trumpet processional and recessional was played by Evelyn Wojcik.

The bride's parents hosted a reception at the Terrace Inn in Bay View, assisted by Cheryl Hoffman, mistress of ceremonies; Mariann Hoffman in charge of the cake; Jane Chickering, in charge of gifts; and Corinne Hoffman, in charge of the guest book.

The bridegroom's parents hosted the rehearsal dinner at the Grey Gables Inn.

Charlevoix forms new arts council

A Charlevoix Council for the Arts, which will sponsor theatrical, musical, dance and visual arts events in Charlevoix has been formed by the Charlevoix Waterfront Art Fair Committee.

The Charlevoix Council for the Arts, a non-profit organization, will use proceeds from the annual August Waterfront Art Fair to bring visual and performing arts events and artists to Charlevoix with a major focus on the Charlevoix schools, according to members of the new arts council board.

"We are extremely excited about this," said Suzi Reis, one of the organizers of the council. "The Waterfront Art Fair" was started in 1958 to bring fine arts and crafts to Charlevoix. Now the money generated by the art fair will be recycled to underwrite other arts experiences for the benefit of the whole community.

"We have a healthy budget and we should be able to do something really wonderful for Charlevoix," Reis continued.

Mary Ann Chew, secretary for the arts council remembered "when the Detroit Symphony came to Charlevoix several years ago. It was one of the highlights of the year. We plan to bring more such professional groups here."

"We need something so that children of this area can participate in the arts and be exposed to the arts. We have a lot of talented young people in Charlevoix," said Chew, a Charlevoix Elementary School teacher.

Mary Beth McGraw, also a board member and a teacher, added, "We see this as a vehicle to broaden our children's experience and understanding, not only of the arts, but of the world."

Council members also announced that the art fair's annual scholarship for a Charlevoix fine arts student will be enhanced by the new organization.

The council's plans include sponsoring at least one annual event in one of the four major areas of dance, theater, music and fine arts.

by Philip G. Schairbaum
First Congregational UCC

Recently my family and I had the privilege of visiting in the former GDR (East Germany). We were impressed by the strength and courage of the church people we met. Again and again we were reminded that "God works for the good in all things with those who love him" (Romans 8:28). In the little town of Kemnitz, just east of Greifswald, the pastor shared some particularly inspiring words which were "beacons of blessing" for everyone to hear. The following is an excerpt from his remarks.

"Our country is in a deep crisis. Wherever you look, you can see it. People are always talking about it. The crisis extends to all spheres of life. That makes people feel unsure, even afraid. Those who had the power were forced to step down. Our industry and commerce are in confusion. We will have a lot of unemployed people. Things which were clear up to now have become unpredictable. The old had no more validity; the new is not yet fully known. This is the situation.

OF BLESSINGS

"But isn't that the situation of people in general? Daily we hear of hunger, of war, of disaster and misfortune. The ecological problems rise above our heads. It becomes more and more difficult to cope with all of them. Perhaps some people feel they can no longer rule themselves. And that may be the all-decisive factor. In short, the many threats to our existence are questions which concern us all. We are all sitting in the same boat. But this boat shall be Noah's Ark.

"We shall not come to an end; we shall not perish. We shall be rescued. Again and again, the Bible shows us examples of people being saved from mortal danger. God acts for us when we are at an end. The Bible says: 'Listen, O people, to what descendency you belong. Love God, for God has done much for you. If we return to this Source, our future will be secured. — I believe this will happen to us here. God's love will lift up our life. All people shall hear what must first be in our hearts: Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all God's benefits.

Drivers: It's time to watch out for deer

Deer are becoming a growing traffic menace on Michigan roads, forcing Michigan motorists to stay extra alert this time of year.

According to Michigan State Police, nearly 47,000 car-deer accidents were reported in the state in 1989, the highest total ever for a single year. These accidents killed six people and injured 1,857.

In Charlevoix County last year, there were 525 car-deer accidents resulting in 21 injuries.

Michigan's deer herd is estimated at 1.6 million head, among the top three in the nation, so Michigan motorists are constantly exposed to the threat of deer on the roadways. The most hazardous time of year is the fall rutting season, when deer are on the move much more.

"Always be aware that no matter where you are in Michigan, deer are nearby," said Lt. Dan Smith, of the Michigan State Police Traffic Services Division. "When you see a deer along the road be especially alert. It usually means there are more deer right behind or close by, even if you cannot see them."

Smith, who said that 67 percent of car-deer accidents occur at night, advises motorists to watch for deer's eyes shining in the dark. If you see a deer at night, slow down and try blinking your headlights or sounding your horn.

"If a deer runs in front of your car, do not swerve to miss it," he said. "That's how most serious accidents happen. If you swerve, you will probably lose control of your car and hit a tree or roll over. That is a lot more dangerous than what might happen if you hit the deer."

Another word of caution from Smith: Do not approach the deer after you hit it. The animal may be only stunned and could leap up suddenly, causing injury to you. The accident should be reported immediately to the local police department.

"There are two things every Michigan driver should know about car-deer accidents," Smith said. "First, they can occur anywhere in the state, and second, when you see one deer, be alert for all the others that are nearby but cannot be seen."

Win Some Women tell plans for annual retreat

The 19th Annual Win-Some Women's Retreat has chosen as its theme this year "Transformed Not Conformed". The day and a half retreat will provide an opportunity for women from many communities to join together at the Boyne Mountain Convention Center on Friday and Saturday, November 2nd and 3rd, for a time of fellowship, song, prayer and encouragement.

Gary McSpadden of Nashville, Tennessee will be one of the two featured speakers plus he will provide the special music for the retreat. Early in his life, Gary determined rather than submit to the maneuvering toward success by the world, he would be molded for servanthood by the Lord. This decision has instilled in Gary qualities of humility, sensitivity and a commitment to ministry. Gary gently presents a life-changing message of Christ and His mercy.

Having completed a successful stint as guest host of the PTL Club under the direction of Jerry Falwell, Gary has launched his own television show "Backstage with Gary McSpadden" which will air on the Family Network. Responding to a deeper call, Gary and Carol, his wife of over 25 years, have established McSpadden Ministries which is spreading the Gospel in Haiti, England, Ireland, Scotland, and the United States as well as other countries.

The music ministry of Gary McSpadden became a thriving part of his church and as a result of his musical and ministerial reputation, Bill Gaither called Gary in 1977 and invited him to join the Gaither Trio as lead singer. In 1989 Gary expanded his Gaither involvement by becoming an original member of the Gaither Vocal Band. Simultaneous to Gary's participation with the Gaithers has been his continued focus on his solo music endeavors. He has recorded eight (8) solo albums and Local people to recall Hemingway

Two Michigan authors — Bill Ohle of Horton Bay and Lauri Anderson of Hancock — are participants in a weekend of events dedicated to Ernest Hemingway and sponsored by the Little Traverse Historical Society and Stafford's Perry Hotel, Petoskey.

Hemingway: Up in Petoskey is the theme of the October 19, 20 and 21 weekend, which is filled with films, tours of places the author wrote about or visited, and discussions of Hemingway's Michigan-based work.

"I think Ernest Hemingway had more influence on more people in the Twentieth Century than any other writer," says Lauri Anderson, whose book, Hunting Hemingway's Trout, was released by Atheneum publishers in September. Anderson, who is chairman of the department of language and literature at Suomi College in Hancock, Michigan, will speak following a 12:30 lunch at One Water Street, Boyne City, on Saturday, October 20. The 47-year-old professor holds degrees from the University of Maine, University of the Pacific, and Michigan State University.

Other events during the Hemingway weekend include a walking tour of a dozen Hemingway sites in Petoskey, beginning from Stafford's Perry Hotel Saturday at 10 a.m. The tour is conducted by Petoskey city planner Brad Leach, who has spent four years researching the history of the architectural sites as well as the life and literature of Hemingway, which connects them.

Bill Ohle, scholar, historian and author of How It Was in Horton Bay, will share his knowledge of Hemingway gathered from personal acquaintance as well as study and research. On Saturday afternoon, Ohle, a lifelong summer resident of Horton Bay, will trace the geography and events that tied Hemingway to the Horton Bay area.

On Saturday evening, a trout dinner at Stafford's Perry Hotel will be followed by reader's theater and discussion of four of Hemingway's Michigan-influenced works: The Killers, The Three Day Blow, Indian Camp, and The Torrents of Spring. Members of Little Traverse Civic Theater are preparing the readings to complement discussion by Tony Dumas and Maury Cohen, chairmen of the American Literature English department at North Central Michigan College in Petoskey; Bob Clock of Charlevoix, whose avocational study of Hemingway's life and work has spanned five decades; and Brad Leach.

The weekend concludes with a 9:30 a.m. breakfast Sunday, Oct. 21, at the Little Traverse Historical Society Museum, located in the former railroad depot on the Petoskey waterfront. Following the breakfast, a Hemingway documentary, The Early Years, will be shown. Ohle will be available to sign his book, and the museum's Hemingway exhibition will be open for viewing.

Rayders lose by one point too many

After a strong start, Charlevoix's offense sputtered in the second half of Friday's game to let the Petoskey Northmen squeak by with a 1-point victory, 14-13.

Not even the crossing of the 1,000-yard mark by quarterback Dan Terryberry could keep the Rayders in the winning column as Petoskey's defense dominated the second half, keeping the ball out of Rayder control.

Charlevoix led the scoring in the first half behind the arm of Terryberry. Terryberry first threw a 35-yard scoring strike to Doug Benoit. He then came right back with two key passes that carried to the 2-yard line and set up the second score.

Petoskey opened the scoring on its first possession, moving 59 yards in 11 plays with Brad Hasse, who had 109 yards in 25 carries for the game, bolting in from 14 yards out. Chad Corey kicked the extra point. The Northmen were hurt by their own mistakes on the next three possessions with the latter stalled by a penalty at the CHS-41.

In between, the Rayders had reached the Northmen 19 only to have a 36-yard field goal attempt blocked by Larry Maxwell.

Charlevoix's offense moved into high gear through the air in the final five minutes of the first half, twice taking advantage of poor Northmen punts that traveled 1 and 13 yards into the wind.

Charlevoix took possession at the CHS-46 after a sizable run by Eric McElroy. Terryberry evaded a strong rush to find Benoit in the end zone with 3:14 left in the half.

Terryberry booted the conversion.

On the second drive, the Rayders went to work from the Charlevoix and Petoskey football players banged heads for four quarters Friday night and the end Petoskey came away with a one-point victory.

Petoskey and took just six plays to go the distance.

Jody McGlinch, up from the junior varsity, ran 12 yards, Terryberry hit Jason Parrish with a 19-yard pass, then McElroy with a 15-yarder before McGlinch went over from 2 yards out with 30 seconds left in the half.

Probably the key play of the second half came early when Charlevoix had possession at the Petoskey 36 but fumbled with Brad Gray recovering for the Northmen.

"That was a very big play," Coach Roger Gowell said. "That was costly."

From that point on the Northmen were in control. The Northmen ran off 40 plays to 15 for the Rayders and held a 206-43 edge in yardage in the final two quarters.

"Defensively, in the second half we would have finally stopped them—other than the touchdown—but they just had the ball too long," Gowell said. Charlevoix is now 4-3 for the season.

A Northmen drive to the CHS-8 was stalled by a penalty that wiped out a scoring pass from Northmen quarterback Mike Bride to Brad Hasse.

After Charlevoix failed to move, the Northmen came right back, this time marching 55 yards in 12 plays, the key play being an 11-yard pass on third down from Bride to Robert Davidson that carried to the CHS-22. Two plays later Bride went 11 yards for the winning score.

Golfers place second in conference

HOUGHTON LAKE — Charlevoix's golf team is going back to the Class C state finals.

The Rayders earned a repeat trip Friday by finishing second in the 13-team regional.

First place went to Houghton Lake at 343, Charlevoix shot 352 and Clare had 356.

For Charlevoix, Luke LaBlance shot 45-51-86, Wayne Joy 48-40-88, Doug Sineway 47-41-88, Dan Boss 43-47-90 and Corey Crain 58-49-107.

"I think that is the best 18-holes score we have shot in several years," Coach Glen Taylor said. "Boss, Joy and Sineway all had their best scores since they have been on the varsity."

Charlevoix Also qualified for the state finals last year with LaBlance and Sineway members of that team.

Harbor Springs finished eighth at 391 and Boyne City 10th at 401.

For Harbor, Mark Williams shot 86, Clayton Novak, 97.

Tim Stedman, 98, Craig Gerard 110 and Mark Novak 110.

For Boyne City, Kurt Harvey shot 95, Tim Fall 96, Chris McKinney 104, Brandon Stadt 106 and Rich Hartwell 108.

Medalist was Brian Wyckoff of Houghton Lake with an 81. Two other golfers shot 81 but Wyckoff won based on results of the 18th hole which he birdied.

The state finals will be held Saturday, Oct. 20, at the Royal Scot Golf Course at Byron.

Charlevoix running back Erich McElroy scampers past a fallen Northman during the second half of Friday's game.

Yachting Notes

What a way to end the sailing season, two weeks of good wind, thanks Mom Nature! Those of you that didn't race missed two spectacular nights of racing, something we look forward to in the fall series. Remember last week we had a first time racer on board, we called him to see if he wanted to try this sail racing thing again. He had already found foul weather pants and was ready to go. He said the wind was blowing 10 mph, more than the week before and asked if we were really serious about going out. There were 14 of us out there.

The wind had gone down somewhat by 5:30 and the waves were not as bad as the week before due to the wind direction. For some reason there was a great variety of sail combinations on the same type of boat, everything from a big

#1 head sail down to a small storm jib, some with full mains and others with reefed mains. The reef is usually shook out on reach legs and down wind legs to gain more boat speed by putting more sail up. The trick here is to balance the boat with the right amount of sail up so it is not overpowered but yet have enough power to drive through the waves.

After the sails were selected and set, off the fleet went towards Oyster Bay, the first and windward mark, hoping all the way that the mark would be there and not blown up on someone's beach. It is really amazing how slow you feel you're going in heavy air up wind with the wind howling in your face and the spray coming over the deck. You want to get out and push the boat along. You have to keep looking at the speedometer to convince yourself that the boat is actually moving through the water at a very good rate.

At the first mark there were four boats in the spinnaker fleet that were close together and leading the fleet. The first three did not put up spinnakers upon rounding the mark but the fourth boat did and grabbed second spot by the next mark. Most of those that did fly chutes were really making time on the boats that chose a more conservative approach. We had reports of boats reaching 8 plus mph, on this leg with chutes, that's really flying in a sail boat! When sailing down wind and off wind in heavy air you really get a sense of speed, especially with a chute up!

New drug store celebrates grand opening

Charlevoix Commons Apothecary hosted a ribbon cutting ceremony Saturday morning to begin three days of grand opening festivities. The ribbon cutting was attended by Chamber of Commerce Ambassadors, local government officials and Good Neighbor Pharmacy regional director Harriet McCann.

John and Lani Ochs, owners of the new store, hosted the opening festivities.

"We're real happy. We think it's a beautiful store," Lani remarked. "The comments from customers have been very nice."

The Ochs also own Central Drug Store at the corner of Clinton and Bridge Streets. That store will remain where it is and as it is. They purchased Dockside Pharmacy and have incorporated its inventory into Charlevoix Commons Apothecary. Dockside owner and pharmacist Jim Williams will also stay with the business as it moves to M-66.

Although opening ceremonies took place this past weekend, Charlevoix Commons Apothecary actually opened its doors Sept. 24. The opening followed several months of planning, floor layouts, installing fixtures and deciding what products would best fill the needs of Charlevoix area customers.

Lani Ochs said she and her husband wanted the atmosphere to be similar to the downtown store. Prescription delivery will be offered and personal service emphasized.

In designing the interior of the store, the owners attempted to create a warm shopping atmosphere where people will feel welcome and comfortable.

The Apothecary store is more than twice as large as Central Drug. An expanded line of gifts, cards, jewelry, cosmetics and an enlarged health care area take up the additional space.

Charlevoix Commons Apothecary carries Good Neighbor Pharmacy products. Good Neighbor Pharmacy is an association of 1,000 independent pharmacies. Through the association, member pharmacies are able to buy good products at good prices. The association also helps pharmacies with promotions and provides information on management practices, changes in laws. The Good Neighbor Pharmacy association also publishes a quarterly health information newsletter and senior citizen coupon booklets.

Charlevoix hospital wins accreditation for 3 years

Charlevoix Area Hospital has received word that it has been accredited by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Health Care Organizations for the next three years.

The accreditation follows an intensive inspection of hospital procedures and practices this summer by three surveyors from the JCAHO. Major areas of review were nursing policies, physician record-keeping and safety practices. The accreditation means that Charlevoix Area Hospital complies with the standards for hospitals set by the organization.

Even though the accreditation review is voluntary, it determines whether or not a hospital will receive government reimbursement through the Medicare and Medicaid programs. Of the nation's 6,800 hospitals, 5,400 are accredited by the JCAHO.

until about 8 p.m. At dusk participating merchants will set out luminaries.

Chamber member Mary Facula says the event provides a good chance for residents to take advantage of special low prices and to acquaint them with friends missed during the busy summer.

For more information about the sale call the chamber of commerce at 536-7351.

Dear PhoneGuide:

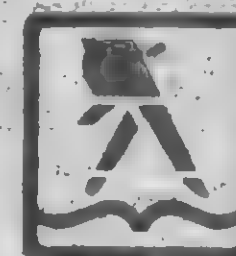

My Pest Control Business depends heavily on Yellow Pages Advertising to reach emergency buyers and to make it easy for present customers to find me.

As a small, but growing business, I was concerned with which area phone directory was receiving the most usage. Last year I conducted a two month survey asking each caller which phone book they were calling from. With over 400 calls logged, I was surprised and pleased to find that Yellow Pages was the book of choice by over 92%. With the survey and the yearly increase in my business, I am confident that my Yellow Pages investment with PhoneGuide is a wise choice.

Council Oks zoning change

With only one developer protesting, city council members swiftly approved changing the city's multiple housing zone from 15 units an acre to a scaled system based on the lot area.

Developers now need 8,000 square feet of lot area for the first unit they build, 6,000 square feet for each additional three-bedroom unit, 4,500 for each additional two-bedroom unit or 3,000 square feet for each additional one-bedroom or efficiency unit.

The new system allows a maximum 12.85 units, if they are all one bedroom or efficiency units.

Dick Georgi, the sole protester, argued that limiting development to 15 units is restrictive enough. With 15 units, a property owner can get a return on his or her investment, Georgi said.

Council members Bill Haggard, Pat Gaskin, Butch Russell and Ken Whitley voted for the change. Councilwoman Cheri Hoffman opposed it, saying she didn't see how the ordinance could differentiate between one, two or three bedroom units. Jim Potter was absent.

In other business, council members approved a site plan to expand Sally Ann Co. Hair Designs on Ferry Avenue and a site plan for Great Lakes Title Co. for a new office at 1004 Bridge St.

Council members also renewed the city's insurance coverage through the Michigan Municipal League pool. The 1990-91 premium has increased 3.45 percent overall, according to city manager Richard Brandt.

The city has added vehicles and equipment valued at $241,000 to the policy and the rate of insuring the buildings was increased by an inflation factor of 3.9 percent.

ing for the season. His unofficial total was 1,090 yards.

Defensively for the Rayders, Brian Coolman had 12 solo tackles and two assists, Jason Parrish had a 9-3 combination, Jordan Spencer 9-2, Luke Porath 6-3 and Robert Scholey 6-6. Scott Campbell had six solos and two assists before leaving the game with a hyper-extended knee late in the first half.

The loss of Campbell was considered a key blow.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1990 □ VOL. 106, NO. 45 □ CHARLEVOIX, MICH. □ 20 PAGES □ 50 CENTS □ PLUS TWO SUPPLEMENT

Several Charlevoix homes and businesses have been decorated for the autumn and Halloween season. This home is on Petoskey Avenue.

Nursing home moves forward

The Charlevoix County Department of Building Inspection has issued a permit to Liberator Health Care, Inc. of Columbus, Ohio to build a nursing home in Charlevoix.

The project was first announced about five years ago but has been held up by State red tape and, more recently, by contract changes necessitated by passage of time.

The facility is to be built on seven acres of land near the Charlevoix Area Hospital and physicians' offices. As originally planned, the first phase would consist of 49 skilled nursing beds and 11 beds for those who do not need constant care.

The structure was described as a one-story brick colonial building with semi-private and private rooms. Each room would have individual call-alert systems and individual temperature control. Amenities would include a beauty-barber salon, physical therapy clinic, several lounges, activities room, in-house laundry, and chapel.

The permit issued to Liberator shows an estimated cost of $979,230 for the building. This figure does not include cost of the land or electrical, plumbing, heating, or air conditioning costs.

Ralph McRae of Charlevoix has been acting as community liaison person for the nursing home. He says that equipment has been moved onto the grounds and excavation will start soon.

Area property taxes total $27 million

By Peg Ohle

Local units of government and schools in Charlevoix County will share more than $27 million in local property taxes which will be collected next year.

This figure is the "bottom line" of the Apportionment Report prepared by the County Equalization Department which will be considered by the County Board of Commissioners at its Oct. 24 meeting.

The proposed tax levies for next year are up nine percent over this year, when almost $25 million was billed. Increased property values, new construction, and newly voted millages account for the increase.

Taxing units in Charlevoix County include 15 townships, three cities, one village, eight school districts, and two intermediate school districts.

A "mill" is $1 for every $1,000 of a home and property's State Equalized Value (SEV). SEV is 50 percent of a home and property's theoretical market value.

Next year, the county will levy 4.5609 mills for operations, 0.2434 mills for the County Transit System, and 0.7301 mills for Grandview Medical Care Facility, for a total of 5.5344 mills.

School districts will levy varying millage rates ranging from 19.80 (Beaver Island) to 39.4120 (Ellsworth). The intermediate school districts will levy 2.2827 mills and 1.2600 mills respectively.

The City of Charlevoix will levy 15.2422 mills for operations, East Jordan will levy 18.60 mills for operations, Boyne City will levy 21.40 mills for operations, and the Village of Boyne Falls will levy 12.37 mills for operations.

In addition to the one mill allocated by the county, several townships have voted millage for varied purposes which they

by EDITH GILBERT

I had a very enlightening conversation with Dave Novotny, candidate for mayor. He is well informed regarding the important matters pertaining to city government and I learned a lot during our conversation.

He seemed surprised when I asked him what he thought about a merger between the city and township.

"Things can be worked out," he nodded. "The trend to merge is already underway when one considers the fact that the Elementary School, the Ski area, the Hospital—all linked to the needs of the city—are located in the surrounding township."

Novotny added that recent population shifts have pinpointed other advantages of a merger.

"How so?" I asked. Novotny replied that many city people have sold their homes in town and have moved out to the surrounding township. In turn, the city homes are being purchased by summer people, who don't vote or run for office.

The dwindling population is born out by fact. According to the master plan written in 1980, it was then estimated that Charlevoix's population would grow to 4200 citizens. Instead, the year 'round population has shrunk to a mere 3200 people. "Isn't there a problem with higher taxes in the city and lower taxes in the township?" I asked.

"The discrepancy between the two bodies of government will equalize," Novotny believes. "Because of growing expenses for expanding services in the township and some savings in consolidating two separate fire department and water systems, a merger can become more attractive to many sooner than anyone may think."

"Let's take the industrial park future expansion for example. This has to be a joint venture," he added. "Because the only land available is located in the township."

As former chairman of the City Plan Commission, Novotny is well aware of the need for future planning. He is hard at work updating the master plan as a zoning tool for the future.

According to Novotny, the Planning Commission follows the ordinances as written to the letter of the law, and if the council doesn't like the ordinances, they should be changed by the council. Novotny feels that the purpose of the planning commission is to reduce the work of the council. If so, why aren't they given the authority to do the job?

Charlevoix is one of the only cities in Michigan that need to send site plans from the planning commission to the city council council for approval. This can be a costly delay for everyone involved. Novotny feels strongly that that according to the city charter, the council is supposed to set policy and the city manager should be left free to implement the policy.

Novotny's goal by relegating authority is to support the work of all the committees and the city manager. His wish is to truly represent all the men and women in all three wards, both resorters and year 'round citizens; both merchant and industrialist; Realtor and professional; teacher and tradesman; adolescent and senior citizen.

I, for one, hope you'll give him the chance.

Towns make impressions

Ishpeming reminded me of a gold rush town from the old west. Not that I was around for the gold rush in the old west. Unfortunately, I missed that. I wasn't born until 1960. And by then the gold rush was pretty much down to its last nuggets.

But from what I've read, books such as Mark Twain's "Roughing It," the gold rush sounded like it was a pretty good time—what with stage coaches and high-noon shoot outs. These are things which television can recreate, but will never replace.

I hold a mental picture of what old west gold rush towns look like and for some reason Ishpeming brought that picture to mind.

While on vacation last week, my parents, my wife, our baby and I took a two-day trip into the Upper Peninsula. We stayed in Ishpeming and ventured into the heart of the community in search of a restaurant.

We found one. It was named "Buck's" restaurant. It was not one of these drive-through or stand-in-line-at-the-counter, fast food, adventure eating establishments. No, it was an old fashioned, sit-down, the waitress-will-be-with-you promptly kind of restaurant. At "Buck's" they serve food on a plate, not in a plastic foam box. And the silverware is metal, the way nature intended for silverware to be.

"Buck's" was a fine little restaurant. Although I ain't never pretended to be no fancy, high-falootin'...

(And just what is "falootin'?" It isn't something dirty is it? Could you sing about it in Florida without fear of being arrested? Have you ever seen someone faloot? And what's the difference between a high falooter and a low falooter? Forgive me, I go off on these tangents. Now, where was I?)

Although I ain't never pretended to be no fancy, high-falootin' cultured restaurant critic, I rate this joint with high acclaim. Next time you're in Ishpeming, stop at "Buck's." You won't regret it.

As we left "Buck's" and walked down the street, I looked at the building's and the mental picture of an old western gold rush town to came to mind. The buildings in downtown Ishpeming are packed kind of close together and are tall and square.

Not that I'm bothered by that. It gives the community its own sense of charm. It just reminds me of an old western gold rush town.

Somehow different towns just seem to remind me of different things.

Have you ever been to Houghton Lake? Well, I haven't been there in a while. As I said, we went to the U.P. last week and Houghton Lake isn't on the way.

But in the past, I've been to Houghton Lake a couple of times for one reason or another. Houghton Lake reminds me of the early 1960s. I always picture the early 1960s as a time when everybody got camper trailers and hit the highway to see the country.

When I'm in Houghton

Lake, I keep expecting to see Air Stream trailers drive past with stickers on them saying "Yellow Stone or Bust."

I'm not sure exactly what it is that leaves an impression of a town you merely pass through or only stay in for a brief time. I think it kind of depends on the town.

I always picture Reed City as a town where the traffic light is always red and the women are ugly. Before Reed City women, and the men who have married them, hear of this and form a lynch mob, please allow me to explain that I know this impression is not rooted in fact.

When I lived in Big Rapids I frequently passed through Reed City on my way to and from Charlevoix. For some reason, the first two or three times I passed through the town, I had to stop and wait for the traffic light and while waiting I saw ugly women walking down the street.

Of course, I'm certain that the experience which formed my impression of Reed City was purely coincidence. I don't for an instant believe there were spotters on the highway outside of town—spotters who would see me and radio ahead, "Swanson's coming. Catch him at the light and send out the ugly women."

Her business before the council was a little unusual. She wanted the council to evict her mother's tenant, Rose Daugherty, from her home at 401 E. Dixon Ave. on grounds that Mrs. Daugherty was running a nursing home in violation of R-1 zoning.

"What does your mother think of this?" I asked. "My mother doesn't know I'm in town," she answered.

Mrs. Daugherty, it is true, did have some old ladies living with her, but I didn't really think she was running a nursing home. As editor of the Charlevoix Courier, I ran an editorial saying that the council was being dragged into a long-standing family feud and that Mrs. Daugherty and her friends weren't causing any problem.

Council, however, sided with Miss Comfort and ordered Mrs. Daugherty to get rid of her houseguests.

Miss Comfort was angry with the stand the newspaper had taken and shortly after I received notice that she intended to sue. I waited for the other shoe to drop, but it didn't. The

Finding Comfort in canes

"A Comfort in her Old Age." That is the title of a short story I intend to write some day about Annabel Comfort, late of Charlevoix.

Miss Comfort, a spinster, died earlier this year at age 87 after spending several years at a nursing home in Gaylord. One of her major beneficiaries was the First Congregational Church of Charlevoix, which inherited her home on Nettleton Street.

Saturday the church held an estate auction to dispose of the last of Miss Comfort's personal belongings.

A native of Charlevoix, Miss Comfort studied music in Europe, became an accomplished musician and spent most of her life in Chicago.

I first met her more than 20 years ago at a meeting of the Charlevoix City Council. Although the amply proportioned Miss Comfort had difficulty climbing stairs because of troublesome joints and swollen legs, she managed—with the help of two canes—to make it to the second floor of city hall where council meetings were then held.

Her business before the council was a little unusual. She wanted the council to evict her mother's tenant, Rose Daugherty, from her home at 401 E. Dixon Ave. on grounds that Mrs. Daugherty was running a nursing home in violation of R-1 zoning.

"What does your mother think of this?" I asked. "My mother doesn't know I'm in town," she answered.

Mrs. Daugherty, it is true, did have some old ladies living with her, but I didn't really think she was running a nursing home. As editor of the Charlevoix Courier, I ran an editorial saying that the council was being dragged into a long-standing family feud and that Mrs. Daugherty and her friends weren't causing any problem.

Council, however, sided with Miss Comfort and ordered Mrs. Daugherty to get rid of her houseguests.

Miss Comfort was angry with the stand the newspaper had taken and shortly after I received notice that she intended to sue. I waited for the other shoe to drop, but it didn't. The suit was never filed, but I was never one of Miss Comfort's favorite people after that.

Eventually, Miss Comfort moved in with her mother and soon became a familiar figure on the streets of Charlevoix, stumping downtown a couple of times a week with the help of her two canes. If I wished her good-day, she would throw her head back and look the other way.

Miss Comfort never got along well with children either, particularly children who tormented her at Halloween. If she caught them soaping her windows or ringing her doorbell, she would come out on her porch and shake one of her canes at them. I warned my kids that they were looking for trouble if they messed with Miss Comfort.

But she was a good friend to animals. Many a neighborhood dog was invited to join her for afternoon tea.

THEN SOMETHING happened that made Miss Comfort and I as thick as raspberry jam. Both of our homes were vandalized the same night by boys throwing rocks and each of us lost a couple of windows.

For the next six weeks, Miss Comfort and I were on the phone at least once a day, discussing the progress of the investigation, and apprehension of the culprits and their eventual appearance in Probate Court. All of the victims were invited to attend the hearing and Judy and I sat with Miss Comfort in the courtroom.

Saturday morning when I was trotting over to the IGA to pick up my Detroit Free Press-I noticed the estate sale in progress at Miss Comfort's home. I couldn't resist the temptation to step inside and look around.

I was examining the tables, chairs and pictures and other household items when my eye fell on something I never expected to see again: Miss Comfort's canes hooked over the back of a chair. They were marked $1 each.

I don't know what came over me, but I knew I had to have the canes as a reminder that poor relationships sometimes have a happy ending.

They are now suspended from the back of a chair in the Clock dining room.

Letters to the Editor:

Campaign letter questioned

Editor, I recently received campaign literature from Gary Probert (our present mayor). Mayor Probert apparently has a very immature outlook of how city government functions, as he is claiming personal credit for the various infrastructure improvements throughout our town, as well as improvements in our industrial subdivision.

Virtually all of the recent infrastructure improvements were approved and planned for by previous administrations and Councils, from 1985 through 1988. Years of engineering and study were required before the actual work could be started. The recent infrastructure improvements would have thus occurred regardless of whether or not Gary Probert was the Mayor of Charlevoix.

The present Mayor did almost succeed, however, in destroying the Downtown Development Authority, a hardworking, unpaid group of volunteers dedicated to making Charlevoix's downtown business center an outstanding civic success. Only a viable downtown attracts and brings business to the whole community.

Perhaps the present Mayor could claim credit for providing adequate snowfalls at Mt. McSaubia and spectacular fall colors?

Sincerely,
Ralph A. McRae

Looking for representation

Editor, To the voters of Charlevoix, Everyone is part of the city government. Only because it is impractical to allow 3000 people to meet and make decisions, do we, instead, elect representatives from each ward to represent us, and do it for us. The key works in that sentence are "represent" and "us." Probably Abraham said it better when he said our government is "of the people, by the people, and for the people." But is ours?

We will not go to our voting place Nov. 6 and vote for the people who are the best looking, nor those who have the most money, nor the ones who live in the nicest houses; not even for the smartest ones. We will go and vote for the people who will represent us; in simple words, for those who will vote on issues that concern us the way we want them to vote. That's what they are there for; to represent what we want, not what they want.

If I were going to run for any office, any place, at any time I would make only one campaign promise, and that would be: "I promise that whenever I am required to vote on any issue I will vote as the majority of my constituents make known to me (by mail, phone, etc.) how they want me to vote. After all, the elected person is only a surrogate for the people who elect him or her. At the present time I am unable to communicate with my representatives in the council.

Which is why I am talking to you, the voters. Whether it's raining or snowing, or the sun is shining on Nov. 6, go and vote; and let there be one thing you ask yourself when you mark your ballot, i.e. "Will this person I am sending to represent me, vote as he wants or as he knows we want him to vote? If he disregards what we want then we have no representation. Rather we are being ruled by an oligarchy which does not serve us.

Sincerely,
Lyla Arvilla

Milner praised

exercise class directed by Jane Sooy. The Studio of Body Work, and she was able to amaze the rest of the class with her ability to do "sit-ups" at age 70. She was always ageless to her students and friends who know her, which made her death such a shock.

Fran will be remembered by people in Charlevoix for many different things, but most of all, she will be remembered as an educator, who touched the lives of her students in a special way.

Sincerely,
Pat Ranger

Michael Batterbee & Debra Wynsma

Wynsma - Batterbee

Debra S. Wynsma and Michael A. Batterbee exchanged marriage vows Saturday, Sept. 29 at the Bellflower Reformed Church in Ellsworth.

The Rev. Jim Heneveld officiated at the double ring rites before approximately 200 guests.

The bride is the daughter of Bill and Donna Wynsma of Ellsworth, and the bridegroom is the son of Arnie and Pat Batterbee of Grand Rapids.

For the occasion, the church was decorated with brass candelabra, large potted silk plants, trees, and baskets of garden flowers. The church pews were marked with white bows.

The bride's gown was fashioned of pearled taffeta with a sweetheart neckline trimmed with pearls, a bodice and basque waist accented with beads and sequins, a full skirt featuring a three-tier peplum and a chapel-length train, and a candy box bow with clusters of sequins accenting the back waistline.

The bride's double illusion fingertip veil with a ruffled pouf was attached to a wreath of fabric flowers, pearl accents, and floral sprays. She carried a cascade bouquet of silk lilies, roses, freesia, bear grass, English ivy, and Boston fern. The bride's bouquet and the bouquets of the attendants were designed by her cousin, Mrs. Ron Helmus.

Kathy Wynsma attended her sister as maid of honor, and Sherri Miller, another sister, Debbie Harkins, and Lisa Batterbee, sister of the bridegroom, were bridesmaids. They wore royal blue taffeta tea-length dresses with large white collars and carried bouquets featuring a large white silk lily, bear grass, and ferns tied with white tulle ribbon.

Pete Benedetto attended the bridegroom as best man, and Dave Backer, Mike Zdrodowski, and Rob Batterbee, brother of the bridegroom, were groomsmen. Adam Levitsky and Glen Schreitmueller served as ushers.

Organist Geneva DeYoung, pianist Julie Vollmer, and vocalists Jim Miller and JoAnn Best provided music for the ceremony. Patty Barendse, sister of the bridegroom, offered a reading.

The bride's parents hosted a reception at the Banks Township Community Center in Ellsworth, assisted by Bob and Julie Vollmer and JoAnn Best. The rehearsal dinner was hosted by the parents of the bridegroom at the East Jordan V.F.W. Hall.

Following a wedding trip through the eastern states, the newlyweds are at home in Westland.

Webster - Smith

Linda D. Webster and George D. Smith were married July 15 in the Webberville United Methodist Church.

The Rev. Wayne Babcock officiated at the double ring ceremony before an altar decorated with roses and carnations and a unity candle.

The bride is the daughter of Arthur and Phyllis Webster of Williamston, and the bridegroom is the son of Vane and Kate Smith of Charlevoix.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a white voile bridal gown with a high neck-lace V-yoke, bodice ruffle, full skirt with four-tier back, and satin-back bow. She carried a bouquet of pink and white roses with streamers on a Bible previously carried by her mother.

Janet Eildt, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor. She wore a floral dress in shades of blue, pink, and aqua and carried a spray of pink sweetheart roses.

Tim Bergmann assisted the bridegroom as best man, and Jim Webster, brother of the bride, and Roger Smith, brother of the bridegroom, were ushers.

Ruth West provided organ music for the ceremony, and Jim Webster was soloist.

A reception for 165 guests at the home of the bride's parents followed the marriage ceremony, after which the newlyweds left for a trip through Ontario and the Upper Peninsula. They are now at home in Cadillac, where the bridegroom is employed by Wilcox Associates and the bride works for Northern Michigan Harvestore Systems.

Ruth I. Jervis

the morning worship. He entered the sanctuary by himself looking for his grandmother. But to his surprise, he was approached by the pastor and asked to leave and not come back until he cut his hair and put on a suit. I'm sorry this happened, and I know God is angry.

This should never have happened! This action needs repentance and a good dose of the following scriptures: "Be kind and compassionate to one another, forgiving each other, just as in Christ God forgave you. Be imitators of God, therefore, as dearly loved children and live a life of love, just as Christ loved us" (Ephesians 4:32-5:2a, NIV) and "Jesus replied: 'Love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your mind.' This is the first and greatest commandment. And the second is like it: 'Love your neighbor as yourself.' All the Law and the Prophets hang on these two commandments" (Matthew 22:37-40, NIV).

I could go on and on, but this is more than enough to let whoever is seeking God come through our church doors. We are to love not condemn.

Charlevoix people serve in Desert Shield

By Peg Ohle

The conflict in the Middle East was brought closer to home last week when Anna Crain of Charlevoix brought in a list of eight local young people who are serving in the military forces in that part of the world.

One of the eight is Scott M. Crain, son of Anna and her husband, Mike. Anna Crain knew the names of some of Scott's friends who were in military service and undertook to get information about them and others. Her list of names and address of those in the Middle East follows:

PFC SCOTT M. CRAIN, 380-64-5398, HHC 1-18 Inf. (Scouts), Operation Desert Shield, APO NEW YORK 09315. The son of Mike and Anna Crain graduated from Charlevoix High School in 1989 and enlisted in the Army in August of that year.

MM3 MICHAEL D. DOHM, 382-88-0589, USS Almer Montgomery FF1082, M-1 Division, FPO MIAMI, FLORIDA 34092-1412. The son of William and Jan Dohm is also a Charlevoix High School graduate and joined the Navy after graduation.

son of Art and Pat Sutton graduated from Charlevoix High School and later joined the Army.

The Courier is printing this list of young men and women who are engaged in what now seems like a long siege in a strange area so their friends and acquaintances can send them communications from home. Please advise the Courier of any corrections or additions to the list.

Stress safety on Halloween

Thousands of tiny "ghosts and goblins" are gearing up to beg door-to-door for treats in Michigan this Halloween.

As part of its "Light Up A Life" program, AAA Michigan has developed safety tips to ensure a safe Halloween (Oct. 31). Safety tip cards are available to the public at all AAA area branches. Tips include:

Trick-or-treat while it is still light outside.

Wear bright costumes with reflective paint or tape and short enough to prevent tripping.

Wear face make-up instead of a mask.

Only visit homes with lighted porch lights. Never enter a stranger's home.

Carry a flashlight to light the way and alert motorists.

Cross streets at corners and look for traffic in all directions before stepping off a curb. Do not cross between parked cars or in the middle of the block.

It there is no sidewalk, walk facing traffic.

Adults should chaperone young children on their Halloween rounds and inspect candy before it is eaten.

Grange to host party

Barnard Grange will host a Halloween costume party Saturday, Oct. 27 at the Grange Hall on Barnard Road. Costumes will be judged between 8 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. Judging will be broken down into the following categories: most original, scariest, ugliest and best overall.

Costume judging will be followed by square and round dancing and a pot luck lunch. Music will be provided by the Grange Band, Jasper and the Tag-A-Longs.

A costume is not mandatory. People without a costume may just come as they are and join in the fun.

Students collecting cans

Among the gremlins and ghosts this Halloween in Charlevoix will be singing and performing members of Charlevoix High School's Performing Arts Team. Their trick or treat plan is to perform for returnable bottles and cans.

The students will be collecting the returnables in a fund raising drive to help underwrite the costs of their competitions in debate, drama and speech contests throughout the year. The Charlevoix Performing Arts Team competes statewide in each of the three areas and has set an outstanding record winning Class C State Championships in each division on a regular basis.

Small groups of singers and performers will go door-to-door through Charlevoix from 6 to 8 p.m. on Wednesday, October 31. The proceeds from the returnables will be used to defray costs of travel, costumes, set construction, royalties, and registration fees.

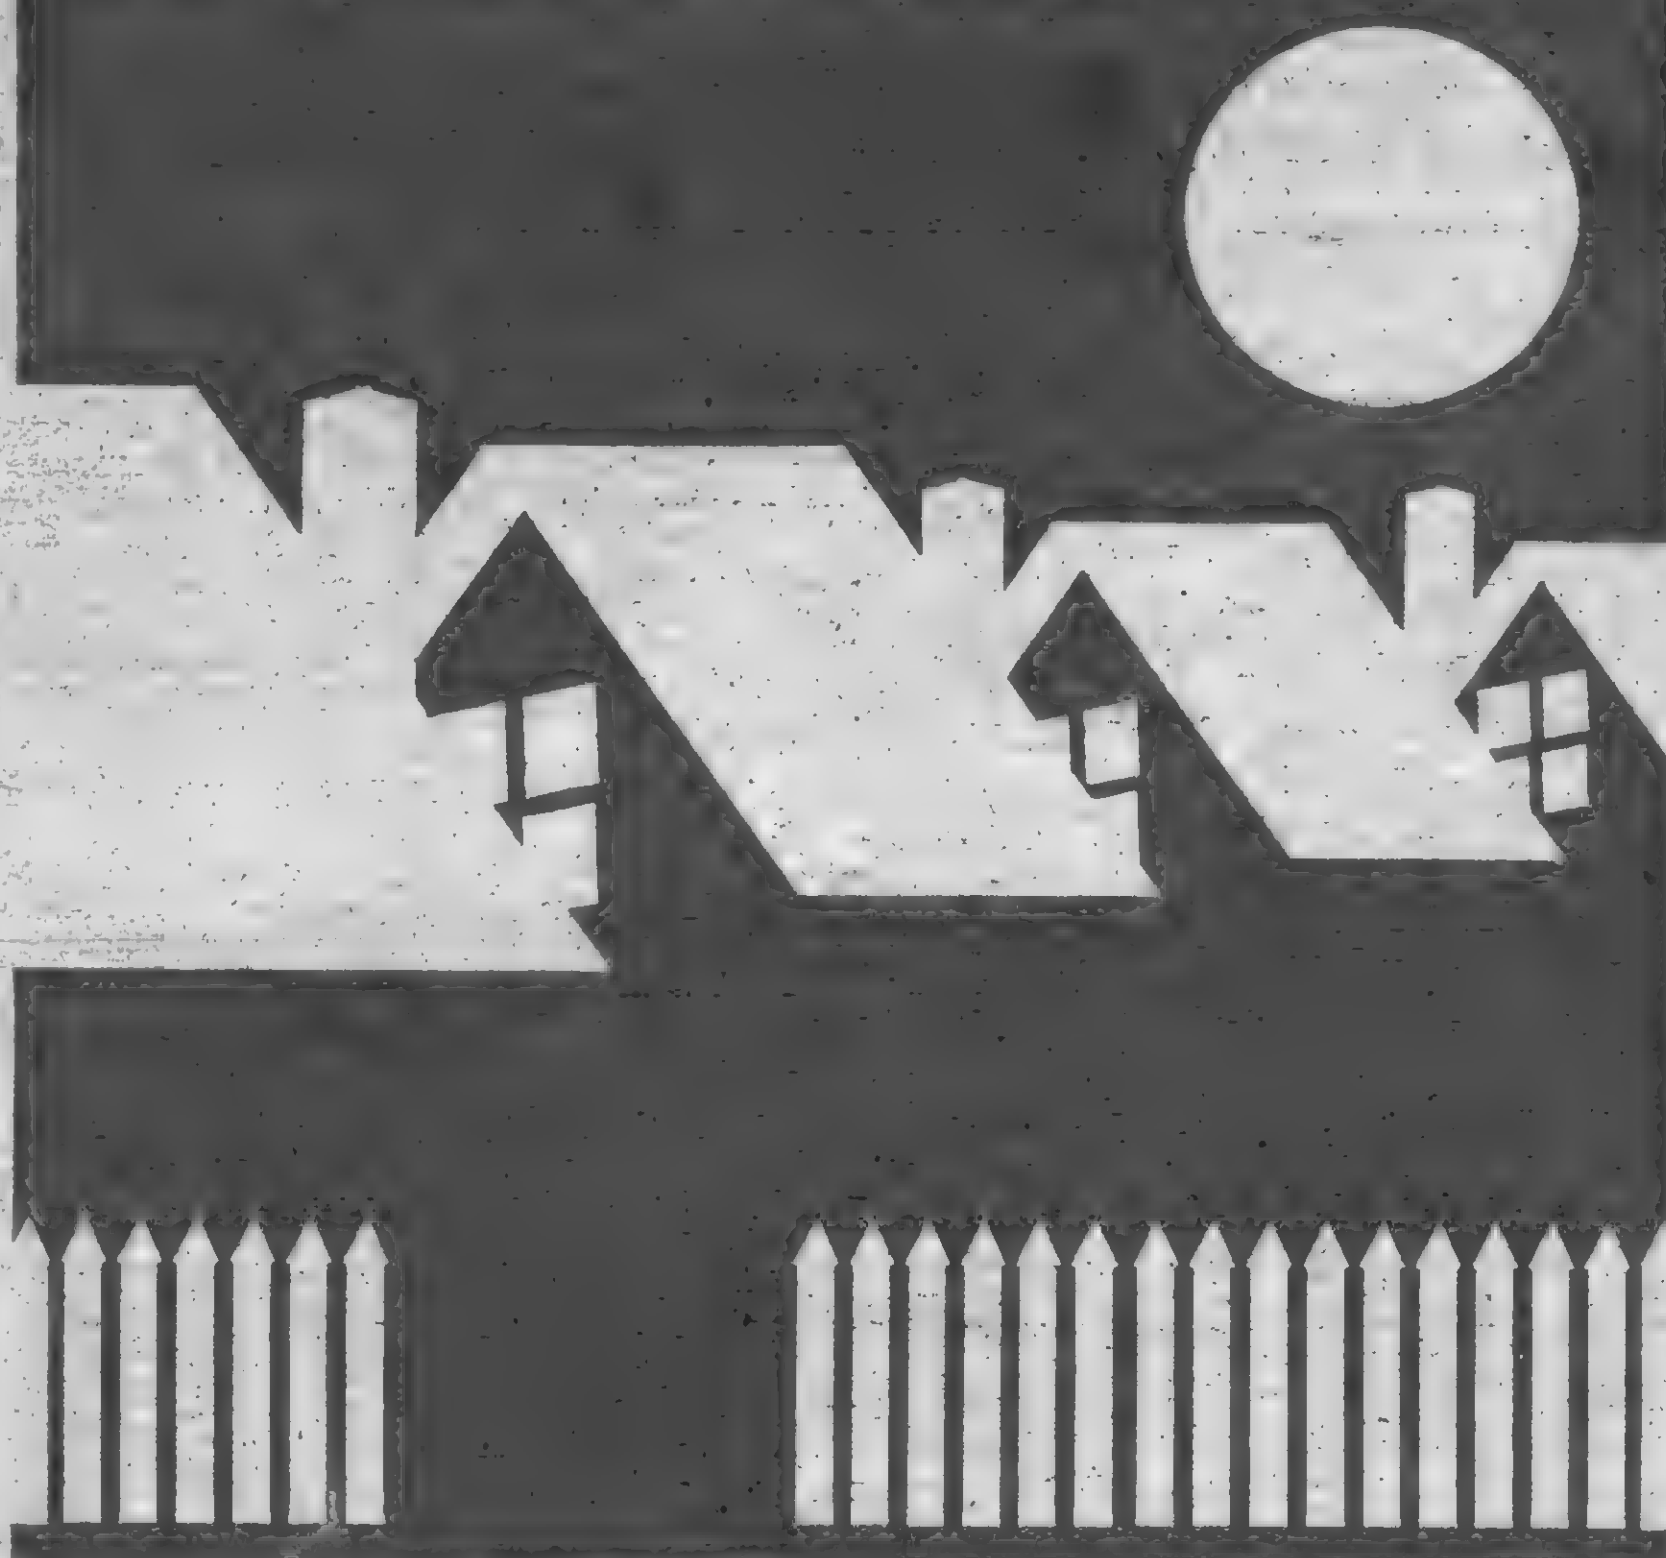

Kids may take art class

A drawing and painting class for children in the fourth through eighth grades will begin Oct. 30 at the Charlevoix Public Library. The class will be instructed by Barb Steele and is sponsored by the Crooked Tree Arts Council.

The class will meet from 3:30 p.m. to 5 p.m. on Tuesday afternoons through Dec. 4. The cost of the class is $45 per student. To register, phone the arts center at 347-4437.

Rayders sweep conference race

When the Pittsburgh Steelers acquired four Super Bowl rings, their battle cry became "One for the thumb." Well, if rings were given out for conference cross-country championships, Charlevoix coach Pete Spelles would be wearing rings on his toes.

The Charlevoix boys' team captured its eleventh straight conference championship when it took the Great Northern Conference Class C meet last week. In addition to the boys' win, the Rayder girls' team also won a conference title.

Paul Wakulat won the race with a time of 16:11, a second better than team mate Matt Smith. Chris Meier completed a 1-2-3 Rayder sweep with a time of 16:29. Mike Sevanski finished sixth in 16:53. Zack Pajtas placed ninth in 17:11. Matt Stargardt placed 12th in 17:51. Mike Ochs placed 20th in 18:17.

Charlevoix's team score (calculated by adding the places of the top five runners) was 21. Second place Elk Rapids finished with a team score of 68.

Holly Johnson of East Jordan set the pace in the girls' race with a time of 18:57. Charlevoix's top finisher was Julie Bush, who finished fourth in 20:40. Other Charlevoix runners, their places and times were: Elsa Conlan, fifth in 20:49; Melissa Eaton, 12th in 22:00; Kristin Ranville, 14th in 22:09; Ann Schairbaum, 17th in 22:52; Melissa Cox, 18th in 23:18; and Sandy Fershee, 19th in 23:20.

The girls' team score of 52 was four points better than Elk Rapids' score of 56.

This past Saturday, the boys' team put some icing on the conference crown by winning the Elk Rapids Invitational. Charlevoix finished with 37 points, while second place Traverse City totaled 50.

Andy Hayes won the 5K (3.1 mile) race with a time of 16:12. Sevanski placed second with a time of 16:21, one second ahead of Smith. Other Charlevoix runners, their places and times were: Meier, fifth in 16:32; Wakulat, ninth in 16:55; Stargardt, 20th in 17:49; Pajtas, 23rd in 18:07; Ochs, 32nd in 18:42.

The girls' team placed third, 61 points behind first place Petoskey. Bush was the top Rayder finisher, placing fifth with a time of 20:25. Other Rayder girls, their places and times were: Conlan, 13th in 21:21; Eaton, 20th in 22:13; Schairbaum, 23rd in 22:31; Cox, 25th in 23:13; and Erin Wright, 23:40.

This Saturday, Charlevoix will compete in the regional meet.

Golfers place 18th

After placing second in conference and regional meets, the Charlevoix golf team placed 18th among 21 schools at the state finals meet Saturday in Byron.

The Rayders shot a disappointing 367 as a team. In an earlier practice round they shot 340. Muskegon Catholic won the state meet with a 332.

Charlevoix players and their scores for the meet were: Luke LaBlanc - 89; Dan Boss - 91; Wayne Joy - 93; Doug Sineway - 94; and Corey Crain - 97.

Sineway is the team's only senior.

Rayders defeat Boyne City

Charlevoix ran and ran and ran some more in beating Boyne City 28-14 at Kipke Field Friday evening. The Rayders ran for more than 300 yards and passed for another 125 as they accumulated 450 yards in total offense.

The Rayder win spoiled the return of Boyne City coach Pat Klooster, a 1978 Charlevoix graduate who played on the Rayders' undefeated 1977 team.

Junior running back Brian Coolman had a huge night for the Rayders. Pity the team statistician. Behind the able blocking of his offensive line, Coolman covered real estate so fast it was difficult to record. If he would have had any more yards, it would have required a surveyor to figure out where they began and ended. Coolman totaled 241 yards on 10 carries.

Showing no partiality as to who they blocked for, the Rayder offensive line also freed sophomore running back Jody McGlinch for 80 yards on seven carries.

Charlevoix opened the scoring less than three minutes into the first quarter on a six-yard run by Coolman.

Early in the second quarter, Charlevoix led 21-0, but the Boyne City team refused to fold. Under Klooster's direction, the Ramblers have improved from previous years and have established a fairly potent rushing attack. Rambler running back Matt West accumulated 111 yards while sophomore Kevin Smith added 83.

Smith scored midway through the second quarter to cut the Rayder lead to 21-6.

In the second half, the teams traded touchdowns. Charlevoix scored on a 9-yard pass from Terryberry to Parrish. On the night, Terryberry completed five of six passes for 125 yards and two touchdowns.

Defensively for Charlevoix: Coolman had 15 tackles; Guy Gengle 11; Jordan Spencer 10; McGlinch 10; and Scott Kehrer 10.

Hoop team loses to Harbor

Charlevoix's girls basketball team fell to 1-9 in league play and 2-12 overall with a 50-37 loss at Harbor Springs last Thursday. The loss came in spite of 23 points from junior forward Gina Webster.

The win lifted Harbor Springs to 6-1 in the league and 9-5 overall.

Charlevoix fell behind early in the game and never made up the deficit. The Rayders shot ice cubes early in the game, scoring only two points in the first quarter. Charlevoix players also suffered a miserable night at the free throw line, making only one of 13 attempts.

Charlevoix also lost the junior varsity game 41-28. The Harbor Springs junior varsity team is undefeated this season.

Charlevoix's junior varsity and varsity teams are both young. Six of the nine varsity players are sophomores.

BUSINESS

Businesses receive help exporting products

The state of Michigan is offering a series of free seminars in nine cities next week for companies that wish to enter foreign markets or increase export sales.

Eight representatives of the World Trade Services division and the Michigan Export Development Authority will give practical advice on everything from how to obtain export credit insurance to business etiquette overseas.

The two-hour seminars will take place between Oct. 22 and 26 in Flint, Pontiac, Southgate, Roseville, Lansing, Kalamazoo, Grand Rapids, Traverse City and Sault Ste. Marie.

Representatives from the state's export offices in Toronto, Brussels, Hong Kong and Lagos, Nigeria will explain what services they can provide to Michigan companies that wish to do business in their regions of the world.

We hope these seminars will help Michigan companies learn about the assistance available from the state in foreign trade and use that assistance to its fullest potential," said Robert L. Mitchell, co-chair of the Michigan Task Force on International Trade and Director of the Michigan Department of Agriculture.

Michigan's merchandise exports totalled $14.9 billion last year, making it the sixth largest state in exports in the nation.

Michigan is ranked fifth in the nation for non-military jobs that are related to the export economy, with manufactured exports providing 125,300 jobs.

In the past year, the World Trade Services Division of the Michigan Department of Agriculture has sponsored participation in sales missions to Nigeria, Ghana, Senegal, Guatemala, Costa Rica, Indonesia, Singapore and Malaysia. The division also assisted more than 100 Michigan exhibitors that participated in international trade shows in 21 countries.

The Michigan Export Development Authority assists companies to expand their export sales. The authority provides working capital guarantees, export credit insurance and export finance consultation and education.

The nearest seminars to Charlevoix will be held at the following places, dates and times:

SCRAPBOOK

Long before skiing became a popular winter activity in Charlevoix, local residents entertained themselves during the winter months by racing their hobeleds down the South Hill. Note how the raceway was marked. Also note the latest model motor vehicle. Gerald Goss, who furnished the picture, says it was taken in the early 1920s.

Cross country team to defend state title

County seeks court millage

The proposition calling for an increase in taxes of 2.5 mills for three years to be put into a sinking fund to build a new Court House and renovate the present County Building brings to the attention of the general public some serious problems not generally known.

When the County Building was built in 1958, there were 22 people working in the building. Today there are 55. In 1958, the county had only two courts, Circuit and Probate, and only Circuit Court held jury trials. Today there are three courts (District Court was added in 1959) and all three courts hold jury trials. District Court does not have a court room of its own but shares the court room with Circuit Court. When trials are scheduled for the same day, District Court uses the Commissioners Room in the Annex building, stretching electric wires all over the room to accommodate sound equipment.

Probate Court space is inadequate today because the staff has grown from two persons in 1958 to eight in 1990. They are placed four each in two 15 by 15 foot offices where privacy of conversation is impossible. The Probate Judge has no office of his own. When he has research or other paper work to do, he takes it to his Emmet County office. In some instances, Charlevoix County Probate Court cases have been held in Emmet County because of lack of space for court officials, jurors, defendants, and spectators in the Charlevoix Probate court room.

The Circuit Court court room is plagued by noisy radiators which are often turned off and heat provided by portable heaters. The fan (there is no air conditioning) is equally noisy and when windows are opened, street and parking lot noises obliterate court room voices. The jury room must also operate with open windows in hot weather. As a result, deliberations can often be heard in the nearby parking lot. In one instance, the parking lot was cleared for a distance around the jury room windows.

There is no way to separate a jury from the public in the Charlevoix County building. The jury must use the public hallway to go from court room to jury room, thus personally exposing themselves to everyone interested in the case they are hearing.

The Circuit Court court room is accessible by four doors, necessitating extreme caution when criminal cases are being heard. However, the judge himself does not have direct access to the court room from his office. He must go through the parole office to get there, and often confidential parole hearings are going on.

These are some of the problems of space as far as the courts are concerned, but all the other department offices are cramped with people, records, and electronic equipment that keeps today's business going. All over the building, electric cords for computers wind around doors and windows, file cabinets are lined up in hallways, and county employees work elbow to elbow.

Two contend for Charlevoix mayor

A heated mayoral race with candidates who have expressed clear-cut differences on certain issues headlines the Nov. 6 city election.

Incumbent Gary Probert faces a challenge from former planning commission chairman Dave Novotny. The candidates differ on how many mills the city should levy for infrastructure repair - infrastructure being a ten-cent word for city streets, sidewalks, sewer and water systems.

The city is in the midst of a multi-year infrastructure repair program. The program followed research by an ad hoc committee appointed to study the city's infrastructure.

At the beginning of the infrastructure program, the city levied four mills, above and beyond general operational millage for infrastructure work. During the past two years, the council has reduced the infrastructure levy from four to three mills.

This past spring, the council debated the infrastructure levy before deciding on three, rather than four, mills by a 3-2 vote. Council members Butch Russell, Ken Whitley and Jim Potter voted for three mills. Cheri Hoffman and Pat Gaskin voted for four mills.

Council member Bill Haggard was absent the night the vote was taken, but at earlier meetings indicated he favored four mills. Had Haggard been present and voted for four mills, Probert would have been called upon to break the 3-3 tie. During discussion, Probert indicated he favored three mills.

A mill is $1 for every $1,000 of state equalized value (SEV). SEV is half of a property's theoretical market value. This year each mill levied by the city brought $78,000 into city coffers.

When the council decided to levy three rather than four mills for infrastructure repair, it meant that the city either had to do $78,000 less in repair work or find the money elsewhere. Rather than cutting back proposed repair work, at the suggestion of city manager Mike Wiesner the city took $78,000 from the sewer fund reserve to use for infrastructure repairs.

In campaigning for reelection, Probert continues to favor three rather than four mills for infrastructure work.

"I believe a possible recession is on the way and for no reason should the taxes be higher," he maintains. "Three mills for infrastructure is enough money being spent. If we taxed to four mills, the city would have been torn up even more than it is now. This is causing a large congestion and lack of revenue for city residents and merchants."

Novotny feels that cutting back on the millage levy slows the repair process and in the long run may lead to higher maintenance and repair costs.

He points out that for a city tax payer only 28 percent, or $280 out of every $1,000 in property taxes, goes to the city.

"If we delay infrastructure repairs, the cost will only continue to increase and may even skyrocket," Novotny contends. "If we don't do the infrastructure repairs which were originally implemented, our annual maintenance cost will also increase. I would recommend staying with the original plan."

"Infrastructure repairs are an event that happens to all cities. Things get old after a period of time and have to be replaced. We just happen to be the generation that is getting stuck. Compare infrastructure repair to a leaking roof. When it first starts to leak, the repair will be minimal, but let it go for a while, (and) now you have rotten roof boards and the cost of replacing the entire roof."

The two mayoral candidates are closer on other issues.

In regard to Charlevoix's future development, Novotny says, "The shortage of available land will limit future development in the City. Our community needs point to medium-income housing, especially for our seniors and young adults."

"Development should be controlled through the City ordinance and the master

...race for mayor

Probert says of future development, "I believe the master plan should address the question and answer it when adopted by the city council. I would like to see quality growth, not quantity."

Probert is a self-employed builder. He and his wife, Barbara Anne, have two children: Heather, seven, and Brett, five. He attended Charlevoix High School and Ferris State College.

Novotny is a sales representative for Wickes Lumber Co. He and his wife Diane have two sons: Jeff, 23, and Scott, 19. He attended Charlevoix High School and North Central Michigan College.

People affiliated with the candidates' campaigns say they expect the Nov. 6 election to be close. In the Aug. 6 primary election, Novotny received 302 votes, Probert 251 and former mayor Ken Staley 109.

Two contests for council seats

A race between former council member Shirley Roloff and John H. (Jackie) Cross III, a new face in city politics, appears to be the most interesting city council campaign. Roloff and Cross are competing for the third ward seat currently held by Jim Potter. Potter is not seeking re-election.

Incumbent Bill Haggard is being challenged by former council member Norm Probert in the first ward.

Ted Felter is the only candidate in the second ward. Felter is running for the seat currently held by Ken Whitley. Whitley did not file for re-election.

Roloff and Cross both responded to questions asked in a Courier questionnaire which was sent to all of the council candidates.

With regard to the Downtown Development Authority (DDA) and the use of tax increment financing to fund city projects, Cross wrote, "The Downtown Development Authority (DDA) and tax increment financing of city projects provides an important means to effect long term improvements in downtown Charlevoix, which is the center of our business community, without causing major increases in millage. Such projects should, however, be well defined so that we may accomplish the projects as soon as possible and then phase out the DDA."

Roloff wrote, "The DDA was established to help halt property value deterioration in the downtown area and to promote economic growth in the downtown area. We (now) have the DDA involved with the Ferry Beach project. The DDA has no business at Ferry Beach. There are boundaries for the DDA and Ferry Beach is not included in those boundaries. We are trying to over-use the DDA and this isn't right. I feel the DDA has fulfilled its need to the community."

For the past two years, the city council has debated whether to levy three or four mills for infrastructure improvements (i.e. improvements to street, sidewalk, sewer and water systems). Candidates were asked about their position on city property tax rates and infrastructure repairs.

Roloff wrote, "Our property taxes are already too high. I would keep them the same for the next couple of years and extend the time needed to complete any more work around town."

Cross replied, "Although city taxes are higher than merited, this is due primarily to the state equalized values as opposed to the city tax millage. I do not believe that a millage increase is necessary for the timely completion of infrastructure repairs."

The candidates also explained their position on future development in Charlevoix.

Cross said, "All development in Charlevoix must be controlled through implementation of the master plan and

OPINIONS

Letters to the Editor:

Tax increase opposed

Here's evidence that Charlevoix County government might actually need to use less — yes, I said less — rather than more millage (the one-half mill they are demanding) and perform more effectively in the future by continuing to use less mills.

As for the 2.5 mills the county commissioners also demand for three years to build a new courtroom. Let the area's 96 (up from a dozen or so in 1965), and primarily civil litigation practicing, lawyers finance their own business-facilitating courtroom; and pay the salary of their own judges. Why should citizen taxes pay for their non-criminal business physical plants and the employees thereof? Property owners are already furnishing very adequate courtrooms and judges to serve criminal justice.

So, I strongly request that the Charlevoix County Commissioners reduce the ad valorem property taxes, at the very least, by two mills as a beginning to realistic spending thereof. And do so at the earliest possible scheduling.

Why? Because Charlevoix County government is bloated with tax money. Money forced from protesting property owners. The county commissioners' basic problem is how to appear to be spending it reasonably; this isn't easy. The Nov. 6 attempt at underpricing a free new courtroom for civil cases is one instance of underhanded spending. Constantly increasing salaries and wages of the county's employees; plus creating new unnecessary county services (building, plumbing and electrical permits department) are other ways of spending all that extra property owners' money. The sheriff's department is another interesting situation. For years selected area lawyers have helped the county commissioners with another seemingly reasonable way to spend those hundreds of thousands of surplus dollars: Increase the personnel at the sheriff's. And so they have over the years. In '65, five people worked there. In 1990 there are 27, an increase of 22 people.

Swelling the sheriff's budget from $34,500 in 1965 to $717,452 in 1990. Charlevoix County, in 1965, had a year-around population of 14,981, which has since increased by some 6,400 to a 1990 year-around total of 21,381 — give or take a hundred or so. Seemingly this would call for the addition of almost two more, maybe even three more deputies; not a staff of 19 or 20 beyond that number.

This results in a great deal of make-work activity. Including nuisance tickets, stupid minor arrests etc. etc. In essence, a happy hunting ground for cop chasing lawyers. It also primes the victims thereof for civil litigation. More cop cars are bought, more gasoline wasted.

Judge Pajtas, a word merchant lawyer before Charlevoix voters decided to employ him as their circuit court judge — at his insistence — is now helping out his "officers of the court" lawyer buddies. This upstart newcomer has the unmitigated gall to promote another courtroom in Charlevoix County's Charlevoix and, recently a second circuit court judge. He hustles up figures which totally ignore the criminal case numbers in relation to the

REASONABLE TO ME
L. SCOTT SWANSON

Save the daylight

Maybe I ask too many questions, but with this daylight savings stuff: Why are we saving it? And what are we saving it from?

Is there something out there getting our daylight? And is it something we can stop?

Obviously something is getting our daylight. Even the most casual observer surely must have noticed that recently with each and every day we've been seeing less and less daylight.

I'm sure that if you asked around, you could find some old person who would tell you that in the old days there used to be a lot more daylight. Why, electricity would have been invented years earlier, but there was no need. Not with all that daylight.

But then there got to be more people and pollution and declining moral standards. All of these shifts in population, environmental issues and values threw the earth out of kilter. Now it's off balance one way for half the year and off balance the other way for the other half of the year.

People decided that rather than to right the world it would be easier just to adjust clocks and try to compensate. But is righting the world really such a monumental challenge? All it takes is a little cooperation. Is that too much to ask for?

Next fall, when the earth begins tilting to the north and taking our hemisphere away from the sun, let's all try something different. Instead of setting clocks back an hour, let's have every man, woman and child get out of bed at 2 a.m. on a Sunday morning and lean to the south.

We've been passive and let nature take its course for too long. It's time to take a stand.

No doubt proponents of clock adjusting will be quick to try to poke holes in this plan. Any time you propose a change, you're bound to run up against detractors.

I can just hear them beefing now.

"We can't lean to the south and keep the earth from shifting? What will the people in the southern hemisphere think. They'll be stuck with winter all year long."

"And we'll be stuck with summer all year long. And you know what that means? The tourists will never go home and the skiing will be terrible."

So maybe a more moderate proposal is in order. After all, having all of those people leaning to the south for all their worth could be dangerous. If we leaned too hard, the earth might go beyond perpendicular and flop right over on its side.

The ramifications of that would certainly be ugly. North would be west, south would be east and vice versa. What would become of even simple pleasures such as watching the sun set? Instead of going down to the Lake Michigan shoreline and looking out across the horizon, we'd have to face the Upper Peninsula and look straight overhead. People driving south for the winter would have the sun in their eyes for the whole trip.

Letters to the Editor:

Mayoral advertisement challenged

Editor,

Your paper of Oct. 17, 1990 contained an advertisement of a reprint of an editorial that appeared in your Dec. 20, 1990 issue. This advertisement was paid for by DBB Enterprises Inc. The registered agent for this Corporation is Daniel F. Barron who also is President of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce.

Had he or your Editor taken time to go to the City Hall and listen to the tape recording of the entire meeting concerning the appointments of commission members and also asked the City Clerk for her comments on what was said to her, the boxed-in comments included in the reprint would have been found to be untrue. At no time was anybody prevented from expressing their opinion. All Council members in office and about-to-be members were specifically asked for comments. One about-to-be councilwoman was present and was asked for her comments. The other about-to-be councilwoman was not present nor was councilman Haggard. After the discussion period, all appointment was contingent on a conflict of interest determination by the City Attorney. At the first meeting after Jan. 7, 1990, with all council members present, this matter was corrected. A former member of that commission was reappointed. Not one objection to the voting of the previous meeting was raised. Neither the City Charter nor the City Ordinances contain instruction as to when appointments can be made. The City Attorney confirmed this by statement and letter. Therefore, no rules could be or were changed.

Your Oct. 24, 1990 issue has an editorial (Editorial) of a conversation with the Mayoral Candidate Dave Novotny. He proposes consolidation of City and Township. This to be possible in spite of the fact; the Township would have to share their $250,000 increase in tax base coming from the expiration of the Medusa Cement tax abatement and their property tax rates by 25 percent to equal what the City resident pays.

Better we have a Mayor who will address the problems that the City faces now: — A water plant that cannot supply design capacity. — Spending taxpayers money to buy back the remainder of the Star of Charlevoix dockage contract, now that the Chamber of Commerce has a better idea.

— Finance and build a $2.5 million Department of Public Works Building, raising water, sewer and electric rates as one way to finance this project suggested by the City Manager.

— Use City money up front to finance a Township sewer connection to the City Sewage Plant as called for in an engineering report, with Dixon Ave. and Bridge St. to be torn up again as well as new pump stations at the Depot and Beaver Island Boat Dock. All this without knowing if the Sewage Plant or sewage mains between the B.I.B. dock and plant can handle the increased load.

Better we should retain a Mayor who knows the City needs and has shown the ability to control Council meetings and allow all parties to be heard.

Campaign member responds

Editor,

I am writing in response to the preceding letter regarding a certain council meeting which took place in December of 1989. I understand but take exception to the desire of that letter's authors to rewrite history 10 months after the fact.

I was present at the subject council meeting, as was the Editor of this paper. Mayor Probert did, as reported without objection in December of 1989, "for all intents and purposes" instruct Clerk Arlene Staley "to keep her mouth shut unless she had something to say which supported his position."

The voters of Charlevoix have the right to determine whether such public conduct is acceptable.

Towsley recalls Loeb Farm

By GREGORY D. REYNOLDS
Harold Towsley spent quite a lively year at the now defunct Loeb Farm in 1927. There he spent his sixteenth year of life working in the milk barns with some of America's best milk producing cows, largest bulls, and noisiest tourists.

"I began working at the Loeb Farm in April of 1927 and stayed on there until they closed down the farm about a year later. I was sixteen years old and lived in the boarding house across the road, near Loeb Creek. There were about seven borders besides my family. Some were teamsters, farm hands, and men who worked in the barns. A couple of those men were Forest Brown, George Holmes, and Mark Petersen. Besides that, boarding house, there were several tenant houses in the area of the farm. One double house unit was where the Sugar Bush Knoll housing development is, one was on the corner of Wickersham and U.S. 66, and a couple others around there. Dr. Simmons lived in one of the stone houses inside of the arch, near the river.

Harold Towsley is the subject of this week's edition of Charlevoix Memories. Towsley worked at the Loeb Farm as a 16-year-old boy.

"When I was working in the milk barns things were always happening. For instance, when I had to feed the calves their milk, the visitors, especially the kids, would be practically right in the pen with me. But one time those calves saw me enter the pen and one of those animals went right for my bucket with a leap. Boy! Those kids jumped back so fast they tripped all over themselves trying to get out of the way."

"In the barn things were just as busy. We had milk cows that had to be milked four times, three times, two times, and one time a day. I had the three and two time a day cows while I worked there. We used pressurized APEX milkers to milk the cows and then poured the milk into ten gallon milk cans and then weighed each cow's milk by the pound and kept record of how much she gave each day. Dr. Simmons was real accurate with those milk records.

"I also worked with the bulls in the barns. There were three bulls I remember very well. "Charlevoix Ormsby-Karen", "Charlevoix Carnation Mutual Matador", and one known as "Pinky". One day I was asked to clean "Pinky's" stall for the weekend tourist crowds. So I went in there and he just kept looking at me and trying to make me nervous. But I just kept eyeing him and raising my pitchfork when he grunted and he let me work, but I didn't like being in those bull pens. Those bulls were quite large and with a big steel ring in their noses looked kind of mean to a young man."

"The farm veterinarian, Dr. Simmons, controlled the milk cows, bulls, horses, pigs, chickens, and all the other livestock we had. He chose the cows to be bred and the cows to let 'freshen' for a few weeks to let them regain their milk production."

"When a cow or some other stock had to be transported to Chicago or somewhere else, we took them down to the old co-op loading station by truck and put them on for a trip to market. And when the Loeb Farm eventually gave up on farming, all the livestock was hauled away by train, never to be replaced again."

Health Department urges vaccinations

Do you remember all of those symptoms that occur with the flu? High fever, body aches and pains, frequent visits to the bathroom and a host of other unpleasant problems can be avoided if you become vaccinated against this year's influenza?

This year's "flu season" has the potential to be as severe as last year's. An estimated 58,000 Americans died from the flu last year. Many of those deaths and much needless pain and suffering could have been prevented with one simple vaccination.

Dr. Brian Youngs, Medical Director for District Health Department, "No. 3, recommends that people in the following groups receive the immunizations:

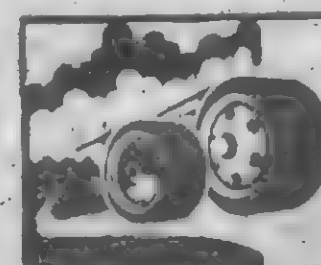

- Persons age 65 years or older
- Residents of nursing homes and other institutions housing persons of any age with serious long term health problems.

Adults and children with chronic cardiovascular (i.e. heart) or lung problems which cause them to see a doctor regularly. This includes children with asthma.

"People of any age who have regularly seen a doctor for treatment of kidney disease, cystic fibrosis, diabetes, anemia ("low blood"), cancer or an immunological disorder (or use certain types of medicines) that lowers the body's normal resistance to infections, and any other chronic condition which would be complicated by the flu.

-Children and teenagers (6 mo.-18 years of age) on long-term treatment with aspirin who, if they catch the flu, may be at risk of getting Reye's Syndrome.

OF BLESSINGS

sees new political and economic uncertainties emerging. God needs more and more people to stand up for the positive truths of their faith. Virtually every church that I am acquainted with sings "a mighty fortress is our God, a bulwark never failing." Taken from Psalm 46, Luther penned these words to graphically remind us of the tremendous power and security that God is waiting to grant to every believer.

First hand memories tell me how easily my own faith can be shaken. Without God's grace, I would have gotten discouraged long ago. It builds up my hopes to know that with God, even if the very ground under my feet crumbles, I have the promise of His ever present help.

Consider the place of faith in your own life. If it lacks the power you know in your heart that it is supposed to have, perhaps it is time for you to have your own version of the reformation. God stands more than prepared to guide you back to the highway of holiness. He has set before each of us. There is also a world around you that needs to hear first hand the strength of what you believe.

Addington opposes Ostling

Republican State Representative Ralph Ostling of Roscommon is seeking re-election for his 10th term in office. He is being challenged for the third time by Democrat Ellen Addington of Ellsworth.

Ostling started his career as a school teacher and served as a township official before going to Lansing. He is currently vice-chairman of the House Appropriations Committee and lists as an important accomplishment of his time in the legislature the passage of a bill which discharged loans made to farmers who suffered heavy losses during the P.B.B. disaster of the early 1970s. Many area dairy farmers were victims of this disaster.

While running for office four years ago, Ostling said, "I think in four or five years we will move away from property taxes toward income or sales taxes as a way to finance local school districts."

Asked about that this year, a representative from Ostling's office said Ostling had not voted for any of the tax reform bills because they would not have helped school districts like Charlevoix which are "out of formula" as far as state aid is concerned. "Out of formula" means that the Charlevoix School District has a higher than average property tax base per pupil and is not eligible for the state aid money that many school districts receive.

The spokesman in Ostling's office said he is continuing his fight to take the burden of supporting schools off property owners. He did vote for Senate Bill 832, which somewhat helped most out-of-formula schools, but he is still leaning toward some kind of a sales tax, according to the spokesman.

Other legislation taking up Ostling's time recently has been a bill to revise subdivision control fees to help surveyors with earlier payments, a bill to make malicious destruction of state parks property a felony, and a bill to require an input study for rules and regulations on game fishing. Most of his time is taken up by appropriation matters, however.

Addington is a retired school teacher who spent most of her career working with behavioral problem adolescents.

She offered several suggestions as possibilities for changing the means of educational funding. Among them are the following:

Perhaps Michigan could do as Hawaii does: Set up only one school district in the state, thus leveling out the tax base. Or, if a state-wide district seems too large, area school districts might be considered.

Raise "sin taxes," i.e. taxes on alcoholic beverages, cigarettes, and some so-called luxury items.

As to increases in sales or income taxes for schools, Addington believes that all

Lynchs express gratitude

Editor,

We wish to express our heartfelt thanks for the generous support we have received, and continue to receive, from the people of Charlevoix. From the Benefit Pancake Breakfast hosted by the Knights of Columbus, along with the American Legion, to those who have so generously contributed to the LCDR Richard Lynch Defense Fund established by friends, we are truly overwhelmed. We appreciate everyone's concern, prayers and financial support to help defray legal fees incurred during the recent Court Martial. Everyone's support has made it so much easier (although still very difficult) to do what we felt had to be done. It makes us proud to be part of such a caring community, and to be considered friends of such special people. THANKS AGAIN!

Thank you,
Dianne & Rich Lynch

Young people do good things

Editor,

I'd like to take this opportunity to let your readers know that many young people from Charlevoix do some pretty great things that don't get splashed across the front page of your paper.

Some examples are: attending three funerals in two days, showing compassion and caring for weeks, months and during the two years after our tragic loss and many again showed their compassion and respect on Saturday, Oct. 6 when the graduating Class of 1986 dedicated the sign in front of the Charlevoix High School to their classmates: Monica Havens, Class of 1988; Scott Crandell, Class of 1986 and Michael Lent, Class of 1986 who were killed in an alcohol related crash October 28, 1988.

I'd like to personally say thank you to all of those very special young people.

It is my silent prayer that none of you ever find out how important this kind of support is for a grieving family.

Again, thank you to Monica's friends for all their support.

Sincerely,
Carolyn Havens

Rayders beat East Jordan

When you're 2-14, any win is a big win and Charlevoix's girls basketball team got a big win over East Jordan Thursday night. Charlevoix's third win of the season was a hard-fought 46-45 win over visiting East Jordan.

Charlevoix led throughout much of the game, but East Jordan pulled even, and even ahead at times, in the final minutes of the game. The Red Devils missed a shot with three seconds left which would have given them the victory.

East Jordan did hold an 8-6 advantage at the end of the first quarter, but Charlevoix got rolling in the second quarter and took a 23-19 halftime lead.

The Rayders played well early in the third quarter to extend their lead. Gina Webster was scoring inside and Marianne Pfister was rebounding missed shots and scoring follow-up baskets. Sheila Siegwart and Tammy Holm played well defensively for Charlevoix, badgering the East Jordan guards into turnovers.

But late in the third quarter and early in the fourth quarter Charlevoix went into a scoring slump. They were stuck on 40 points for an eternity, maybe an eternity and a half. East Jordan scored in a slow, but steady fashion and eroded the Rayders' lead.

Charlevoix had difficulty hitting free throws at times during the second half, but hit them at the games end to bail themselves out.

Webster had a double-double

Gina Webster (30) puts up a shot during Charlevoix's one-point win over East Jordan last week. Webster, a junior, had 15 points and 13 rebounds.

for the Rayders as she scored 15 points and collected 13 rebounds. Pfister contributed 11 points and eight rebounds. Mary Jane Grunch and Jodi Allison each scored eight points.

The win brought the Rayders league record to 2-10, tied for last place with Mancelona and one game behind East Jordan. This Wednesday evening Charlevoix travels to Elk Rapids.

Runners sweep meet

Both the Charlevoix boys and girls cross country teams will compete in the state cross country meet this weekend. Both teams qualified for the state meet during the regional race Saturday at Mancelona.

The boys team cluster dusted the competition in the boys race. Matt Smith, Mike Sevanski, Chris Meier and Paul Wakulat formed a first through fourth place cluster that left the other teams eating dust.

Smith, a sophomore, took first place in the 3.1 mile race with a time of 16:39. Sevanski, a junior, finished second in 16:49. Meier, another junior, placed third in 16:58 and Wakulat, a senior, finished fourth in 17:01.

Each team in the race ran seven runners with the places of the first five runners totaled for a team score. Matt Stargardt, Charlevoix's fifth runner, finished 23 with a time of 18:00 to round out the Rayder team score at 33. The Rayders' team score was 65 points better than second place Farwell.

Underclassmen Zack Pajtas and Wally Napthen also ran for the Rayders. Pajtas finished 26 with a time of 18:06. Napthen, who ran his first varsity race as he filled in for Mike Ochs who was taking a college entrance exam, finished 59 with a time of 19:02.

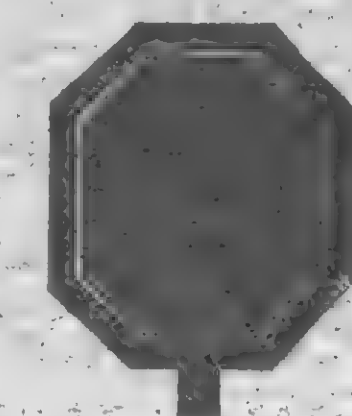

This Saturday, the Rayder boys team will look to claim its fourth straight Class C state championship.

Perhaps just as rewarding as the boys title, the girls team qualified for the state race as a team. In recent years, the Charlevoix girls have had individual runners qualify for the state meet, but have had difficulty qualifying as a team.

Julie Bush led the Rayders to a third place regional finish. The Rayder team finished just four points behind first place Elk Rapids and one point behind second place Clare.

Bush placed fourth with a time of 20:52. Elsa Conlan finished ninth in 21:32. Also placing for Charlevoix were: Ann Schairbaum, 32 in 23:02; Melissa Eaton, 39 in 23:25; Sandy Fershee, 45 in 23:46; Melissa Cox, 53 in 24:05; and Erin Wright, 75 in 25:31.

Season ends with loss

The Charlevoix football team ended a 5-4 season with a disheartening loss at Rogers City Friday night. The play-off-bound Chiefs scored ran back a pass interception 60 yards with a minute and a half left to leave the Rayders with a 14-8 loss.

Although the offense carried the Rayders for most of the season, defense carried the Rayders most of the way against Rogers City.

Following a scoreless first quarter, Rogers City scored the game's first touchdown with just eight seconds left in the first half and took an 8-0 halftime lead.

That lead held up until Charlevoix quarterback Dan Terryberry scored on a one-yard run late in the third quarter. Brian Coolman tied the game with a two-point conversion.

Late in the game, Charlevoix had the momentum and was moving the ball. Rogers City picked off the pass when the Rayders chose to go for the first down rather than punt with fourth down and four yards to go.

Earlier in the game, Charlevoix had a drive fizzle inside the Chiefs' 10-yard line.

Offensively, the Rayders had a strong year, particularly Terryberry and Coolman. Terryberry, a senior, completed 7 of 23 passes against Rogers City for a total of 89 yards. He finished the year with 1,304 yards. Coolman, a junior, carried the ball 12 times for 77 yards against Rogers City. He finished the year with 66 points scored and just shy of 1,000 yards rushing.

Defensively, linebackers Scott Campbell and Coolman each had 8 tackles in the game. Jordan Spencer and Jason Parrish each contributed 7. Scott Kehrer, 6 and Jody McGlinch, 5. Erich McElroy thwarted a Rogers City drive with a pass interception.

Charlevoix finished the season 5-4 overall, but was 5-1 in league play, good for second place in the Lake Michigan Division of the Great Northern Conference. Charlevoix's only league loss was to Traverse City-St. Francis which was undefeated in league play.

Carl Forshee sets up for a shot against East Jordan.

County commission seats contested

There are two candidates for County Commissioner in District No. 5, which includes western Eveline Township, Marion Township, Norwood Township, Charlevoix Township, and Pezine and St. James Townships on Beaver Island.

DONALD SMITH AND KATHY JOHNSON

Republican Donald R. Smith of Charlevoix Township has been representing the district since 1976. He is being opposed by Democrat Kathy Johnson of Eveline Township, a political newcomer.

Before being elected to the County Board, Smith served on the Charlevoix Township Board as a trustee. He has also been a member of the County Planning Commission and is a charter member of the Charlevoix Township Volunteer Fire Department. He says he is running for re-election because he has a strong interest in the future of Charlevoix County, keeping it as a place he can continue to live and an area of which he can be proud. Smith is a native of Charlevoix and has taught in the Petoskey High School for 23 years. He and his wife, Pamela, have two teen-age boys.

Johnson is controller for Town & Country Cedar Homes. She has lived in Charlevoix County for more than 10 years with her husband Harold. Her three children are now grown. Johnson feels that as a business woman she will be able to "bring a different set of experiences and skills to the commissioners."

Both Smith and Johnson believe that the disposition of solid waste is a major problem in the county. Smith writes, "We need to take a strong stand to insure that the present landfill does not become a regional landfill. We need also to be on guard that planning and policy decisions regarding solid waste are made by the county and not the DNR. We must be diligent in protecting our environment and maintaining our quality of life."

Johnson writes about the landfill, "I think it is important that we act responsibly with all of our assets at the same time I think we need to work with our neighboring counties on what the controls should be."

Smith and Johnson do not agree on the subject of county zoning. Smith writes, "There are many pros and cons regarding county zoning. The final decision on this issue belongs to the voters. If county wide zoning were on the ballot this fall, I would vote against it."

Johnson writes, "Yes, we should have county zoning to insure that our county grows in the manner that residents of the county would like to see and to maintain the quality of life that exists."

As far as a new County Court House is concerned, Smith says, "Charlevoix County needs a new Court House. Our present facility is inadequate for the court programs and services that we are required to provide. We have far less court space and county office space compared to our neighboring counties. No one likes higher taxes, but a new Court facility in Charlevoix County would be a good investment for the future."

Johnson writes, "I'm sure we need additional space. However, I think a better review of the needs of all the departments and other growth options is needed before we commit to a new Court House."

About present county operations, Smith writes, "Based on the county's budget constraints, I think we're doing a good job providing services to our citizens. Some time in the near future, the County Road Commission is going to need some new revenue sources to cover its increasing expenses."

Johnson writes, "We need to be promoting recycling, the reduction of waste, and the reuse of materials in our county in order to help extend the life of our landfill. We are the only county in our immediate area that does not take an active interest in the reduction of waste and seems to take no interest in whether our citizens participate in a program or not."

District No. 5 of the County Board of Commissioners is made up of the City of East Jordan and South Arm Township. Two members of the East Jordan City Council, Republican Lyle Etcher and Democrat Howard Hosler, are running for the job of County Commissioner representing the district.

LYLE ETCHER AND HOWARD HOSLER

Etcher is a life-long resident of Charlevoix County, a graduate of East Jordan High School, and a retired driver of semi trucks. He and his wife, Shirley, have two grown children.

Etcher says he is running for the county job because he believes that "government should be representative of the people and I want to provide the best possible representation for the city and township without any special interests involved."

On the question of a new County Court House, Etcher has not made up his mind. "I need more information and time to study the need," he writes.

However, he does think there should be county zoning "so the county has better control."

"The county should keep tight control on the landfill and there has to be reciprocal agreements with dumping counties to take Charlevoix County's waste when the Cedar Ridge Landfill is full. We have to provide for our solid waste needs first," Etcher writes about that problem.

Because he is retired, Etcher says he has plenty of time to attend meetings and work on county problems. To begin with, he plans to devote his efforts to three major problems:

First, Emergency Services 9-1-1. "I would like to move forward as quickly as possible to provide 9-1-1 services to the county."

Second, Solid Waste-Landfill. "I want to study and work for a solution that will bring us alternative sites and equitable use of our landfill."

Third, Recycling. "County-wide recycling (both education and implementation) will do much to alleviate our landfill problems. I pledge myself to work toward a county-wide recycling program."

Hosler is a native of East Jordan and is retired from a career in industrial management which included work with Boeing Aircraft and the Guardian Industries, road building, and inspector of sewer and water for a downstate city. He also served in the United States Air Force as a flight engineer.

Hosler and his wife, Alma, have two grown children. He says he is running for office so he can "represent East Jordan and work closely with county department heads on what the county's needs are."

His answer to the question, "Do you think the county needs a new Court House?" is, "No, not at this time. People are taxed enough."

Hosler believes there should be county-wide zoning "for future growth." He also believes the county should keep tight control of the landfill "for the protection of our water table and the surrounding real estate."

The one area of service where Hosler feels the county is not doing its job is in road repair. "Many roads have been in poor condition for years," he says.

If it became necessary to do so in order to balance the budget, Hosler would "look for overstaffing" rather than raise taxes. He says he has plenty of time to attend county meetings and attend to county business. If elected, he would work hard "to help the people get through the hard times that I believe we have ahead."

...Ostling versus Addington

other avenues should be studied first. She believes there is plenty of room for more efficiency in school operations, in building management, and in teaching materials, among other things. She believes that there is too much waste of energy and objects to increasing budgets every year.

Even with the increased costs of education, schools are not keeping up with the needs of the community, Addington points out. "Education should be geared to possible jobs in the community. There should be co-op programs where industries come into the school, hire interns, and give scholarships to those who qualify for them," she continued. "We are moving into a high-tech world and need to train our own kids for local jobs so that industries and businesses don't have to bring in people from the outside."

Addington noted that in the manufacture of automobiles, the cost of materials used to be 40 percent and labor 25 percent. The conservation of energy not only in schools but in all aspects of living is an on-going campaign platform of Addington, as are affordable housing, health care, agriculture, natural resources management, and education.

Locally, the candidate is well known as the director of music at the First Congregational Church and conductor of the Charlevoix Community Orchestra and Chorus.

...taxes sought for courts

The building itself has not withstood time very well. There is a constant roof leak in a corner of the Circuit Court room, floors and carpeting are held together with duct tape in many places, the basement often floods.

These and other problems are why county officials are asking the public for funds to bring county facilities up to date.

After researching different methods of funding, county officials decided a sinking fund would be the most economical funding mechanism. It allows the county to invest tax revenues for two years, adding interest to the fund, and starting building construction the third year.

Due to a lack of space, some county equipment is kept in the hallway on the second floor.

Two county millage requests on ballot

The Charlevoix County board of commissioners is seeking a 2.5 mill increase to pay for a new court house and a half mill operational increase at the Nov. 6 election.

A mill is $1 per $1,000 of a property's State Equalized Value (SEV). A property's SEV is supposed to be half of what the property could be sold for.

Commissioners supporting the 2.5 mill proposal say the present court offices are overcrowded. (See accompanying story.) Revenue from the 2.5 mills would be put into a three-year sinking fund which would be used to build a new court house near the sheriff's department at the corner of Grant and Garfield Streets.

The 5 mill proposal would raise the county's allocated millage from 15 to 15.5 mills for four years. The 15 mills is currently shared by the county, townships, intermediate school districts and local school districts with the county getting 4.7 mills, the townships getting 1 mill, the intermediate school district getting 2 mills and local schools getting 9.1 mills. If the millage proposal passes the county's millage would increase from 4.7 to 5.2 mills.

The 5 mill proposal was rejected by voters at the August election.

What Nov. 6 county millage proposals could add to a homeowner's annual property tax bill

City plans for new electric substation

During a Monday evening work session, city council members indicated they will approve the purchase of $736,946 worth of electric equipment for a new electric substation.

Although official approval will be given at next Monday's regular council meeting, the cash outlay won't begin until next spring because there is a lag time of several months between ordering and the delivery of the equipment.

The substation is the key component in a city electric system renovation project. Including construction costs, the cost of the substation, which will be built somewhere near Ferry Avenue and Stover Road, will be approximately $1.2 million. New distribution components to carry electricity from the substation will add between $800,000 and $1 million to that figure.

Funding for the improvements will come from revenue bonds. City electric customers may be seeing higher rates to pay for those bonds. The amount of the rate increase will depend, at least to some extent, on the interest rate for the bonds.

At Monday evening's council meeting, city treasurer Rick Brandt said he anticipates the bonds to be paid off in five years or less, possibly at interest rates of seven percent or less.

Electric department superintendent Ed Whitley said that even with a rate increase, Charlevoix city electric rates will compare favorably with almost all other communities in northern Michigan.

Currently, the city plans to build the substation to the north of the current substation, near the department of public works building. However, at Monday's council meeting, Whitley said that the owners of Wojan Aluminium Co. have raised the possibility of moving the substation up the hill and to the east.

The Wojans own land overlooking the site currently proposed. If the substation were moved to the alternative site, also owned by Wojan's, it would save the view from their other property.

The city owns the currently proposed site, but city manager Mike Wiesner and some members of the council have said that site might be better used for a park than a substation.

Council members told Wiesner and Whitley to investigate the possibility of purchasing the land from Wojans to preserve the view and leave open the possibility of a park.

Whitley said the cost of building the substation will be about the same for either site.

Area artists and craftsman will be in Christmas show

Charlevoix florist Susan Louselle and potter Charles Britton are among the forty artists and craftspeople who will exhibit their works at the Jordan River Arts Council's Holiday Art Fair from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 10, at East Jordan High School.

Owner of Country Blossoms on old Norwood Road south of Charlevoix, Louselle is well known both for unusual dried flower arrangements and evergreen wreaths which she decorates not only with pine cones and berries, but with roses, babies breath, grapevines and eucalyptus.

Britton, whose work is carried by Applebee in Boyne City, is known for white with blue functional stoneware, including bowls, casserole dishes, mugs, platters, and carved vases.

The arts council is promoting the holiday fair as an entertaining opportunity to select handmade holiday gifts created by Michigan artists and craftspeople. Besides works ranging from jewelry, quilts and fabrics to baskets, framed photographs and one-of-kind clothing, the fair will also offer gourmet lunches and desserts through the day.

includes hot croissant sandwiches and fresh hot or cold cider. Dessert choices include French cream cheesecake, German chocolate cake, raspberry white chocolate cake, walnut triple layer cake and Black Forest cake.

A special treat for children will be at 2 p.m. when storyteller Patty Clark dons medieval costume to present a program called "Twelfth Century Tales." Children will also have a chance to create their own artworks at a special children's booth. Clark will also provide music through the day, both singing and playing 12-string guitar, dulcimer and autoharp.

A raffle drawing will take place every hour, and the winners will choose from a variety of prizes donated by the exhibitors. Proceeds from the raffle will go toward the $10,000 the council is trying to raise to obtain a matching grant to hire a full-time director. Volunteers have kept the organization operating since its inception in May 1988.

Other artists and craftspeople displaying their work include: Jewelers Linda Beers Aydlott, Barbara and Evan Bassett, Cat Birtreau, Erika Faust, Sky

King Smith and Clarissa Wright.

-multi-media artists Nancy Elliot, Diane Gaynor and Peggy Trojanek;

-potters Harriet Beach, David Otis, Thomas Richter and Todd Vaughn;

-photographers Jim Gailbraith, Dennis Lennor and William Wilson.

Other exhibitors are Diane Kowalski - jewelry and clothing; Cynthia Tachudy - jewelry and pottery; Laura Kenny - stuffed bears; John Richter - dried flowers; Linda Haderer - fiber art; Betsy Wallace - quilts; Lynn Dee Dinning - handblown glass; Prudence Kurtz - wild flowers pressed in glass; Maggie Matthews - woven items; Hazel Colburn, miniature paintings; Betty Osborne - handpainted ornaments; Sherry Sineway - handpainted Santas and Pam Gillie and Audrey Eileen - clothing. Alden Mill House will have a food table featuring their special dried soups and spices.

Primitive folk artist Denellie Moose will exhibit paintings, and Pat Tinney will exhibit watercolors and craft items. An art council member, Tinney is also coordinator for the art fair.

Cross Country team wins fourth straight state title

Despite having one of their top runners collapse just before the finish line, the Charlevoix Cross Country Team completed an undefeated season and won a fourth straight Class C state title Saturday.

One might say Charlevoix finished the race a Matt short. A combination of race temperatures near 80 degrees and a start that was too fast resulted in Rayder sophomore Matt Smith collapsing just before the finish line. At the time, Smith was running ninth overall and third among Rayder runners.

Cross country meets are scored by adding the places of a team's first five runners. When the team's number three man went down, that meant the team's normal sixth man moved up to fifth and counted for the state title.

By the time Smith fell, all-state runners Mike Sevenski and Chris Meier had crossed, or were very close to crossing the finish line. The burden of making up for the loss fell to Paul Wakulat, Matt Stargardt and Zach Pajtas, the Rayders' fourth, fifth and sixth runners. Wakulat was nearing the finish when he saw that Smith had fallen. Wakulat understood the consequences and pushed himself to pass two people and pick up two points.

The Sandusky team was running in second place. When Smith fell, the Sandusky coach began exhorting his runners and

Teacher contract ratified

Charlevoix school teachers will receive salary increases of 5.75 percent this year and six percent for each of the next two years according to a new three-year contract ratified by the school board Monday evening. The increase during the second and third years is worded as a 5.75 percent increase, plus a 25 percent incentive increase, but the net effect is a six percent increase. The contract is retroactive to Sept. 1 and will expire August 31, 1993. In the present school year, a first year teacher with a bachelor's degree would make $22,116 while person with a Masters and Educational Specialist degree and 25 years of experience would make $43,615. In the third year of the contract, those figures will be $24,856 at the low end and $49,020 at the high end. In addition to salary increases, the contract also changes some teacher benefits. Teacher's insurance will change from MESA's Super Med II to Super Care I. The new program has a $400 deductible which the school system will pay. Even after paying the de-

Performers review history

"History on the Rebound" takes an offbeat look at history's sacred cows this coming Saturday evening (Nov. 10) when Charlevoix Performing Arts students present their annual Variety Show, 7:30 p.m. in the high school.

the Cavemen, Ghengis Khan, Caesar and Cleopatra, Christopher Columbus and Queen Isabella, George Washington, Einstein and Edison.

Time will be warped as Columbus and Vikings compete to discover America, or Joan of Arc, Lancelot and King Arthur cavort through the Middle Ages. The Boston Tea Party will be revisited and Washington's yachting dilemma as he tries to cross the Delaware will be exposed.

A light hearted, tongue-in-cheek, history lesson, full of slightly skewed information, the show cannot serve as an instant history course, but it will be a delightful evening for the entire family. Charlevoix city and township firemen doused a fire in the old Kit Carson and Boyne Auto building at the corner of Bridge and Carpenter Friday afternoon.

Smoke billows over town

Charlevoix city and township fire departments doused a fire at the corner of Bridge and Carpenter Streets Friday afternoon. The fire began in the southern end of the old Kit Carson and Boyne Auto building.

Tar paper inside the roof area of the building caused smoke to roll out over the streets. People who witnessed the fire said that at one point the smoke was so thick that it was impossible to see across the street.

At one time, the building housed three businesses, but two recently moved. Only Bay Shore Auto Parts remained in the building. Fire and smoke damaged more than $100,000 worth of merchandise.

A breeze out of the south, the age of the old wooden building and the spread of the fire through spaces just beneath the roof made things difficult for firemen.

City and township firemen used hand-held hoses at the south end of the building and a deluge gun near the center of the building.

Aerial trucks from the Boyne City and Petoskey fire departments also were called and assisted in mop up operations.

As of Monday, the cause of the blaze was still being investigated.

ductible, the school anticipates savings of approximately $56,000.

The new contract also includes an early retirement package. Teachers with 28 years accumulated toward retirement may apply to have the board buy out the final two years of their contract. That would allow the school to hire someone lower on the salary scale. After about two years, the school would begin saving money on such an arrangement. The program is limited to five teachers a year. Interested teachers must apply by March. About a dozen of the 75 teachers covered by the contract are eligible for the program.

Given the school's declining enrollment, some retiring teachers may not be replaced.

The new contract also allows teachers to put aside one percent of their salary toward an annuity with the school system matching the teacher's contribution.

The new contract is expected to cost the school system an additional $83,735 in the current school year.

Charlevoix,
Thank you for your encouragement, support.

OPINIONS

IT WAS INEVITABLE. WINTER WAS BOUND TO COME. IT'S JUST TOO BAD ITS VISIT HAS TO DRAG ON LIKE AN UNWELCOMED HOUSE GUEST. ACTUALLY, THERE IS GREAT BEAUTY IN FRESHLY FALLEN SNOW BLANKETING TREES AND SPILLING OVER OUR ROLLING HILLS. IT'S ALL THE SIDE EFFECTS THE ARE A PAIN. THE ICEY ROADS, THE SHOVELING, THE HIGH HEATING BILLS. MAYBE IT IS GOOD WEATHER FOR DUCKS. AT LEAST THE LOCAL MALLARDS DON'T SEEM TO MIND IT. AS MANY OF THE STAY FOR THE ENTIRE SEASON. WHILE ON THE OTHER HAND, THE WOOD DUCKS SPEND THE BULK OF WINTER IN THE S. STATES OR MEXICO. I THINK THEY'VE GOT THE RIGHT IDEA. THEY'VE GOT THE BEST OF BOTH WORLDS.

REASONABLE TO ME
L. SCOTT SWANSON

Talked into something

"How good are runners from Charlevoix's high school cross country team? Local dogs don't even bother to chase them during their training runs."

In Charlevoix, even the most ambitious of dogs just stays on the porch and thinks to himself, "Forget it. There's no point in chasing those kids. They're too fast. Even if I did happen to catch one, there's no meat on them."

It's a different story with middle-aged people who take evening strolls for their health. Bones of people like that are buried in yards throughout the community.

There was a time when I ran on the Charlevoix High School cross country team. This was many years ago. Now I'm at, or at least very near, an age where I favor a dog-meat pace.

One fall day in 1977 when I was a junior in high school, I was working out in the weight room after school. While I was lifting, Pete Spieles happened into the weight room. Spieles had been my sixth grade science teacher and subsequently moved up to the high school and thus was also my tenth grade biology teacher. I'd found both classes interesting and had done well in them.

I paused from lifting weights and said, "Hi." Unbeknownst to me, Walt Drenth had recently talked Spieles into being the cross country coach.

"Have you ever thought about running cross country?" Spieles asked me.

"No, not ever," I answered candidly. I'd heard of cross country. As I understood it, you ran a long way and it involved pain.

"Well, why don't you give it a try?" Spieles persisted.

"Oh, I don't know," I hedged. "You're going to keep in shape anyway." "Yeah, I guess so. But I've never done much running," I muttered feebly.

"Tell you what," he said. "You go out and run a little bit on the track today and see how you like it and I'll talk to you tomorrow."

"Well, I suppose." So Spieles left the weight room and I went out to the track. At that time, the track was still covered with cinders.

I ran one lap - 440 yards - a mere quarter mile. At the end of it, my legs felt tired, I breathed like a locomotive and lunch threatened to reappear.

"That's enough of that stuff," I thought. "When I see Spieles tomorrow, I'm telling him. Thanks, but no thanks on the cross country."

Although I'd decided to tell Spieles "No," I wasn't anxious to actually do so. Even though my locker was just outside his classroom, I avoided him for most of the next day.

But about fifth hour, I bumped into him. "Did you run yesterday?" he asked.

"Yeah." "How did it go?" "Terrible," I replied. "I felt like I was going to be sick. I don't think I want to run cross country."

"What did you eat for lunch yesterday before you ran?" I thought for a moment. "Pretty much the usual. A sandwich, a banana, an ice cream bar and three or four cartons of milk."

Spieles shook his head. "Don't drink so much milk tomorrow, then go out and try running again."

"Well, all right." After school the next day I returned to the track. Things went better. I ran two laps, and lived to tell about it. Within a week I'd joined the cross country team.

I'd like to be able to say I went on to win races and medals and do glorious things in the sport of cross country. But such is not the case. I've never broken 40 minutes in the 10K and I've never broken five minutes in the mile.

But I enjoyed cross country. I enjoyed being around the coach and my teammates. The running became less a matter of pain and more of a challenge.

I continued to run after high school, not on a college team, but just by myself or with friends and at road races. To this day, I still run a bit. On an individual level, running has always been a great way to get rid of frustration. On a people level, running has been an opportunity, particularly in Charlevoix, to interact with a lot of motivated and interesting people.

I confess to being somewhat stubborn, joining the cross country team, which led to taking up running, was one of the rare times when I let myself get talked into something. I've never regretted that.

And to my mind, that's the nice thing about the Charlevoix High School cross country program with coach Spieles and all of the other people who help make it work. Every year the star runners and those who were just so-so graduate and life takes them in a lot of different directions. None of them regret having been a part of Charlevoix's cross country team.

CLOCKWISE

BOB CLOCK

Stretching summer

What a difference a few miles make.

Judy and I left Charlevoix Saturday morning for a day-long visit in Mount Pleasant with Katie and Matt Briggs, our daughter and son-in-law, and grandsons James and John Henry.

When we toiled out of town, the weather was cold, overcast and rainy. Before we reached East Jordan we encountered huge fog banks over the South Arm. The dismal weather continued almost until Grayling where we stopped for coffee. There the temperature was 61 degrees and the skies to the south were aglow.

By the time we reached Mount Pleasant the sun was shining brightly and the weather was ideal for a long hike through the city's miles of wilderness parks along the Chippewa River.

We left Mount Pleasant about sundown after a perfectly "can't day," as old Robert Burns would say. South of Gaylord we ran into fog. West of Gaylord the rain started.

When we got back to Charlevoix, we were surprised to learn the entire day had been wet and dreary.

Mount Pleasant is only 140 miles distant - but from the standpoint of weather it's on a different planet - at least on some days.

I feel pretty smug that Judy and I were able to squeeze another summer day out of a year that has had all too few summer days.

I SEE SOME local car dealers are trying a new wrinkle to lure customers into their lots.

When the weather's fair, they line up a fleet of snappy new cars in a row and open the hoods - like so many geese waiting for their supper.

Good idea. After all, the business end of any automobile is under the hood and if the engine can't pass inspection the customer had better look elsewhere.

It reminds me of the time many years ago I attended a press preview of the new line of Willys Overland automobiles in Toledo, Ohio.

The show was held in one of Toledo's posh downtown hotels and the new models were displayed in a gigantic ballroom with battalions of public relations men hovering about extolling the plush upholstery and mirror finish of their newest offerings.

The cars were beautiful, but most of the newsmen at the press preview were more interested in the size of the olives in their martinis than in Willys' stock-in-trade.

Then, unexpectedly, a smarty-pants automotive writer from Detroit asked if he could see one of the engines.

Panic set in as the PR guys, one by one, tried to open the hood of one of the cars.

But no one knew where the latch was.

Finally, an embarrassed corporate executive sent out for a mechanic in blue coveralls who not only knew how to open the hood but was able to answer all kinds of questions about performance and handling.

The mechanic saved the day.

BY THE TIME this reaches print, the general election of 1990 will be history.

During the past millennium I have seen quite a few elections, but never one so vicious and acrimonious as the one just ended.

Locally we did a pretty good job of keeping our voices down, but the Weiss-McManus race for the Michigan Senate, the Levin-Schuetz race for the U.S. Senate and Michigan's gubernatorial race between Blanchard and Engler left me ashamed of American politics.

All candidates from time to time made charges about the opposition that were either patently untrue or patently unfair.

I yearn for the good old days when candidates seldom mentioned each other by name, but instead told what they themselves would do if elected.

Maybe we should blame the advertising moguls on Madison Avenue. Time was when a product such as Pepsi Cola was advertised on its own merits - not on how much better it is than Coca Cola.

Today every candidate is a Pepsi or a Coke.

Paper criticized

Editor,

We hand delivered to you Friday Oct. 26, 1990 our letter that disagreed with the contents of an editorial reprint that appeared as an advertisement in your Oct. 17, 1990 issue. At the time of delivery we discussed our letter and the editorial. You stated that the editorial was your opinion and yours only when written.

Our letter said that listening to the tape recording and Clerk Staley's comments at the time we listened to the tape did not substantiate your opinions. Since the editorial was your work we fully expected you would place your comments after our letter.

We also expected that our letter would appear in your paper as it was written. We expected that it would receive competent composing and proof reading to insure it appeared in your paper the way it was written. The letter received neither of those services. Sentences and words were deleted. Wording was added that made statements senseless. All the other letters in that issue received the full service treatment. There certainly was no need to edit our letter due to its length as one of the letters in the issue took two pages to reproduce. Ours was the only one that received the butcher job.

What was a surprise to us upon seeing our letter in your paper was the letter in rebuttal by Barron directly below it.

You did not have the courtesy to tell us that you were going to call Barron and ask if he wanted to enter a letter. If you had, we would have asked to see his letter prior to your paper printing it. We would have added a P.S. to our letter that said we knew he was at the meeting. The tape made that abundantly clear. We also would have said his comments and the way they were made gave us the impression he thought he was across the street in the court house.

What is further disturbing to us is that your Oct. 24, 1990 issue of your paper contained a letter by ex Mayor McRae that criticized Mayor Probert's campaign literature. We asked you if you had extended to Mayor Probert the opportunity to rebut McRae in the same issue, you said you had not. You said Mayor Probert had a week to reply if he chose.

Sloppy work by your paper and a double standard given to material submitted as to how you respond appears to us contingent on whether the opinions submitted agree with yours or others connected with the publications of our area.

That's a damn poor way to run a paper. It does not instill confidence that your paper will provide all sides or apply fairness.

Corrected letter

Due to an inadvertent error in either typesetting or composition, one sentence, part of another sentence, and a word were left out of a letter which appeared in last week's Courier.

The primary section affected follows, with the mistakenly deleted portion underlined.

The other about-to-be council woman was not present nor was councilman Haggard. After the discussion period, all appointments were voted on. There were no nay votes. One appointment was contingent on a conflict of interest determination by the City Attorney.

Charlevoix's 1990 Marching Band moved indoors and gave its final performance of the year in the high school gym last week.

Marching band performs finale

What travels on 140 feet at a pace of 120 steps per minute and is completely maroon and white? If you guessed the Charlevoix Rayder Marching Band, you're right.

Tuesday night, the Band came indoors for their traditional season-ending salute to fans and parents. With the last notes still echoing with a backdrop of continuing applause, something is becoming clear to band followers in the area. Terry Isenberger is as they say in athletic circles, "building a program." Charlevoix's instrumental program took a major step forward when Isenberger accepted the role out-front in 1981. Most directors of top-level college and high school music programs would quickly support the premise that like winning athletic and academic traditions, music follows the same path. Charlevoix High School's proficiency in state competition, on stage and on the football field continues to mature, and the approval of a delighted audience Tuesday night undercores what may have been the best marching season ever. The 70 member band formed up to play several complex arrangements—routines the band featured during the football season. They were in a word, outstanding.

St. Mary's schedules mission

St. Mary's Church in Charlevoix will be the site of a renewal mission in that parish, Nov. 11-15. A mission is a specific and concrete way of bringing the "Good News" of Jesus Christ to the people. Not as concentrated in time as a retreat, a mission is conducted in the church over a period of five days. Entitled, "Healing of Hearts," the mission will be jointly conducted by Fr. Carl Schmidt, C.S.S.R. and by Sister Mary Hogan, O.S.U.

The mission directors come to St. Mary's well-qualified as spiritual directors. Educated in Ontario, Quebec and Germany, Fr. Carl was ordained a Redemptorist priest in Germany in 1959. He has worked as an assistant priest in a German parish in Toronto and as an assistant vocations director. He has also preached parish missions and worked with the youth apostolate. Fr. Schmidt has a M.A. in Religious Education from the University of Loyola in Chicago and a M.A.

in Psychology from the University of Detroit. He is presently stationed at Holy Redeemer College in Windsor, Ontario and has been involved in a full-time healing ministry since 1976. He is also an active member of the association of Christian Therapists.

Sr. Mary Hogan is an Ursuline religious of the Diocese of London, Ontario and in recent years has served the church there in pastoral and social ministry. She holds a Masters degree in Special Education from Wayne State University in Detroit and is certified in the field of mental retardation, emotional disturbances and learning disabilities. She has worked in the field of education for twenty-five years, most of that spent in specialized teaching. Sister has been involved in the renewal since 1969. Presently she works full-time with Fr. Schmidt in the retreat and healing ministry.

During the mission, Fr. Carl and Sr. Mary will conduct a variety of services aimed at guiding participants to reflect on their spiritual lives and to grow closer to God. The mission is called "Healing Hearts," because of the healing we will experience when we allow ourselves to be loved by Jesus," according to Fr. Carl and Sr. Mary. "This is an extraordinary time of grace when the Holy Spirit allows Jesus to love us." The mission will be built around the Mass and the Sacrament of Reconciliation. Included will be preaching, healing prayer, the rosary and exposition of the Blessed Sacrament.

Preceding the mission, Father Carl will be preaching at week-end masses at St. Mary's. The mission schedule for the week includes evening services at 7 p.m. beginning Sunday, Nov. 11 and concluding Thursday, Nov. 15. Topics for the week are as follows:

Sun., Nov. 11 "Letting God Be God"

Mon., Nov. 12 "Father's Concrete Love-Jesus"

Tues., Nov. 13 "Healing of Memories"

Wed., Nov. 14 "The Power of Forgiveness and Unforgiveness" (Following this service there will be a penitential service)

Thurs., Nov. 15 "The Power of Jesus Through Blessed Oil"

(Following this service there will be refreshments and fellowship in the parish center.)

There will be daily exposition of the Blessed Sacrament for intercessory prayer Monday through Thursday from 1 to 3 p.m. Father Carl will be available to visit the sick, counsel, pray with, or offer sacramental reconciliation for those who request it.

Magic, Zeke and Jordan, they ain't

It's show-down time. The Middle Age Mutant Ninja Teachers will face members of area service clubs in a basketball game as part of a PTA sponsored fun night Nov. 9.

The evening fundraising event begins at 6 p.m. with a hot dog supper in the high school cafeteria. Once the dogs are disposed of, the game will begin at 7 p.m. in the high school gym. Tickets to the event are $1.50 for the supper and $2 for the game. Family game tickets are available for $5. All proceeds will go toward special elementary educational projects such as the cross country skiing program, school newspaper, computer software etc.

The Middle Age Mutant Ninja Teachers are captained by Dave Moyer. The turtles are expected to slow the pace of a game down. Rather than a run and gun, fans should probably expect to see some walk and gun.

The Service Club basketball team, and the term basketball team is used loosely here, is captained by Mike Greeley. The Service Club is expected to employ the legendary Bunker Hill offense—fire and fall back.

Local judges Richard Pajtas, Fred Mulhauser and Harvey Varnum will officiate the game. Game sponsors wanted referees with some court experience. Rest assured there will be order on the court.

The roster for the service club team features: Greeley, Bill Dreyer, John McKown, Barney Way, Rick Brandt, Reed Freidinger, Bill Tribilowicz, Jay Bingham, Larry Levensgood, Barb Skully, Lynn DeGow, Ken Weller, Bill Gengle, Dennis Halverson, Bob Hoffman, Susan VanWieren, Joan Buday, Vel Kammerman, Edith Dale, Janet Potter, Kim Simpson, Marilyn Wilmut, Bruce Reid, Ted Tewcomb, Jackie Merla, Marti Marshall, Ellen Addington, Lori Toth, George Lasater, Bill Tache and Harry Golski.

At Monday evening's school board meeting, board member Larry Levensgood reported that he had attended the meet. He noted with pride that at the state finals it becomes apparent that Charlevoix's cross country program is the one that all of the other schools look to and seek to emulate.

Spieles explained that in the past the boys' team has always kind of been on a pedestal, but now the girls' team is beginning to establish its own identity.

Ann Schairbaum, another sophomore, said she didn't feel she ran one of her best races at state. She finished 81st in a time of 23:07.2.

Melissa Cox rounded out Charlevoix's state contingent. She also ran despite a leg injury. She finished 112th with time of 24:41.6.

They are arranged in several rows, with some students looking towards the camera and others looking away. The students are wearing casual clothing, including sweaters, jackets, and jeans. Sisters opening new cleaning service

Two young women who grew up in Charlevoix and who say their mothers "really taught them to clean" have formed Sisters Janitorial Specialties, Inc., which they call "a unique cleaning service."

Terri (Brown) Smith and Ginger (Smith) Stevens are sisters-in-law. Smith has been doing residential cleaning in the Charlevoix area for four years and Stevens, who was employed by Staley Hardware until it closed down, has added another dimension to the business. Her husband is a building contractor so she knows what a mess is left at the end of a building or alteration job. "So, we have added post-construction and post-remodeling jobs to our services," she explained. Their list of other cleaning specialties includes cottages, rental units, condominiums, offices, boat interiors, churches, rental halls, estates, and commercial and industrial buildings. They will also take on special jobs such as window washing.

Smith and Stevens work together on all jobs and do not hire other people. They take all necessary cleaning supplies to the job and limit their territory to the Charlevoix area because "We believe there is enough business here to support us. We are insured and incorporated and here to stay."

Right now and until Jan. 1, Sisters Janitorial Specialties is giving a 10 percent discount on all jobs to introduce themselves to new customers.

Customers may contact the business by phoning 547-2517 or 5407-2635.

Margaret Kantola took first place honors in a recent pie baking contest sponsored by Glen's Market. The pie baking contest was one of a number of activities the store conducted as part of its annual fall harvest celebration.

McRae brings back notes from afar

(Ralph McRae, one of Charlevoix's busiest senior citizens, recently returned from a trip to Eastern Europe, where he met and visited with many everyday citizens. Below are some notes recalling his trip.)

"Leaving Amsterdam the morning of September 7, I intended to stay over night in West Berlin, but bad weather, long lines for changing money, and non-cooperative taxi drivers made me decide to go on to Warsaw.

"In buying my ticket, a lady standing near by gave me enough German money for a first class ticket. I paid her back in American money and had to hire a cab to take me to East Berlin for my train. I had five minutes to spare.

"From Amsterdam to Warsaw was a 24 hour train travel, except for two hours in West Berlin. But I was glad to save a day's time in my schedule. My passport was checked four times going through Poland.

"In Warsaw, my hotel, the 40-story hotel, was directly across from the train depot. However, my taxi driver made it a three-mile trip, but it is still cheap if you are cheated there. The Marriott Hotel (very expensive) was filled with business people from all over the world, all there to make deals with the government. I talked to persons from Canada, Norway, Italy, and Estonia.

"For each $1, I got 9,000 zlotys. The stores all were well stocked and there were quite a few cars, too. I found a good book store in an alley courtyard.

"With a taxi driver I visited what remained of the Jewish Ghetto, just one small prison building. The rest of that former largest ghetto in Poland was converted into new apartments, parks, and lawns.

"Polish people were looking forward to a better future. It was in Poland that the eventual downfall of communism started. The people are proud of that fact. In Warsaw, I phoned three persons in Moscow and also mailed five small packages into Russia from the train station.

"John, a bellhop friend, carried my baggage underground into the train station across from the hotel. Fortunately, he found my train was leaving on a different track for Kiev, Russia. The train left at 8:30 p.m. with sleeping cars only. I had bought my ticket for $7. American money for an 18-hour trip.

"John took me to my assigned compartment on the train. Already there were three other persons—three women, probably a little surprised to see an American—two Polish ladies and one Russian. Mayka was the youngest, then 39-year old Barbara and 49-year old Tamara (which I found out by looking over their passports).

"Fortunately, Mayka could speak a little English and was a very friendly and helpful person. I passed around chocolate bars and cigarettes to Barbara and in return got sandwiches and coffee. A lot of funny situations occurred trying to understand each other. Tamara had one of the upper bunks, and being a little stout she hesitated climbing up to it. But later, when a military man came in to see if someone was hiding in the bed clothing, he pulled out a concealed ladder which enabled Tamara to finally sleep in her underwear in her proper bunk. Finally, about 1 a.m., sleep overtook everyone.

"In the morning, we awoke about 9 a.m. The bed clothing was put away and someone offered more sandwiches. Some time during the night, the wheels of the train were changed to fit the wider Russian rails.

"We arrived in Kiev one and a half hours ahead of schedule and we said friendly good byes. Barbara and her male friend, who met her on arrival, drove me to my hotel. The hotel had been selected by my agency in Washington and paid for along with my train fare out of the country frequented with getting a visa into the Soviet Union). The hotel, the

"Lydia, was the second best in Kiev, but the worst of all the hotels I stayed at—no warm water for two days (the same for most of the people in Kiev because all hot water comes from central heating in the city). Also, the wall tiles were coming off the and the toilet seat was in need of repair.

"But the first evening in Kiev I really got a break. At a lunch bar in the hotel I heard someone give an order in English. I went to his table and consequently my whole stay in Kiev was very pleasant. The man, Gordon Smith, was the Department Head of a Toronto University and taught English. He had also studied Russian at the University of Moscow.

"Through Gordon Smith, I met a Russian boy, Mike, who was studying English. The next day he took me on a walking tour of Kiev, which is a city of seven hills. We must have walked 20 miles, but that night Mike, Gordon Smith, and I attended a ballet (Romeo and Juliet). The 100 piece orchestra and stage were wonderful—two and a half hours all for about seven cents in American money! "Also, through Gordon Smith, I met Sasha and Nadia. He is a teacher of English in a Russian Institute and Mike was one of his students. Nadia arranged to take me to a special

Same old issues face new council

As a result of the Nov. 6 election, the Charlevoix City Council will have three new faces in January. According to members of the council, both current and future, problems the new council deals with will be much the same as those faced by the current council.

The three new people on the council will be Dave Novotny, Jackie Cross and Ted Feltes. Novotny defeated incumbent mayor Gary Probert. Cross defeated former council member Shirley Roloff for a third ward seat currently held by Jim Potter. Feltes ran unopposed for a second ward seat currently held by Ken Whitley.

When they are sworn into office in January, the three new council members will join current council members: Cheri Hoffman and Bill Haggard of the first ward; Butch Russell of the second ward; and Pat Gaskin of the third ward.

Hoffman, Gaskin, Cross and Whitley recently offered their comments on some of the issues the council will face in coming months.

Cross, a new council member, said of the election results, "I'm glad to see everyone get in that did. But Gary and the others didn't do a bad job."

Cross expects the future of the Downtown Development Authority (DDA) and the projects it will fund to come up early in 1991.

"I think the biggest thing is going to be the DDA," Cross replied when asked about pending issues. "I don't think it's completely ironed out yet."

Specific controversies involving the DDA have included: council decisions regarding the possibility of installing new street lights on Bridge Street; mayoral appointments to the DDA board; parking and launch ramp expansion at Ferry Beach.

Cross said that between now and January he will be absorbing as much information as he can by talking to people in the third ward, talking to both the incumbent and the new mayor and reading about issues facing the council.

"Right now I'm just feeling my way and learning," he said. "I hope to do a good job."

Hoffman said, "I'm real pleased with the content of the new council. I think we'll be a team that can work well together and with staff."

The only significant change Hoffman said she's heard of is eliminating some of the council's committee of the whole meetings. Currently the council has regular meetings twice a month. On Monday evenings falling in between regular meetings, the council has committee of the whole meetings where issues to be voted on in regular meetings are discussed.

"It seems a little redundant to meet one week, discuss something and then come back again the next week," Hoffman observed.

Three issues Hoffman expects the council to tackle early in the new year are: pressing ahead with the city's five-year capital improvement plan; formulating and adopting a new budget; and securing money via bonding for a new electrical substation.

The new substation is part of an ongoing renovation of the city's electrical system. The estimated cost of the new substation is in excess of $2 million.

Whitley chose not to seek reelection although he noted that he is glad he served on the council and enjoyed it despite the ups and downs.

City streets, sidewalks, sewers and water lines (all frequently lumped under the term "infrastructure") are things Whitley foresees the council continuing to address. This past Monday evening, council members toured the community to look at which streets are most in need of repair.

Elementary school students did the wave during a pep rally Friday afternoon prior to the PTA Fun Night basketball game. Several hundred people attended a hot dog dinner followed by a basketball game which pitted school faculty members against members of local service clubs. The fund raising event netted between $1,200 and $1,400 which will be used to fund special elementary school projects such as a cross country ski program and school newspaper.

Hunters take to the woods

Thousands of hunters will take to the woods Thursday, Nov. 15 for the opening of deer season and more than a few of those hunters will be in northern lower Michigan.

Deer numbers are high, but the deer simply can't match the hunters in fire power. A good kill is anticipated. Bowhunters started slowly in October, but have fared better in recent weeks.

Hunters shouldn't expect tracking snow opening day. Weather forecasts call for warmer temperatures toward the end of the week. Hunters who recall last year's early season blizzard should welcome the warmer weather.

Firearm season will last through the end of the month. Bow season will resume and muzzle loading season will follow the firearm season.

Whitley noted that Charlevoix's seasonal population fluctuations offer a special challenge to providing public services. He said decisions have to be geared toward peaks, not averages.
Gaskin said she was pleased with the election results and the fact that there was some competition for offices.

"I feel that people ran for office with some strong motivation to increase the positive aspects of our community," she said.
Gaskin noted Novolny's previous involvement with the planning commission and master plan revision committee. She said that given that background, she foresees the council focusing more attention on revising the city master plan and bringing that project to completion.

A committee has been working on revising the city master plan for more than a year. The master plan and zoning ordinance are the key city documents in controlling future growth and development in the city.

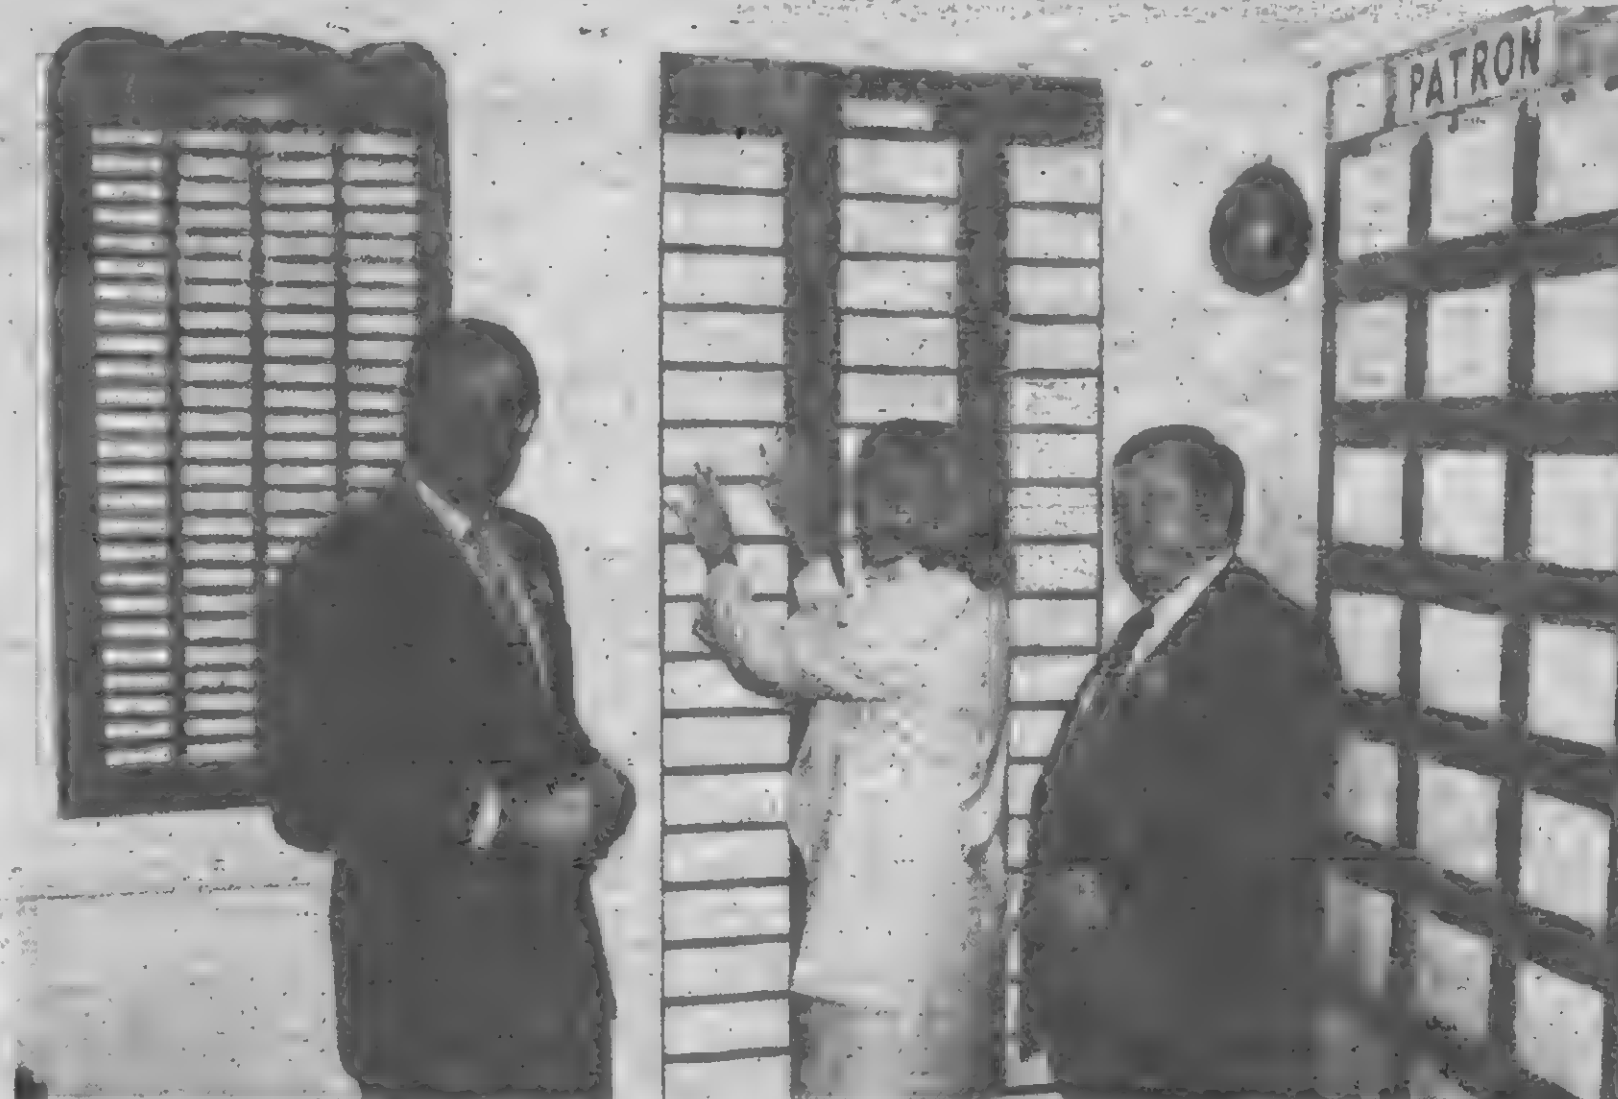

Gaskin also would like to see the council pay more attention to Charlevoix's lakes.

"I, for one, have been wanting to bring the Lake Charlevoix Master Plan back into focus," she said.

The Lake Charlevoix Master Plan was written by a committee appointed by the county. County commissioners then received the plan and asked cities and townships bordering the lake to use the plan as a guideline for future growth and development.

Gaskin looks forward to council goal setting sessions early in 1991. She credited mayor Gary Probert for managing the 1990 goal setting session in an effective manner.

Gaskin said the council reviews long term goals at the beginning of the year, but as crisis issues come up during the year, they divert the council's attention.

Gayle Gennett, Vice President of the local Kiwanis Club and a member of the Mothers for the Pool Group, places a Charlevoix Convention and Visitors Bureau tag on the wall as Dave Strawbridge, (left) Co-Chairman of Friends of the Pool, and Harold Krusch, of the Convention and Visitors Bureau watch. The Convention and Visitors Bureau recently contributed $5,000 toward the pool. The pool drive has now raised approximately $354,000 in cash and pledges. Pool supporters recently sent out several letters explaining the status of fund-raising efforts and soliciting additional funds. The group's initial objective is to raise $500,000 to establish an endowment fund to offset pool operating costs. After raising money for the endowment fund, they will seek to raise money for construction. Combined construction and endowment costs will total in excess of $2 million.

OPINIONS

by EDITH GILBERT

I would never have believed any of it, if it hadn't happened to me. Shakespeare described Romeo and Juliet, as "star-crossed lovers". Well, let me tell you about my "star-crossed" checkbook!

The first glitch happened when I went into a local restaurant for lunch. I put the modest sum for two lunches on my Visa card. Was I surprised when the end of the month statement arrived with an additional $500 charge! Utterly shaken, I call Visa, and... fortunately without much ado, my account is credited for $500 plus interest. I heave a major sigh of relief.

Next I'm trying to balance my checkbook and I seem to be overdrawn. After umpteen calls to the bank's bookkeeping department, we discover that a monthly automatic deposit was not deposited. With a few more tense long distance telephone calls, we straighten out glitch number two.

A few days later the bank calls again. "We have some checks here that you wrote on an account that is closed." Holy Toledo! I look in my binder type checkbook and sure enough there are the same color, outdated, blankety blank checks on a closed account. What to do now? I'm referred to "Richard" at the bank and he very pleasantly helps straighten this mess out without having my checks bounce all over the place. Whew again!

But his isn't all. I ask the bank for my balance and it's way off. Hmm. Then I get my next month's Visa bill and instead of a $500 credit, there's only a $50 credit. Am I goofy? I call the bank's bookkeeping department and by this time they recognize my voice. "Yes, Edith, we have the cancelled check here for $500." Thank heaven for little favors! Another call to Visa. Just send us a check for $450 and we'll credit your account."

"Plus, interest? I suggest. "Agreed" is the reply.

But there's more... The night before Halloween while I am having dinner, some local darlings throw a fistful of Black Cat firecrackers on my front porch. It was a good show—just like a private Venetian Festival. It also burned my indoor-outdoor carpet completely. The insurance company plans to give me a check for $682 for the replacement, but the work can't be done until spring, or until the temperature reaches 70 degrees outside. The problem is, how can I hang on to $682 before Christmas without spending it? Maybe I should bury it under my plum tree? Then in the spring when the tree flowers, I can dig up the cash without disturbing by checkbook. But of course, I'd lose the interest. Decisions, decisions!

My father prided himself on balancing his checkbook to the penny every month, but I always have had a love-hate relationship with numbers. I love my checkbook at the beginning of the month when it's fat and I hate my checkbook at the end of the month when it's flat. Right now, I doubt if even my father could balance my checkbook. He didn't have to deal with Visa, automatic deposits, and Charlevoix wineries.

Facing fall projects

As I stood there in the great outdoors trying to steady a wind-whipped storm window with my frozen, numb fingers I thought to myself, "Boy, I'm going to make it a point to get this done sooner next year."

Preparations for winter occur on a two year cycle. Every other year you mess around and don't get things done until after the cold weather sets in. The next year, with fall's frozen follies still fresh in your mind, you do things expeditiously.

This year, fall wasn't a total waste. Granted, I failed to act with haste regarding the windows and there are some garage projects which cry out for attention, but I did well with the garden.

The first part of October I got right out there and yanked the corn stalks out by their roots. Then I fired up the tiller and the carnage really began.

When it comes to fall gardening, my wife has had rye in her head for several years now. Perhaps I should rephrase that. For the past few years, my wife has been after me to plant rye in the garden during the fall. She claims we're nitrogen deficient. (I've been called a lot of things, but nitrogen deficient. Ooh, that hurts.) Rye is supposed to put nitrogen in the soil.

So I planted rye. And it's been growing, sucking nitrogen out of the air and putting it into the ground I guess. I went walking through the garden the other day and I thought to myself, "Hey, there's something different about the air in the garden. Not as much nitrogen in it as there is in the air hovering above the yard."

You have to be careful when you plant rye in the garden. If you plant the wrong kind, instead of putting nitrogen in the ground, you get helium. What a disaster. All the pumpkins and water melons float away and when you eat an ear of corn you start talking like Donald Duck.

Speaking of pumpkins - and I often do - I got those out early this fall. This was the best crop of pumpkins I've ever grown. Per usual, I again attempted to grow giant pumpkins. The pumpkins I ended up with were somewhat giant. They weren't the big giant pumpkins like you see pictured in the seed catalogues, but they were small giants.

This spring, I set out to grow a pumpkin that would weigh more than the baby. All summer, I compared the growth of the pumpkins to the growth of the baby. During the summer, I would take the baby out to the garden and perch her atop one of the biggest pumpkins to see how I was doing.

When I hauled the pumpkins out of the garden in mid October, I put the kid on the scales and found she weighed just shy of 20 pounds. No problem. I had several pumpkins bigger than that. I had two that went around 40 pounds apiece.

Next year I'm setting my sights higher. Maybe I'll try to grow a pumpkin that weighs more than the dog. I suppose I'll have a hard time getting him to occasionally sit on a pumpkin during the summer to see how I'm coming along.

Once again my bowhunting season was a failure. I saw a few deer and may have caused them some emotional trauma, but I did them no physical harm.

Other bow hunters who hit deer when they shoot at them may think that I miss easy shots every year because I'm not an accomplished archer. Little do they know that missing easy shots is simply a part of my long term strategy.

All of the deer I've missed have been little bucks, no monster trophy bucks among them. I'm going to keep missing the little bucks until the area deer population gets it in their minds that I pose them absolutely no threat. Then, when a big buck (and I'm talking at least 16 points) ventures out in front of me, I'll go for the kill.

It's a strategy which isn't for just any hunter, but then I'm not just any hunter.

I didn't rake any leaves this fall. If they want to be raked from my yard, they'll have to wait until spring. If they've got a problem with that and want to be raked in the fall, they'll just have to blow over into somebody else's yard.

Out of the Blue

The tumult and the shouting dies;
The captains and the kings depart.
But we'll not be without those guys
Who, as incumbents, play it smart.

Detroit suffers

Poor Detroit.

The Motor City was raked over the embers of Devil's Night last week on network television - with a 20-minute segment of ABC's "Prime Time Live" devoted to the myriad problems facing the domain of Old King Coleman.

According to ABC, the problems range from Devil's Night fires, rampant drug use, crime of every description, and the random slayings of young blacks and little children.

Of course, none of this is new and ABC didn't "scoop" anyone with its disclosures.

But I am a little surprised ABC missed - or failed to realize the enormity of - Detroit's most distressing problem, the breakdown of the black family.

The high proportion of illegitimate births among blacks.

The huge number of families headed by women without a male breadwinner on the premises.

And a system of welfare payments that seems to reward sexual promiscuity.

TO HEAR MAYOR Coleman Young rant and rave during Prime Time Live, you would have thought everything was hunky-dory in the old home town until ABC moved in and started airing dirty laundry.

Young was not alone in his criticism of ABC. After the program, the mayor was joined by a chorus of whiners - including a raft of newsmen and newswomen who should know better.

The fact is Detroit has serious problems, all of them stemming from family breakdown, and they aren't getting any better under the administration of Coleman Young.

As a former resident of the Cass Corridor, I think the program was quite factual.

A FEW YEARS ago, Young invited a number of outstate news people, mostly whites, to visit his city to see how much he had accomplished. One of the speakers was a black deputy police chief who told us we didn't have a thing to fear walking the streets of Detroit. "Our problem in Detroit," he said, "is young blacks killing young blacks."

His assurance didn't exactly give me the warm-fuzzies.

Wouldn't it be hell to be a young black living - or trying to live - in Detroit?

Even worse, wouldn't it be hell being the father or the mother of a young black living in Detroit?

Young insists Detroit's problems - including the fires - did not start with his election to office 17 years ago, and he is absolutely right. When I lived in the Cass Corridor, there wasn't a time, day or night, when I couldn't hear a fire siren just by raising a window.

But the situation has grown worse - much worse - under Young. His response to every problem is to blame whitey and let it go at that.

YOUNG DOESN'T seem to realize the power he could command as a father figure and a role model.

A couple of years ago, a former city employee slapped the mayor with a paternity suit claiming he was the father of her child. OK, so accidents happen. But instead of fessing up, the mayor at first denied responsibility. Then reluctantly, he agreed to blood tests which proved he was the boy's father beyond a shadow of a doubt. Then, with more reluctance, he agreed to help support the child.

The mayor was presented with a tailor-made opportunity to let black males know where their responsibility lies in regard to the children they propagate. But Young fumbled the ball and the only message that came through is that smart fathers should try to shirk responsibility at every turn.

THE FACT REMAINS that the black family is the only social institution capable of giving young blacks the kind of love, support and self-esteem they need to cope with an increasingly complex society.

Detroit can double the size of its police force and cover the landscape with jails. But the city's problems won't go away as long as black families remain fractured and ineffective.

Letters to the Editor:

Parents tried and keep trying

Editor,

I am writing in response to the comment in the Traverse City Record Eagle in mid-October that John McKown, owner of the Bridge Street Inn, had made in connection with the teenage crime wave that has hit Charlevoix. And I quote, "You wonder if the parents of these kids are doing enough to keep them out of these situations."

Well, Mr. McKown, I am the mother of one of those kids and I would like to let you know, in brief, what we have done other than sit on our butts like you think.

There have been countless numbers of sleepless nights, worrying hours and hours of trying to tell my daughter why, just because everyone else is doing things, that those things are still wrong; countless nights we went out looking for her, admitting her to several different treatment centers; taking one day off a week from work to travel down state to visit her, counsel with her and to try to support her; attending Al-Anon meetings with her; reading piles and piles of literature; making phone calls to as far away as Washington D.C. to find help.

Not only has this been financially devastating, but more so emotionally devastating. Can you think of anything else we could have done Mr. McKown? We feel as though we have given 150 percent. And we are not alone.

But the bottom line is - a drug addict, like an alcoholic, won't get help until he or she wants it. You can't do it for them.

Obviously, Mr. McKown, you know nothing about either disease. Perhaps you should put a little more effort into learning and spend a little less time criticizing someone you don't even know.

What is needed is support, not only for all the parents, but for the kids too. I only thank God that there were enough caring people in Charlevoix who didn't criticize, but were there with open hearts; not to judge or to blame - just to care.

I do not condone what our daughter did, but I can not control her disease. Only she can do that. It is time for us to let go, but we will never give up. And I will take it one day at a time.

Bills - Telgenhof

Geraldine M. Bills and Joel Telgenhof were married Saturday, Oct. 6, in Grace Community Church, Central Lake, with the Rev. Harold Kruse officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Leslie J. Gates of Ellsworth, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ron Kooyer of East Jordan.

The bride's wedding gown was fashioned of crystal, organza with ruffles on the shoulders, long lace sleeves, an open V-shaped neckline and a ruffled train. Miniature pearls accented the bodice and neckline. Her bouquet was composed of roses, carnations, and baby's breath.

Susan Variot served the bride as maid of honor. She wore a tea-length gown of royal blue silk and lace. The flower girl was the bride's daughter, Alisia Bills, who wore a matching dress and carried pink sweetheart roses, baby's breath, white carnations and ivy.

Tim Sommer served as best man, and Dan and John Telgenhof, brothers of the bridegroom, were ushers.

A luncheon at the church followed the wedding ceremony, after which the newlyweds left for a trip to Niagara Falls. They are now at home in Charlevoix.

A Unique Experience

Social Services helpers recognized

The Charlevoix County Department of Social Services honored its Foster Parents and Volunteers at a recognition dinner Oct. 23 at the Wolverine-Dilworth Inn in Boyne City. More than 70 people attended.

Foster Parents received certificates from Doug McCombs, Services Supervisor. Those receiving certificates were John and Charlene Bush, Lawrence and Sandra Bergmann, Robert and Rose Davis, Jake and Joan Janack, Pat and Gail Kubesh, Robert and Marilyn Oliver, Brad and Lynn Sweeney, and Michelle Zimmerman.

In emphasizing the important role played by foster parents, McCombs pointed out that while the number of children placed in foster care has decreased dramatically over the past few years, the need for quality care of children who cannot reside with their parents remains crucial.

"Child development is dependent upon the nurturing, guidance, and other issues typically provided by parents," McCombs said. "Foster parents not only must step in and fulfill this parental role, but must also help in minimizing the trauma of having been removed from their parents' home. We understand and deeply appreciate these difficult tasks that foster parents take on and that is why we have gathered to give special recognition to those caring people."

Volunteer Secretary Cathy Tilden presented Volunteer certificates for service as follows:
Under one year: James Hermon, Dannielle Meyer, Mel

Morrison, Duane Nelson, Deborah Otto Beaudry, Marguerite Stokes, Chester Laginess, John Miller.

One year: Lloyd Cummings, Donna Decker, Lewis Hooper, Frances Hooper, Ethel Kerner, Mildred LeBrecque, Lucille Martin, Floyd Peck, Kay Peck, Sheila Rake.

Two years: Frank Birdsall, Doris Birdsall, Sara Cummings, Lillian Martinek, Care and Share Food Pantry.

Four years: Robert Homas, Five years: David Ecker, Deborah Ecker, Dennis Gocha, Mildred Gocha.

Seven years: Anna Willis, Charlevoix Community Food Pantry.

Nine years: Raymond Ecker, Ten years: Constance Fraley, Marsha Smith.

Eleven years: John Daniels.

Fourteen years: Virginia Daniels.

Fifteen years: Boyne City Community Service Center.

Volunteers who were absent were Bonnie Altman, Linda Barnes, Luella Barnes, Robert Black, J. O. Crawford, Oma Darrah, Raymond Giffin, George Hamlin, Margaret Landman, Michael Oster, Kathy Peck, Dianne Penfold, Shirley Roloff, Steve and Linda Schwartzfisher, Gerald Talberg, Ernest and Janet Walden, the Full Gospel Truth Church, and Stitch and Chat of Livonia.

Special Volunteer Awards were presented by Vasco Zucchiatti, Volunteer Services Coordinator, as follows:

More than 200 hours of service: Doris Birdsall, Mildred LeBrecque, Margaret Landman, Floyd Peck, and Gerald Talberg. More than 500 hours of service: Kathy Peck, Gerald Talberg, Ernest Walden, and Anna Willis. More than 2,000 hours of service: Mildred Gocha and Dennis Gocha. More than 7,000 hours of service: Raymond Ecker. More than 8,000 hours of service: Raymond Ecker.

In making the presentations, Zucchiatti said that volunteers provide extra service that would otherwise not occur, or if provided, would overwhelm case workers. "Volunteers provide a variety of services, ranging from office work to working with clients in their homes. Some volunteers have regular scheduled assignments and some are on call, ready to go at the last minute. Volunteers are a valued and much appreciated resource," he concluded.

People in the above photos were recently honored by the Charlevoix County Department of Social Services for their volunteer efforts. Names of the volunteers are included in the accompanying story.

Charle-facts

In 1897, the Cobbs & Mitchell Company of Cadillac purchased 40,000 acres of hard wood lands in Charlevoix County. Logs from the land, located in the eastern part of the county, were shipped from the main line of the Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad at Boyne Falls. What remained of the timber after the logs were taken out was sold to the Antrim Iron Company. The greater part of the hard wood lumber made by Cobbs & Mitchell was worked into flooring before being sold.

CHURCH

Della Oliver

Della Oliver, 77, of Charlevoix, died Nov. 7, 1990, at Charlevoix Area Hospital.

Funeral was held at 2 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 10, at the Greensky Hill United Methodist Church. The Rev. Benton Heiser officiated with burial in Greensky Hill Cemetery, Hayes Township.

The former Della Heath was born Nov. 4, 1913, in Clay City, Ind., the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Maryfield Heath. She grew up in Clay City and graduated from Fort Wayne Bible College. She was a missionary teacher in Indiana and as a young woman moved to Northern Michigan where she served as a missionary teacher in the Pleasant Valley area near East Jordan.

On July 29, 1956, she married Jay Oliver at the Greensky Hill church. She was the first non-Native American to be married at the church.

Mrs. Oliver was employed by Gulf & Western in East Jordan for eight years and then worked as a custodian for Charlevoix public school for eight years until her retirement at age 62.

After retirement, she continued her missionary work at Greensky Hill United Methodist Church.

She was a member of the church and the woman's club of the church. She was also a lay speaker at the church. She enjoyed gardening and growing flowers and took special pride in arranging her flowers for services at the church each Sunday.

Survivors include her husband; two sons, Daniel J. and Edward G., both of Charlevoix; two sisters, Helen Heath of Clay City, Ind., and Carrie Merret of South Bend, Ind.; one brother, Earl Heath of South Bend.

The family suggests memorials to the Greensky Hill United Methodist Church.

Arrangements were handled by the Winchester Funeral Home.

Rosabelle A. Norton

Rosabelle A. Norton, 98, long time Charlevoix resident, died

Oct. 29 at St. Anne's Nursing Home in Detroit.

The deceased was a life-long member of the First Baptist Church of Charlevoix. She and her husband, the late Verne Norton, moved from their house on Mercer Boulevard in the late 1950s to Detroit to live with their daughter and husband, Julia and Fred Lelling, making their home there until 1989, when the deceased entered St. Anne's Nursing Home.

Besides her husband, she was preceded in death by three children: Richard, Crawford, and Julia. Survivors include two daughters-in-law, Mrs. Richard Norton of Columbus, Ohio and Mrs. Crawford Norton of Southfield; two sisters, Mrs. Alta Spencer and Mrs. Marie Reed, both of Southfield; and a brother-in-law, Fred Norton of Escondido, California.

Funeral services were held Nov. 1 in the chapel of Somers Funeral Home, with the Rev. John Martin of the Mt. Hope United Methodist Church officiating. Interment was in Forest Lawn Cemetery.

BUSINESS

Northern Michigan wage survey in progress

Manufacturers in Antrim, Charlevoix and Emmet Counties are being asked to complete a wage and benefit survey as part of the Michigan Industrial Wage Survey project. The Northern Lakes Economic Alliance is administering the survey, as are other Community Growth Alliances (CGA) throughout the state, in an effort to compile accurate information on labor costs in the industrial community.

All participating manufacturers can receive a free copy of the findings. The information will allow employers to compare wage and benefit packages to similar businesses throughout the state, attract and retain employees by demonstrating how compensation packages compare to other companies and to identify possible weaknesses in compensation packages.

"We will also use the data for business attraction and retention purposes. One of the first questions asked by companies looking to relocate concerns labor costs," said Thomas Johnson, Coordinator of the Northern Lakes Economic Alliance. "We feel that economic development in the community will be enhanced through the collection of this information."

The data collected will be used only in aggregate and all responses will be kept confidential. The final survey results will be available in January. The Michigan Dept. of Commerce, which is funding the survey, has contracted with two private firms to construct the survey and to tally the results.

Any company which did not receive a survey, but would like to be included, can call Tom Johnson, Coordinator, Northern Lakes Economic Alliance, at 616-582-6482.

Growth Alliance gets new director

The Northern Lakes Economic Alliance announced that Thomas B. Johnson has been named the Coordinator for the three county community growth alliance (CGA).

Johnson earned his degree in urban planning and environmental science from Western Michigan University. He has worked in Macomb County as a business development specialist and as a counselor for the Macomb/St. Clair Private Industry Council. He is a certified International Trade specialist and provided export assistance to companies in Macomb County.

"Economic development is not something I do alone," Johnson said. "It is a long term process, one that involves participation from communities, businesses, developers and all levels of government."

He will be visiting communities in Antrim, Charlevoix and Emmet Counties in the next few weeks to become familiar with the various governments, meet community leaders and tour industrial sites and manufacturing firms.

Johnson has a strong background in business and real estate development and has worked with the State's financial incentive programs. As Coordinator of the CGA, he will supervise the three components of the CGA: the area development office, the local procurement office and the newly organized business development center. His specific focus will be directing the area development office which is located in Boyne City.

Johnson is a pilot and has been a real estate appraiser for commercial and industrial properties. He replaces Dick Beagle who accepted a position with Harbor House Publishers in Boyne City.

Johnson lives in Charlevoix with his wife, Mary, a graphic artist.

New nursing director named

Joy Klooster, R.N., has accepted the position of Director of Nursing Services at Charlevoix Area Hospital.

Klooster has served as interim director for the past three months. She joined the Charlevoix Area Hospital staff in October, 1988, as Medical-Surgical Care Coordinator/Discharge Planner. She received her Bachelor of Science in Nursing from Saginaw Valley State College and has worked as a nurse at Saginaw General Hospital and Northern Michigan Hospital.

As Director of Nursing she will have responsibility for the policies, procedures and patient care practices for the 65-member nursing staff at the hospital. She and her husband Nathan reside in Charlevoix.

Joy Klooster was recently named head of nursing at Charlevoix Area Hospital. Klooster and her husband, Nate, live in Charlevoix.

An inexperienced basketball team? Us? Heck no, we've got a whole season under our belts.

Charlevoix's sophomore dominated girls' basketball team won only three games during the regular season, but opened the district tournament at Harbor Springs with a 62-57 victory over East Jordan. The Rayders split two games with East Jordan during the regular season.

The beginning of Monday evening's game looked like the beginning of the end of the Rayders' season as they fell far behind. Foul trouble left some of the Rayder players parked on the sidelines toward the end of the half. Charlevoix trailed 16-10 at the end of the first quarter and 36-22 at the half.

With nothing to lose, the Director David Hales of the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) announced that three highway check stations for successful firearm deer hunters will be open Nov. 16-18. Hunters are reminded that due to construction, the I-75 check station which has traditionally been open at the Clio rest area, will be moved to the Birch Run weigh station for this season. In addition, the Birch Run check station will also be open Nov. 24 and 25.

The stations, open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., will be at the following highway locations: 1) I-75, at the weigh station, 2 1/2 miles north of Birch Run, 2) US-27, rest area south of Shepherd, and 3), US-131, rest area south of Big Rapids.

A successful deer hunter patch will be awarded to deer hunters who stop at DNR check stations and have their deer examined by DNR personnel.

Biological information will be collected to help in the management of Michigan's deer herds. Data gathered will include location where deer Rayders went to a Bonzai pressure defense in the second half. The defensive pressure paid off and Charlevoix slowly, but surely crept back into the game.

With less than four minutes left to play, the Rayders finally took the lead. Although the Rayders had Big Mo (Momentum) on their side, they could not put the East Jordan team away until the final seconds.

East Jordan's Buffy Kooyer kept her team in the game totalling 21 points on the night.

Gina Webster scored 20 points for Charlevoix, while Mary Jane Grunch contributed 13 and Sheila Siegwart eight.

Charlevoix will now play Boyne City, Wednesday, Nov. 14. Boyne City beat Charlevoix twice during the regular season.

The Charlevoix Ski Team will host its annual ski swap Nov. 17 and 18. The swap raises money for the team while providing people with an opportunity to buy and sell used skis, boots and other winter wear.

The swap takes place in the Charlevoix High School cafeteria. People who wish to sell items should register them between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., Saturday, Nov. 17. The ski team receives 20 percent commission on the sale price.

Rick Brandt looks to pass the ball while being defended by Dennis VanGuilder. Meanwhile, Susan VanWieren (right) defends Dick Swenor even though her team apparently still has the ball. They say that in order to play good defense, you have to anticipate the play, but playing defense even before your team has lost the ball may be a bit much.

McRae reports on travels through Europe

(This is the second installment of notes made by Charlevoix resident Ralph McRae following his recent trip to eastern Europe.)

"After the school experience (visiting a local school) in Kiev, Nadia and I walked many blocks. We were looking for a lady I met in New Delhi, India. We finally found her place of employment in a TV station, but, disappointingly, this particular lady was sent on assignment out of Kiev the day before I arrived.

"That evening, Nadia and husband Sasha, Gordon Smith, and I had a big dinner in the hotel with good music, a big meal with two bottles of wine and one bottle of champagne. I paid the whole bill, less than $10. Gordon Smith gave a very large tip.

"Nadia did not want me to see their apartment—they slept on the floor—but she did take me to a friend's place. It was very untypical, however—a large five room apartment rented by a man with a good position in the city, paying 30 rubles a month plus seven rubles for electricity. Thirty rubles equals about $3 in American money. In this apartment I met Helen, a young teacher in love with a man in Budapest to whom I hand-carried a letter.

"Nadia told me the people were very unhappy about conditions in Kiev, Ukraine, a republic of the Soviet Union. There is a shortage of food and clothing, low pay, small apartments, and poor transportation.

"Some people in Kiev felt they had been affected by the nuclear explosion at Chernobyl, but I had heard the wind blew the radiation clouds away from Kiev. In Kiev, I saw many lines of people waiting to buy food and clothing.

"Early evening of the fourth day, Mike drove me to the rail station, where thousands of people waited. I had a ticket for Krakow, Poland. The next morning I arrived at the Polish border, with the Russian military checking passports. The train was backed into a siding and the wheels were changed. Every car had stopped over hydraulic lifts and each car raised and the wheels adjusted for a narrow-gauge track. Later we were checked by the Polish border guards, all of this taking over three hours.

"I had noticed large acre farms in the Russian countryside, but in Poland, the farms were smaller. It was potato-digging time, and around the small towns, every house had a well-filled vegetable garden.

"At the Krakow station around noon time, a taxi took me to a Holiday Inn hotel. It was Saturday, September 15, and after a fifteen-hour train ride I was ready to hang around the hotel. The next day, Sunday, I went to a big square where every possible kind of items were for sale in the open market, a big contrast to Kiev. I also arranged for a taxi to take me to Auschwitz, the Nazi death camp. In the hotel, I talked for some time with an Italian from Milan who was in Poland selling welding equipment to the area's coal miners.

"The Next day, Monday, I left by taxi to Auschwitz. After some delay at the camp, I went with other Americans through the death camp where an average of 2,500 persons each day for four years were murdered—Russian prisoners, Gypsies, Polish people—but mostly Jewish people from nine different countries, including 50,000 children. I was very surprised to learn that many of these people were tortured and lived under horrible conditions. After three hours, we drove on to Katowitz, two more hours of driving.

"At the station, while buying my ticket to Prague, I met two American boys backpacking through Europe. I went to a hotel for dinner and afterward the porter of the hotel carried my bags to the train station and stayed with me until the train left. On the station platform, I met three girls from New York City, also backpacking.

"I, the two boys, and a fourth person filled a sleeping compartment—the seats were pulled out for sleeping. Unfortunately I slept next to the window and had to go to the toilet three times, making it necessary to step over three persons each time. One of the girls did not have a proper visa and was almost taken off the train.

"We arrived next morning at the largest train station in Europe (Prague)—really something and quite new, too. The seven of us (I, two boys and three girls plus a Polish girl) had breakfast in the station restaurant.

"At the accommodation office, I arranged to rent a flat for three nights, at $74 a day, three large rooms plus kitchen and beautiful bath. There were sleeping accommodations for eight persons. The first night, the two boys and I were there, and after sleeping in the hallway on the third floor, the three girls came in about 6:30 a.m. After sleeping a few more hours, they had their first baths in several weeks. Later that day, the Polish girl joined us, so seven persons were sleeping there. The girls got the meals and we went for long walks, going to the famous pedestrian bridge where there are Biblical statues every hundred feet and people selling all kinds of things.

"We walked to the nearby Art Museum, took a picture of a bride and groom leaving flowers at a memorial to those killed in the quick revolution, and also had my picture taken with the bride and groom. Going through the museum later, we had to pay for using the toilet. The lady attendant gave me a long piece of toilet tissue and when I returned it to her she thanked me. One night we went to a musical revue at a nearby hotel and visited a casino but did not gamble.

(to be continued next week.)

Oh Boix!

A compilation of praises won by Charlevoix people for good deeds, good work and hard work.

Marine Pfc. Stephen A. Vincent, son of Charles D. Vincent of 305 May Street, Charlevoix, has completed recruit training at Marine Corps Recruit Depot, San Diego.

During the 13-week training cycle, Vincent was taught the basics of battlefield survival. He was introduced to the typical daily routine that he will experience during his enlistment and studied the personal and professional standards traditionally exhibited by Marines.

He participated in an active physical conditioning program and gained proficiency in a variety of military skills including first aid, rifle marksmanship and close order drill. Teamwork and self-discipline were emphasized throughout the training cycle.

A 1990 graduate of Boyne City High School, he joined the Marine Corps in August 1990.

Patrick F. Linse has been promoted in the U.S. Air Force to the rank of technical sergeant. Linse is an information management technician at Homestead Air Force Base, Homestead, Fla.

He is the son of Edward Linse of 111 E. Garfield Street, Charlevoix.

The sergeant is a 1973 graduate of Charlevoix High school.

Lake levels

Precipitation on the Great Lakes basin was well above average for the month of October. As a result, the water levels of Lakes Superior and Ontario rose slightly at a time of the year when they are usually falling. Similarly, the seasonal decline of the remaining lakes was slowed. Nevertheless, all the lakes are expected to follow the normal seasonal downward trend in November.

The Great Lakes forecast, published in the Monthly Bulletin of Lake Levels for the Great Lakes, shows that Lakes Superior and Michigan-Huron are expected to remain below their long-term average levels during the next six months. Lakes St. Clair and Erie are projected to continue above their long-term averages throughout the same period.

Group continues working Firemen train at Big Rock on highway extension

How to stretch approximately $30 million to cover as much of $65 million of work as possible is the current dilemma of the Michigan Department of Transportation (MDOT) as they work towards a decision concerning US 131.

At its monthly board of directors meeting held in Petoskey, the US 131 Area Development Association board heard that MDOT hopes to decide by year's end whether to build a full freeway around the city of Cadillac to begin with, or to build a four-lane divided highway which would be upgraded to limited access at a future date, in order to allow construction to be continued north through the Manton area with funds that are available.

The association hopes MDOT will consider allocating some of their increased income from higher current fuel prices to help resolve this issue. Expediting construction of the US 131 freeway, both to the north and at the southern end, continues to be the goal of the association.

In other business, the board approved a new budget for the coming year.

Training for plant workers and local fire departments has been conducted all summer at a special training facility at North Central Michigan College in Petoskey. Last week's drill on site served as additional training for fire fighters to that they would be better able to deal with the security and safety regulations unique to nuclear plants.

Board approves new support contract

By WENDI WRIGHT

At its regular meeting Monday night, the Charlevoix Board of Education ratified a new contract with school support staff, including maintenance, custodial, culinary, secretarial/clerical and assistant personnel.

Under the new contract, members of the support staff will receive a 5.75 percent increase this first year, and 5.9 percent the second and third years, according to Rich Kelly, school business manager. He used the example of a custodian who has been with the school seven years to illustrate the increase; he or she will be paid an additional $1500 for each of the three years covered by the contract.

The school district this month also approved a new contract with the teaching staff. That contract called for a 5.75 percent pay increase the first year, 6 percent the second and 6 percent the third year.

According to Kelly, the three-year contract is retroactive to September 1, 1990, and will cost the district $37,800 this school year. Kelly added, however, that because of substantial insurance savings under the new contract, the cost of the wage increases is reduced dramatically, and does not exceed the budget.

Kelly explained that the new insurance plan requires the board to pay the $100 deductible for all employees covered by the contract, but that this additional cost is completely offset by substantially lower premiums. In fact, the school will save approximately $18,000 the first year. Kelly said the new insurance plan is comparable to the old plan, and provides some additional benefits not offered in the past.

This new contract does not cover approximately ten non-union school personnel, including bus drivers. Kelly stated that negotiations with these remaining employees had just begun, and that he hoped to sign contracts as soon as possible, so these people could have their retroactive pay increases before Christmas.

Joel and Marty Trubilowicz (center and right) enjoy placing ornaments on the city's Christmas tree during the 1989 celebration. Children may bring their ornaments downtown and get a lift from the electrical department 2-5:30 p.m. Friday.

Santa plans to visit this Friday

Christmas is a season of Santa Claus Saturdays for Charlevoix children. The jolly old elf will make several appearances with welcoming ceremonies beginning Friday, Nov. 23, in East Park.

Charlevoix will ring in its Christmas season the day after Thanksgiving by lighting the town Christmas tree at 5 p.m. Friday in East Park. Starting at 2 p.m., children will ride to the top of the tree in the electric department's bucket truck to hang hand-made ornaments.

While townspeople deck the tree, the Charlevoix County

Unit of the American Cancer Society will sell white dove tree ornaments made by Charlevoix Middle School students. Proceeds from the $5 donation go to the cancer society. Dove ornaments, on sale near the community tree, may be bought in memory of anyone, not necessarily a cancer victim.

Merchants will host their annual open house from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 1, at participating businesses throughout town. To entice people to "shop Charlevoix," those businesses will have drawings for gift certificates and treat shoppers to coffee, punch and cookies.

Santa will "do lunch" with children from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 8, at the elementary school. Children can have lunch and have photos taken with Santa at the annual Santa luncheon sponsored by Beta Sigma Phi, a women's service club.

Also the Middle School Youth Group of First Congregational Church will sponsor a Santa's Secret Shop with gifts in the price range for young shoppers. Youth will help

County board OKs new waste pact

Charlevoix and Emmet Counties have decided on an agreement for the disposal of solid waste in the two counties for the next 20 years.

At the recent joint meeting of both County Boards, the written agreement was passed around, discussed, and signature by both County Board chairmen authorized.

The agreement requires both counties to "initiate research to identify at least one landfill site within their respective counties, for the location of a Type II Sanitary Landfill that has the capacity to accept wastes generated in the two counties for a 20 year period."

When the Cedar Ridge Landfill in Charlevoix County reaches capacity or is otherwise closed, but not sooner than 10 years, "a regional landfill facility will begin accepting wastes from Charlevoix and Emmet County for a minimum of 20 years."

The agreement provides for surcharges to be made to the community hosting a disposal facility. These surcharges would be used "for recreation lands, preserving open spaces, and protecting environmentally sensitive lands."

Resource recovery is also covered in the agreement with the statement that "Any surcharge placed on waste entering the facility for composting, recycling, or household hazardous waste collection shall be rebated to the county from which it is collected. These funds shall be solely used for the purpose for which they are collected."

Both counties agree to keep rates charged at landfills the same for private individuals and commercial collection companies.

"Emmet and Charlevoix Counties do not propose to control rates charged at privately owned facilities," the agreement also states.

In order for an outside county to use a landfill, that county may be required to demonstrate effective alternative waste management programs, including "recycling of recoverable materials, composting and related treatment of bio-degradable products, removal of hazardous and/or toxic materials from the general waste stream, and energy recovering systems and programs."

The agreement provides for a landfill rotation schedule, whereby one county is not "locked into being the home community for a landfill disposal facility in perpetuity."

The agreement becomes effective upon signing by both counties and will be in force for an initial period of five years.

Charlevoix church volunteers preparing for Christmas

Charlevoix area churches are once again planning for the distribution of food and Christmas gifts for the needy.

Over 100 volunteers are phoning and mailing cards to families referred by the Department of Social Services and the school nurses to verify their willingness to accept a basket.

The next steps are purchasing, wrapping, packing, and delivering the baskets, all done by volunteers. Help is needed in all phases of the work, and the churches ask that anyone able to volunteer time do so through his or her own church or by calling Mrs. Clayton Smith, his year's chairperson, at 547-2120.

The work is divided up by churches. One church is providing and wrapping all children's gifts, another is furnishing presents for all recipients over 75, and so on.

There is a present need for money to purchase canned and fresh foods. Children's socks are also needed.

The week before Christmas will be a busy one for all volunteers. On Tuesday and Wednesday, Dec. 18 and 19, groceries for the baskets will be delivered to the basement of the Congregational Church; on Thursday, the groceries will be packed; on Friday potatoes and apples will be bagged; and on Saturday, the bags of groceries and gifts will be picked up at the church and delivered to the designated families.

Travels through Eastern Europe Ralph McRae concludes diary on recent trip

(This is the last installment of notes made by Charlevoix resident Ralph McRae following his recent trip to eastern Europe).

"At a Prague tourist office, I bought a ticket to Budapest, using my credit card. Later, Richard (one of the backpackers I had met) and I took a cab to the Hungarian Consul, where, in 20 minutes and for $14, I got my visa for that country.

"After waiting a very long time to get another cab, a reporter from a Prague newspaper offered to help us. He took us to a nearby metro station and stayed with us in a long underground ride, transferring to another branch that took us to the train station.

"At the train station, a man from Canada showed me how to read the posted rail schedules. It was then easy to find the right platform and board the train for Budapest. It was one of the few times I traveled in the day time, leaving at 11:30 a.m. Going through Czechoslovakia was a real pleasure—beautiful wooded hills, narrow valleys and small lakes, also winding paved roads.

"Across from me quietly sat Margeta. After a few hints she admitted she spoke just a little English. Only she and a medical doctor from East Germany could speak my language. The other three passengers tried to understand us.

"As this was my first train having a dining car, I took Margeta to lunch. The train stopped in Brno, Moravia, where Margeta used to live. She was going to Budapest to see her mother who worked for a newspaper there.

"We arrived late in Budapest, which is a very attractive city at night. It seemed that every light in town was turned on bright.

"After a costly cab fare, I walked into the Gilbert Hotel just before midnight and was able to get a room. I had read about the hotel before leaving Charlevoix. It is known throughout Europe for its famous thermal baths. It has a tremendous swimming pool, much bigger than our high school gym, high ceilings with balconies, Roman marble columns and mythical figures spouting spring water. In addition, it has four other thermal pools, each at different temperatures, steam rooms, and massage tables. I got a massage, which was more like a sadistic beating. The next day I felt I must have been in an accident.

Letters to the Editor:

Teachers grateful for community potluck

Editor,

On behalf of the teachers of Charlevoix I wish to thank the members of the Charlevoix Ministerial Association for organizing the Community Thanksgiving Potluck last Sunday evening which honored teachers and administrators. Our thanks also to the many wonderful cooks from area churches who provided the delicious meal. The warm fellowship, the friendly conversation, the food, the plaques, and the kind words by those who spoke were a wonderful boost to our morale. All of us who attended returned to our classrooms on Monday with a renewed zeal and enthusiasm. It feels good to be appreciated.

Sincerely,
Vincent Chew, president

PTA thanks supporters of recent fun night

Dear Editor,

On behalf of the Charlevoix Parent-Teacher Association, I would like to express our thanks for your participation in our recent Fun Hoops Family Fun Night. Your assistance was both valuable and greatly appreciated by the P.T.A. Without your participation this first event would not have been the huge success that it was.

It is indeed gratifying that you share with our Parent-Teacher Association the goals of contributing to the benefit of our children while promoting family activities which are both fun and beneficial to our children, our school and our community.

Thanks again for your help!
Ann Golski, Vice President

Association

REASONABLE TO ME

L. SCOTT SWANSON

Technology changes hunting

Hunting has become so advanced. When I first began traveling to the Upper Peninsula, we stayed in a big tent and nobody hunted from elaborate blinds.

This year we're staying in a portable cabin type arrangement and everybody's hunting in elaborate blinds with heaters.

The tent was 12 feet wide by 30-some feet long. Setting it up and tearing it down was a hassle and it was kind of dusty, but an oil stove kept it reasonably warm and it kept up to 12 of us fairly comfortable.

Then, last season, Dudley Stevens built a portable cabin for their camp. Some of the guys from our camp saw it and decided to build one of our own.

The Whitleys, John and Michael, took up the project with a vengeance. When it comes to creative construction, just stand back and give them room to go to it. The structure they devised has: lightweight interlocking walls; metal trusses which hook over the walls at one end and to a center beam at the other; and a tarp roof which stretches over the trusses. The whole thing breaks down so it can be carried on trailer.

My dad, Larry Swanson, and Bob Geer put three windows in the thing. The windows slide open to let out the smoke from cigars and the cook stove. They also built a new custom eating table, complete with a Masonite top so food dishes and cards will slide unimpeded.

I freely confess to being the least mechanically inclined person in camp, but it had always been clear, even to me, that the bunk system could stand some improvement.

The bunk frames are fine in terms of stability, but setting them up has always been a nightmare. There are three sets of bunks. The parts all look somewhat alike, but they aren't interchangeable. The end piece from one bunk won't fit on the side boards of another bunk or even on the opposite end of the side boards of the bunk it goes to. Up until this year it took a lot of experimenting and profanity to get those bunks together.

This year, Junior Ward and I put the bunks together before going to camp. Then I took three cans of spray paint and color coded all three bunks.

Deer blinds are another thing which have come a long way. When I shot my first deer, 12 or 13 years back, I was sitting on a little log at the top of a little sidehill in an opening which led down to a swamp.

Sitting on a log would never do these days. Everybody's got elaborate blinds. They started out as pieces of canvas wound around a couple of trees. Now they're everything from special camouflaged blind material, to pvc pit liner covered with brush to light sheets of wood.

Here again, the Whitley brothers are on the leading edge of deer blind technology. Zippered entry ways are only the tip of the iceberg. They even utilize a short piece of plastic rod to hold the roof tight so snow doesn't accumulate on top of it. Can titanium deer blinds be far behind?

Over the years Don Williams', a.k.a. the Plumber, has created on one of a kind deer blind. In fact, we don't even call it a blind any more. We refer to it as the Plumber's Pavilion. It's made out of plastic pit liner walls with brush stacked against them.

The thing must measure at least six feet by six feet inside. The rest of us aren't sure that he just sits in it when he hunts. We suspect he patrols, marching from one end to the other. But he could just sit there if he wanted to. He wouldn't even have to turn around to look over his shoulder. He's got an old car mirror tacked up off to one side of his hunting chair. He calls it his "deer-view mirror."

I haven't seen their new blinds yet, but I understand that the Whites, Mark Sr. and Mark Jr., will be hunting from some kind of wooden structures this year. Given their fishing background, it's not surprising that they would eventually gravitate toward a deer blind resembling a fish shanty.

And just about everybody now has some kind of heater in their blind. My dad used to sit in a big opening on an old rotten pine stump. He shot a lot of deer off of that old stump. Now, he sits in a blind with a catalytic heater.

My, how times have changed.

CLOCKWISE

BOB CLOCK

The day after

Financial wizards are waiting to see how things go in the world of retail sales this Friday — the day after Thanksgiving — before making a prediction on what kind of a Christmas sales season we are going to have.

After a trip to Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, on Saturday, I'm willing to go out on a limb and predict this Christmas season will be fantastic for merchants who offer items that are strange, weird or outright bizarre.

Like electric goldfish, dancing beer cans or bedroom slippers that look like Coors beer cans.

The electric goldfish is a real mind-boggler. Judy and I saw one at the Woolco store on Queen Street. The fish is in a sealed bowl filled with some kind of fluid which I hope isn't water. Flip a switch in the base of the bowl and the fish starts swimming around, tugging on a worm.

I'm not kidding. The fish keeps tugging on the worm but never swallows it. It's a gift you could watch for hours on end if you had half a mind.

The dancing beer can, complete with sunglasses and earphones, was at the Station Mall. As long as the beer can hears music, it will gyrate and twist like there's no tomorrow. Turn off the music, and it will stop. Turn on the music and the beer can will start dancing again. Amazing.

If the can had legs, I'm sure it would dance the can-can. But it hasn't and it doesn't.

Think of what a hit this beer can would make at your favorite tavern. Every time someone cranked up the juke box, the can would start to dance and half of the customers would take the pledge.

The Coors bedroom slippers were at Woolco. These look exactly like Coors beer cans, only greatly enlarged. There are slits on the sides where you are supposed to stick your feet.

Can you imagine padding around the house with a beer can on each foot? Canadians must have a thing about beer cans.

AMERICANS, generally, can't afford to do a great deal of shopping in Canada because prices — except for food — are out of sight, even when you factor in the 15 percent differential between the value of the American dollar and the Canadian dollar.

All three of these items cost just under $20 Canadian — or about $17 American.

A few years ago the Woolco store offered a revolving electric table lamp inside a canopy of strings dripping with mineral oil. As the lamp turned, the mineral oil was pumped from a reservoir at the bottom to a reservoir at the top. Then sparkling globules of oil would flow down the strings to the reservoir at the bottom.

It was the most unusual lighting fixture I have ever seen. Tom Edison would have been fascinated.

He might even have taken the pledge.

CANADA has gotten rid of its paper $1 bill once and for all. Handsome "looney" coins have replaced the dollar.

Paper money on the other side of the border starts with the $2 bill, which is very popular. Then $5s, $10s, $20s and so on.

Unlike our Susan B. Anthony coins which could pass for quarters, the looney — with an engraved loon on one side — looks and feels like no other coin.

I asked one sales clerk how she liked dealing with loonies.

She wrinkled her brow and squinted at me before she realized I was talking about money, not customers.

She said loonies eliminate the handling of a lot of ragged paper money. She likes them. So do I. Perhaps Uncle Sam could rework the Susan B.s to make them suitable for retail trade.

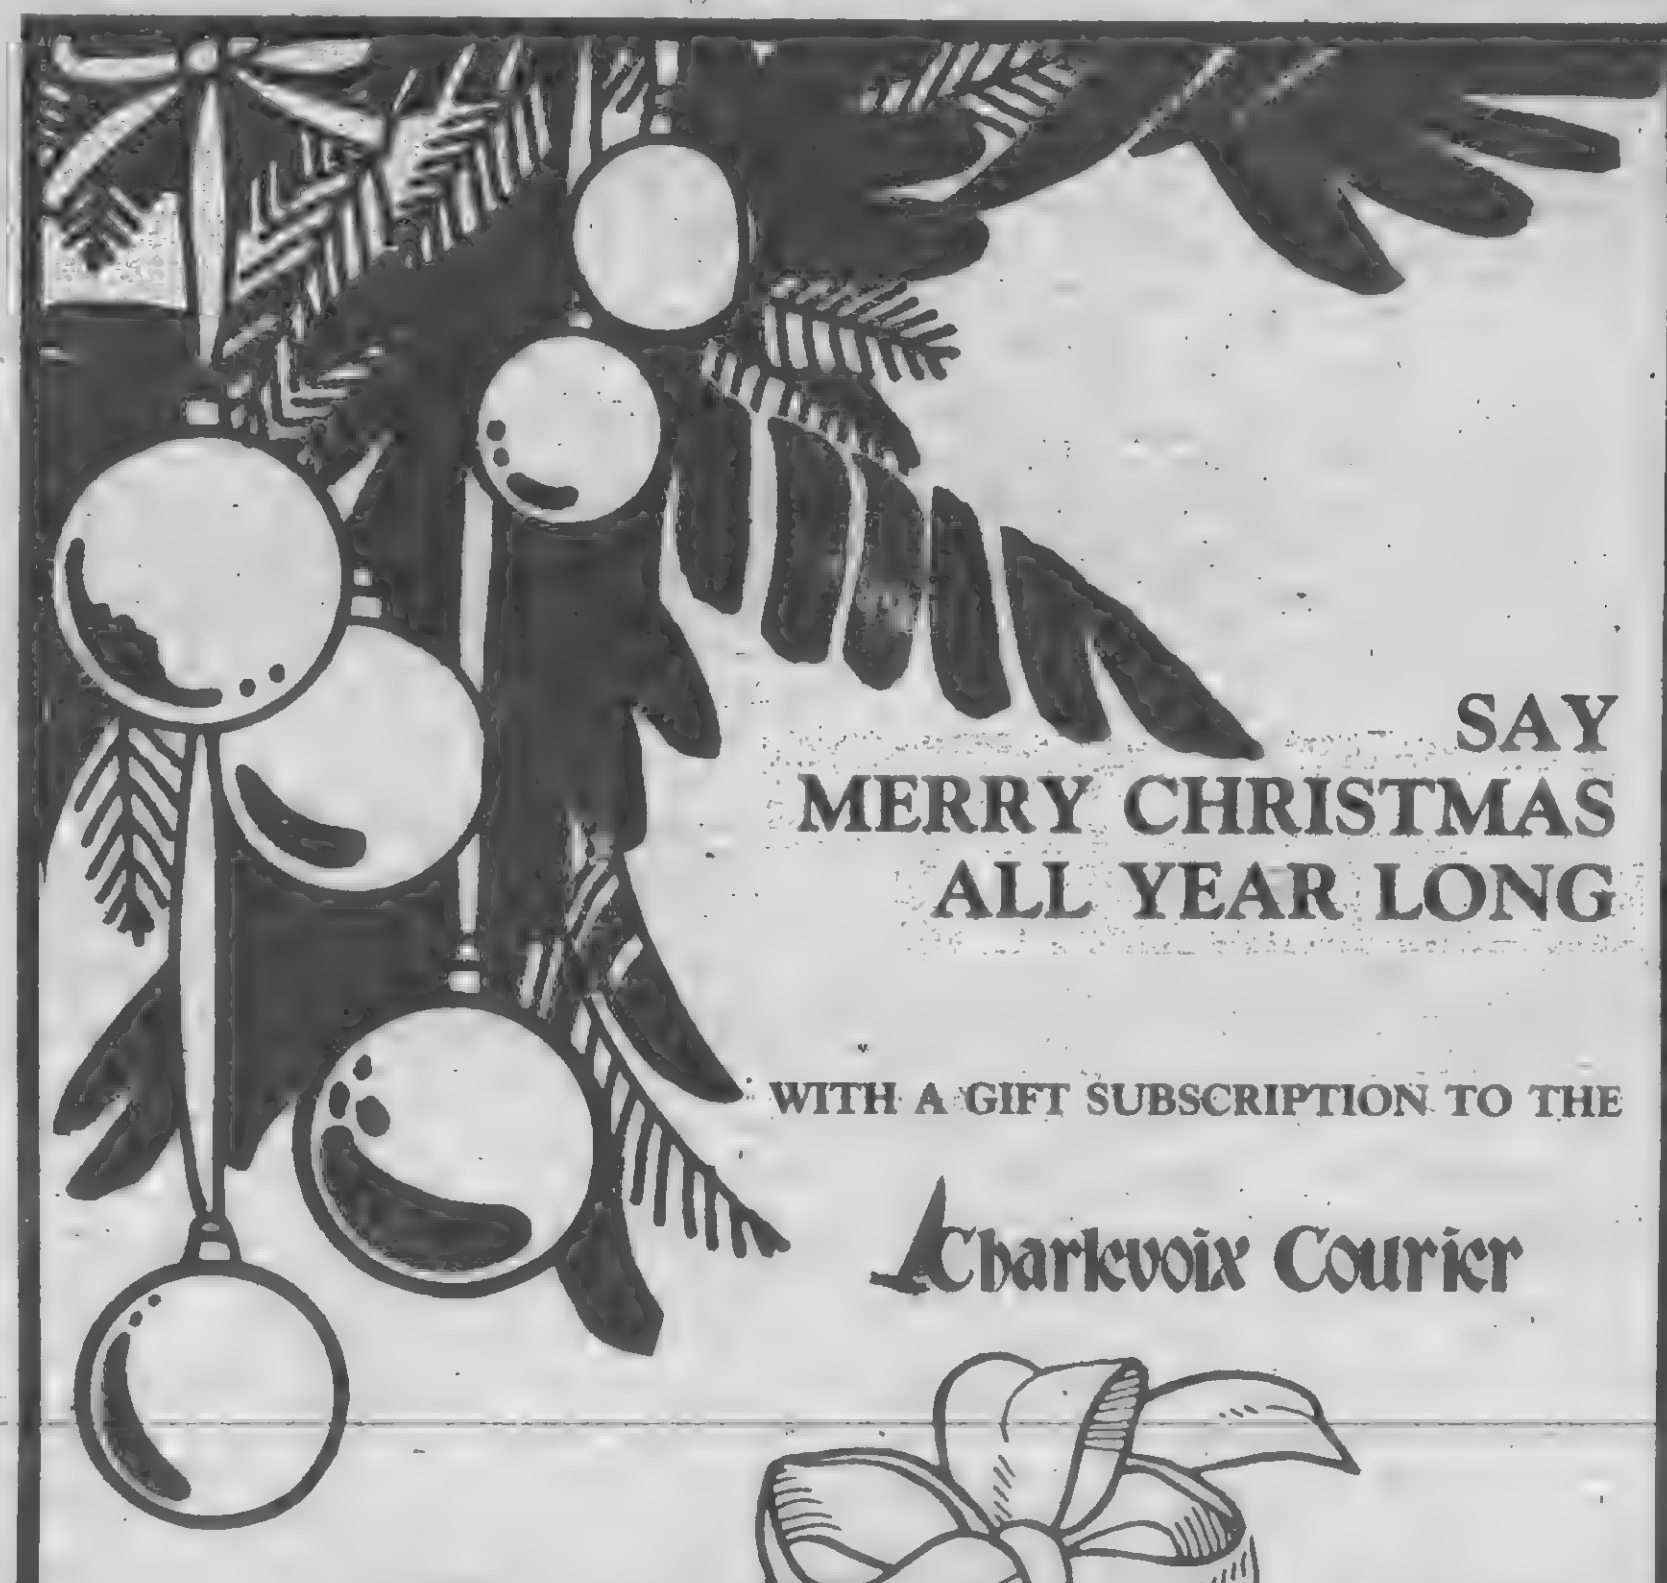

The advantage of metal coins over paper bills, obviously, is that coins last longer and don't have to be replaced every few years. The loonies now circulating in Canada will still be around long after you and I are gone — just like pieces of eight.

They certainly will last longer than electric goldfish and dancing beer cans.

First graders enjoy picking out books at the Charlevoix Elementary School. The books are provided through the Reading is Fundamental program which is funded by the PTA. A recent Family Fun Night raised $1,400 for PTA projects. The students also illustrated bookmarks with their favorite storybook characters to take home with the books they chose themselves.

County resident challenges proposed tax allocation

Boyne City resident Karl Waldner told the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners last week that he felt the 15 mills of tax money which the county is authorized to allocate is too high, that they should get used to the idea 14.5 mills is enough.

He was specifically referring to the county's request for 15.5 mills which was defeated at the general election. "You should be lowering the levy by half a mill, not raising it," he advised.

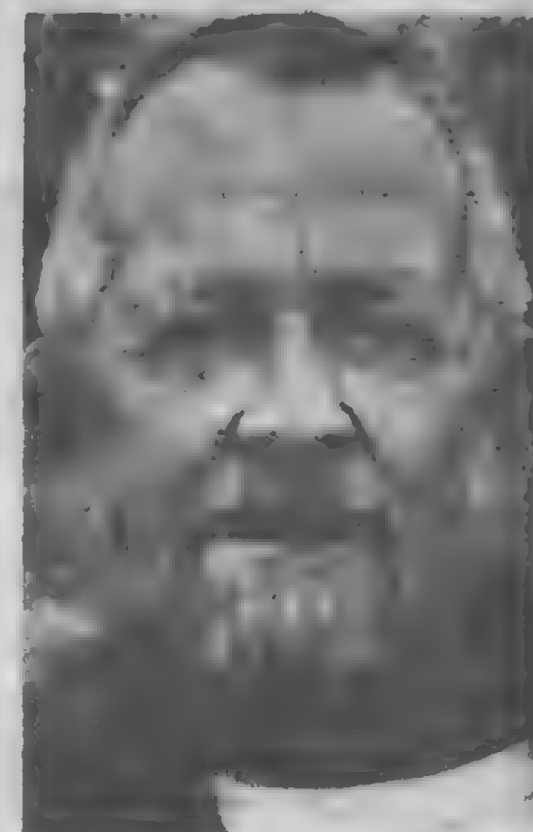

The allocation is made by a Separate Tax Limitation Advisory Committee, the personnel of which is dictated by the state as follows:

The County Treasurer; a member of the County Board; the Superintendent of the Char-Em Intermediate School District; a Member-at-Large appointed by the County Board; a board member from the largest K-12 School District, appointed by the Probate Judge; a board member from the smallest K-12 School District, appointed by the Probate Judge; a member representing the cities, appointed by the Probate Judge; and a member representing the townships, appointed by the Charlevoix Chapter of the Michigan Townships Association from among the Township Supervisors in the county.

For the past four years, Charlevoix County units of government and schools have been receiving their share of 15 mills as follows: 9.10 mills for local schools, 4.7 mills for county government, 1.00 mill for township government, and .20 mill for the Char-Em School District.

Karl Waldner

'You should be lowering the levy by half a mill not raising it.'

Charlevoix women escape injury in bizarre accident

Two Charlevoix women escaped serious injury last week when the car they were driving crashed into "another" car, splitting it in half.

Donna J. Stevens, 59, of Klooster Road, Charlevoix, was hospitalized for two days and her passenger Barbara L. Poley, 57, of Charlevoix was treated and released.

The two men in the car that split in half walked away from the accident and were treated and released. They are Vern Michael Jacobs, 17, and Robert Leroy Mohnke, 17, both of Rte. 1, Boyne Falls.

Passersby examining the twisted wreckage on U.S. 31 near the Petoskey Plastics plant were surprised to learn that no one was killed.

The two-car crash occurred at 2:12 p.m. Thursday on U.S. 31 just west of Lake Grove Road, according to the Emmet County Sheriff's Department.

Jacobs was eastbound in his 1979 Buick Opel along with his passenger Mohnke.

Stevens was westbound driving a 1988 Mercury, along with her passenger, Poley.

Police said it appeared that Jacobs was passing a semi truck when the accident took place. The accident remains under investigation.

It appeared Jacobs had turned the car left just before impact and the Stevens car slammed into the side rear of the smaller car, ripping it in half.

The wreckage at the accident scene was a bit deceiving because of the pieces the accident was originally reported as a three-car pile-up.

The Resort-Bear Creek Fire Department assisted at the scene and a jaws of life extraction machine was used on the Stevens' vehicle to free the women inside.

"The Jacobs' vehicle couldn't be towed away by wrecker — the two halves of the car had to be lifted onto a flatbed truck and taken away."

Bandshell progresses

The Clarence Odmark Pavilion will be finished by the end of the month and dedicated to the longtime Charlevoix bandleader next spring. Fund-raising will continue this winter to raise a remaining few thousand for the structure and $10,000 for a sound system. Contributions may be sent to the Clarence Odmark Pavilion, care of Bob Hoffman, 203 Mason St., Charlevoix 49720. People who donate $100 or more will have their names placed on a memorial plaque in the building.

BEACONS

by Jan Boss
Community Reformed Church

As little children learning to count people usually liked to test us and say "After 4 comes..." and we dutifully would say 5. And then feel so good about ourselves.

I have a question for you today - "After Thanksgiving Comes..." That's right Christmas. Although this year I saw Christmas decorations up in Kalkaska the first part of November.

It takes a long time to get ready for Christmas. Decorating - baking - making lists - gift shopping - parties - programs - all take time, but why shouldn't Christmas start sooner every year? This is a wonderful holiday - not just because of all the time we need to do all our stuff, but don't you think Jesus deserves the biggest - best - most wonderful birthday party ever? Let's remember gifts and the tradition they come from, the spirit they come from - the love they come from. We are the reason God gave us that first gift.

Rhoda Putman marks 90th b-day

Rhoda Putman of Pine River Place recently was guest of honor at a 90th birthday party hosted by several of her 11 living children. Her birthday was also noted at the Thanksgiving party hosted by the Rotary Club for Pine River Place residents. When asked how many grandchildren she had, the 90-year-old explained she started with 14 children, and had 45 grandchildren, 78 great grandchildren and 20 great-great grandchildren.

That all adds up to 143 grandchildren of one kind or another.

Rhoda Putman tells a Rotarian about her 90th birthday celebration. She has more than 140 grandchildren.

McRae's travels

other side of the river was Pest. I came to know a lady and her brother from California, on their way to Turkey. He is a TV programmer. I had several meals with her and we arranged to see each other back in the U.S.A.

"I took a guided tour of the city, going to the highest hill where there is a statue visible to everyone living in Budapest. It is a memorial to Russian soldiers killed in taking over the city. Also on this tour, I talked to a woman from Manchester, England, traveling with three young children. The oldest, a 10-year-old boy, was in a wheelchair. I later had coffee and cake with them and learned they came to Budapest for special therapy treatments for Fabian, very expensive but friends had donated money. They came every three months. Her French husband was in Switzerland.

"Like all other good hotels in Europe, the Gilbert Hotel had a fabulous buffet breakfast. At this hotel, I had Hungarian goulash soup. The bread was free but they charged for the butter. Before leaving the hotel, one of the girls there was on the phone for several hours trying to reserve a hotel room for me in Vienna. I had intended to go by hydrofoil to that city but it was cancelled for the day.

"I bought my ticket for Vienna at a place near the hotel. The driver let me out at the wrong entrance to the rail station so it was a real struggle getting myself and heavy luggage aboard the train. On the train, they served sandwiches and refreshments. I talked to two Austrian girls on their way to their country. After a rather short trip, I got off the train and discovered I had left my handbag on the train. In it were my passport, cash, and credit cards. It was a disaster but I found a station man and we went to the station master, who had a computer controlling all train movements.

"He said not to worry, etc. But on going back to the train I had just left, I was dismayed to see that they were backing that section of the train away. But still walking towards it, I could see coming towards me the girl who had waited on me. She was holding high my missing bag. You can imagine how grateful I was to her, and I think she was happy to see me, too.

"Arriving in Vienna after dark, the cab driver had trouble finding my hotel, which was far from the center of town in a residential block. It was Hotel Cottage, a quaint old building, the smallest I had stayed in, with only 21 rooms. The small elevator was only 18 inches from the door of my room. Later that evening, after walking a few blocks, I found a business street and a small eatery filled with students. There I had Hungarian goulash soup again. The concierge at the hotel with only a few guests had to be very friendly, and he was. They also had a great buffet breakfast table.

"While in Vienna I had my biggest moment. It was on the second floor of a McDonald's Restaurant, where I found out that one of two girls sitting at the table next to me had the same name as mine. Jan McRae is a 20-year-old student going to Edinburgh University in Scotland. We will be writing each other to try to find our relationship. I might invite her to come to Charlevoix.

"Everywhere I went, I met interesting people. On one train ride I talked to a young man whose father lived in Kuwait. He had lost all of his money and possessions, and this young man did not know what would happen to him. He was in Germany studying to be a doctor and running out of money. On a train platform, I met a Japanese girl who was studying German. She was engaged to a Chinese man living in London. In Rothenburg, Germany, I had a long conversation with a woman director of a large therapy institute in California, a highly charged born-again Christian. She was headed for a convention in Turkey.

"I had great variations in hotels—from 250 rooms down to 21 rooms, all of which included buffet breakfast in their daily rates. Some of those hotels were very expensive. I avoided one of them charging $250 a night."

(In last week's installment, it was said that 50,000 children had been killed at Auschwitz. The figure should have been 500,000.)

School district ready for cutbacks in state aid

The Charlevoix School District expects to lose $147.74 per student to the state this year because a change in funding means the state won't pay the employer's share of Social Security.

School business manager Rich Kelly has adjusted the budget to show $115,000 less in state aid revenue this year for the 1,286-student district. Kelly said the state will "recapture" a total of $190,000 from the district this year. The state recaptured $75,000 in funds for special education, vocational education and transportation from the district in 1989.

Charlevoix is one of 55 out-of-formula districts challenging Michigan's educational funding system in court.

The state won the first legal round with the districts when the Michigan Court of Appeals rejected a complaint filed Nov. 9, saying the districts failed to prove that the state didn't fund all school districts at the 1978-79 school year level as required by the Headlee Amendment, which was adopted by voters in 1978.

The Headlee Amendment, which is best known for limiting property taxes to inflationary increases, also requires the state to fund state-mandated programs at the 1978-79 level.

The school districts' attorney, Bart Smith of Birmingham, said the out-of-formula districts don't plan to give up the fight.

"We won't give up, only because we were slapped," Smith said. "We're going to keep pursuing our claims."

Smith thinks the court erred by looking at the wrong section of the state constitution. Section 29, the basis of his suit, requires the state to fund mandated programs at the 1978-79 level. Smith thinks the court looked at Section 30, which generally requires that state to keep state funding at the same level as 1978-79.

In 1978-79, the state funded about 30 percent of mandated programs, Smith said in an earlier interview. This year, he added, about 14 percent of the mandated special education program was funded.

"We will not give up the fight," Smith reiterated. "A lot of school districts are financially devastated."

The "dozens and dozens" of districts in the suit have only one issue in common - Social Security, said Marion Gorton, spokeswoman for the state attorney general's office.

The state is telling districts they might have a point in fighting the funding system, but the joint lawsuit isn't a proper way to resolve the dispute, Gorton said.

Smith filed for a rehearing of the case last week. He hasn't heard what the court intends to do.

Cost of the joint lawsuit will be shared by the 55 districts, Kelly said. Charlevoix Public fight," Smith reiterated. "A lot of school districts are financially

The Charlevoix County Transit system provided 82,194 rides during its 1990-1991 fiscal year

For the purpose of snow removal, parking on all Charlevoix streets and public parking lots is prohibited between 2 a.m. and 6 a.m. from December 1 to April 1. In addition, it is unlawful to deposit, or cause to be deposited, snow, ice, slush on any roadway within the city limits or to deposit, or cause to be deposited snow, ice, or slush on the shoulder of any roadway in a manner which obstructs the vision of a driver of a motor vehicle.

With the onset of winter, local mail carriers are asking people to keep mail boxes clear of snow. Mail carriers ask that people, particularly those on rural routes, keep an area in front of the box clear and leave enough room for the mail car to approach and leave the mail box.

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office would like to give a warning and notice to motorists in Charlevoix County - to be alert when driving in the evening and especially at night to deer crossing the highways.

The Sheriff's office is averaging four car-deer accidents a day for motorists in Charlevoix County. All of these accidents are resulting in property damage to the vehicles involved and some accidents have resulted in personal injury to the driver or their passengers.

The Sheriff's office suggests that you slow down your speed at night and drive defensively and be alert for deer crossing the roadways.

at a total cost of $381,339, or $4.64 a ride, according to the system's annual report.

Fares contributed $58,080 to the cost of operating, along with $130,553 from county millage, $156,872 from state grants, $51,666 from federal grants, and $4,326 from "other" sources.

The average number of daily riders was 327. The greater number of these, 27,263, were classified as "regular" or adults under 60 years of age. Handicapped persons, including clients of the Bergmann Center, accounted for the next largest number of rides, 24,323. Senior citizens accounted for 14,428 rides; handicapped senior citizens accounted for 14,318 rides; and "others" accounted for 1,852 rides.

The report further indicates that ridership increased by 1,788, or 2.2 percent over the previous year.

The Charlevoix County Transit System offers employment in several different categories. They include a manager, assistant manager, superintendent, secretary, drivers, dispatchers, mechanics, and maintenance people, all of whom receive regular county fringe benefits

The Transit System is based in Boyne City in a building paid for largely by state funds. It serves the three cities of the county as well as outlying areas and provides transportation to Petoskey on a weekly basis.

Passengers are picked up and delivered to the places they designate but once-in-a-while riders are requested to make arrangements 24 hours in advance.

Sailors mark deer season

Clear skies and warm winds greeted area sailors Thursday in their annual Deer Hunters Regatta between Harbor Springs and Charlevoix. The crew members of Flyer mounted a moose rack on the bow of their vessel to add to the day's chicanery. Boats converged in Round Lake for lunch before heading back to Harbor Springs.

Precaution necessary for healthy hunting

A good hunter will spend a great deal of time checking his/her equipment. Some of his/her time should also be spent on preparing himself/herself. Many hunters do not undergo the physical rigors of hunting in their day to day routine. Dr. Brian Youngs, Medical Director for District Health Department No. 3, feels that "all hunters should know their physical limitations before a problem develops."

Outdoor activity can be very good for the heart and the rest of the cardiovascular system. Unfortunately, overdoing physical activity can be deadly. Don't let too much of this good thing be harmful to you. Remember, the number one cause of death for men and women is cardiovascular disease, especially acute heart attack.

Before any amount of strenuous activity (especially if it has been sometime between these activities) check with a physician. Your doctor can help you set up a safe progressive program that will enable you to accomplish different physical activities safely. A gradual increase of physical activity is preferable to any, one time, strenuous exertion.

A heart attack may or may not be accompanied by loss of consciousness. The victim may have a history of heart problems, or the attack may come with little or no warning. The sign and symptoms include:

1. Persistent chest pain, usually under the sternum (breastbone). The pain frequently radiates to one or both shoulders or arms, or the neck or jaw or both.
2. Gasping and shortness of breath.
3. Extreme pallor or bluish discoloration of the lips, skin, and fingernail beds.
4. Extreme prostration.
5. Shock (as a rule).
6. Swelling of the ankles (which may be an indication of heart disease).

If a heart attack has occurred, FIRST AID measures include:

Make sure you're in shape for winter's activities

Some of the worst storms and coldest days of this winter are still ahead for Northwestern Michigan. Many of us find outside winter chores unpleasant. This attitude tends to make us stay inside until winter's snowy activities demand that we venture out to attack the largest and heaviest snow drifts.

It's fine to enjoy the slower paced winter lifestyle, but it's also important to remember not to get too relaxed. Summer activities can include digging in the garden, mowing the lawn, or perhaps jogging or swimming. Without this constant type of activity in the winter our bodies tend to adjust to the strenuous intermittent activities that winter can demand.

Dr. Brian Youngs, Regional Medical Director of District Health Department No. 3 recommends that "people with certain medical conditions such as hypertension or anyone over the age of 40 should consult their physician before undertaking any strenuous winter activities."

Snow shoveling is strenuous work. It involves lifting heavy snow and turning and throwing each load. This activity strains both the heart and other muscles. The cold weather makes the strain even greater since your heart has to work overtime in order to keep you warm. Every year we hear unfortunate reports of individuals who suffer severe and sometimes fatal consequences as a result of shoveling snow, pushing cars out of snowbanks, or becoming over-exerted in the cold while hunting or ice fishing.

It's a good rule to avoid the kind of activity that puts lots of stress on your heart and upper body unless you are sure you're in good enough shape to handle such strain. Remember that getting into proper condition takes more than a day or two. Ideally, we should be in good shape long before the first heavy accumulation of snow arrives.

If you must go out to shovel your walks and driveway, be certain to dress in warm clothes. Wear a hat or scarf, since an uncovered head guarantees a significant loss of body heat. Remind yourself that speed is not essential when you're shoveling; pace yourself and take as much time as you need. Take rest breaks as often as you need them. Consider your physical condition and stay within your limitations.

You may want to examine some of the alternatives to shoveling. It's always possible to hire a plow or use a snow blower, especially a self-propelled one.

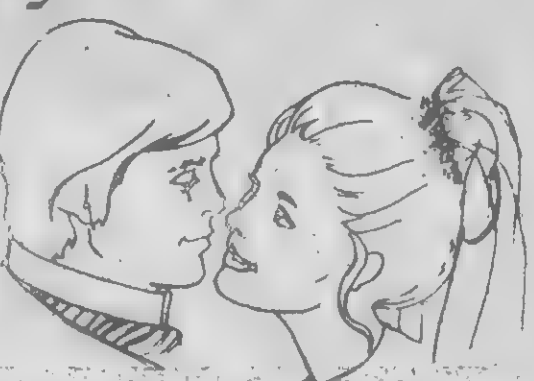

In any case, it's always wise to approach snow removal with caution. By doing so, you can best defend yourself against the rigors of cold weather and the risk of sprains or a heart attack. If you're going to use that snow shovel, you definitely need to be in good physical condition.

Ferry ends season in black

The Ironton Ferry shuts down operations for the season at 10:30 p.m. today and is projected to end the year with a profit.

Charlevoix County Road Commissioner and Ironton Ferry Transportation Authority member John Kujawski said the ferry operations experienced a good year with a gross revenue of approximately $100,000 and few major expenses.

The ferry has made some money for the last few years but had an exceptional season. He didn't have net profit figures available yet but expects the service ran in the black due to low expenses this year.

"This year we've probably had the best experience with breakdowns and tourism is up," he said. "We haven't raised rates in the past three years so we feel pretty good about it."

"We have to give a lot of credit to the mechanics who keep it running, to Richard Stangis who manages it for us and the people who run it."

Staff honored for home health care

Congratulations to all Home Health Care staff! November 25-December 1 is National Home Care Week. Nationally millions of people are able to receive the health care they need to recover from illness and disability in the comfort of their own home because of the expertise, dedication and caring of the registered nurses, physical therapists, speech therapists, occupational therapists, medical social workers and home health aides working in a Home Health Agency.

Since January of this year, approximately 500 people have received skilled home visits from the Home Health staff of District Health Department #3. District Health Department #3 serves the residents of Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego Counties. Why is home health care important? Home health care

- If the victim is not breathing, begin artificial respiration.
- Have someone call for an ambulance and have the victim's own doctor notified.
- If the victim has been under medical care, the first aider should assist in administering prescribed medicine and in carrying out other measures advised by the physician. (Look for some form of emergency medical identification). If in doubt, confer with the physician by telephone.

4. Do not give liquids to an unconscious victim.

5. Place the victim in a comfortable position, usually sitting up, and prop him up with pillows, particularly if he is short of breath. His comfort is usually a good guide.

6. Maintain body temperature.

For more information about how to prepare for health hunting, check with your physician. District Health Department No. 3 wants this to be a safe hunting season for you.

Medusa workers donation ups reward for missing girl

The reward for information leading to the whereabouts of a missing Charlevoix girl has grown.

Heather Elizabeth Kleiber, 13, disappeared Aug. 17. Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater announced last week the reward has been increased to $1,500 thanks to a $500 contribution by employees of the Medusa Cement Co. plant.

Heather's father, Anthony "Tony" Kleiber III of Charlevoix, works at Medusa.

The total reward is offered for information leading to the confirmed location and/or return of Heather to her family.

Heather has long, curly brown hair and hazel eyes. She stands 5 feet 3 inches and weighs 125 pounds. She was wearing faded blue jeans, a black T-shirt, new black suede boots and a brown leather jacket.

Any person with information

Heather Kleiber

about Heather should contact Sgt. Dale Meredith at the Charlevoix Police Department, 547-3255, or Sheriff Lasater or Sgt. Donald Schneider at the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department, 547-4461.

The girl's disappearance is being investigated jointly by Charlevoix city police and the sheriff's department.

From the beginning of the investigation, police have focused on Heather being a runaway, while keeping "all options open" to the possibility the girl was abducted.

Three months have passed since Heather vanished in the middle of the night, and her family continues to work to get the word out on the case.

Heather's grandparents, Anthony and Merle Kleiber, and her father have launched a campaign to send posters about Heather to every hospital and high school in the state.

Heather's mother, Nancy Ellis of Petoskey, is working with a printing firm on an updated color poster of the missing child.

The sheriff's department has requested a stack of the new posters from Ellis for further distribution.

Wetland violation results in order to move building

In addition to paying $1,500, a Charlevoix builder must remove a cabin from a piece of lake-front property and restore the property to its original wetland state.

On Oct. 25 a jury found builder Al Shindorf guilty of violating the state's Wetland Protection Act.

In an order dated Nov. 15, 90th District Court Judge Harvey Varnum ordered Shindorf to remove a cabin which he built last year on a piece of property next to Harwood Lake in Norwood Township. Not only must Shindorf remove the cabin, but he must also remove fill placed on the site and replace the fill with muck to restore the site to its original wetland state by June 1, 1991.

Shindorf will appeal the sentence. When asked during an interview with the Courier if he feels the stiff sentence is an attempt to set an example for other area builders, he replied, "Absolutely. There's no doubt in my mind."

The building in question is a small vacation cabin. Shindorf said he could remove it and restore the property at a cost of around $8,000. But then he wouldn't be able to use the property in question. He said it will probably cost more than $8,000 to fight the case in court, but he's going to continue to fight it.

Between the time of the guilty verdict and the sentencing, officials from the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) and Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council wrote to the court urging that the sentence require Shindorf to remove the cabin and restore the wetlands. DNR and Tip of the Mitt officials argued that a fine would not be sufficient to deter builders and developers from future violations. They said builders and developers might come to view fines simply as a cost of doing business. The upper limit for a fine was $2,500.

Shindorf's attorney, David Haywood of Grand Rapids, argued that an order to remove the cabin and restore the site was not necessary. He noted that Shindorf has no history of violations and in this instance complied with township and county ordinances.

In pretrial arguments and during the trial, Shindorf contended he had gone through the permit process in 1981 and thought things were in order. He also contended that if he had applied in 1984 the permit probably would have been approved.

Shindorf purchased the property on a land contract in 1981 and paid off the land contract in 1984. The property contained 338 feet of frontage on the west side of Harwood Lake. In the summer of 1981, he had the health department inspect the lot.

In the summer of 1982, Shindorf built a cabin at the southern end of the lot and subsequently deeded the cabin to his parents.

He had the lot surveyed and divided in 1989. After dividing the lot, he began dredging and filling the northern end, preparing to build a second cabin. Shindorf said he had the shell of the cabin up when a DNR officer informed him there might be a wetland permit problem.

Shindorf said he didn't feel he had an opportunity to apply for a permit after the DNR contacted him. The choice seemed to be to tear down the cabin or go to court. He chose not to tear down the cabin and the DNR filed a complaint in District Court Nov. 6, 1989 alleging that Shindorf had violated the state Wetlands Act.

In what has become a community tradition, local children gathered last Friday afternoon to decorate the city Christmas tree in East Park. Workers from the city electric department took the children up in the boom truck so they could place their ornaments on the tree's highest boughs. Helping decorate the tree were (from left) Katie Bradley, John Bradley, Trevor Kline and Nicky Hoeler. (Additional photos on page 14.)

Grand jury to investigate missing girl and woman

Local law enforcement officers want to establish a one-man grand jury to investigate two missing person cases. One case concerns the August disappearance of 13-year-old Heather Kleiber of Charlevoix. The second case, which is unrelated, concerns the 1988 disappearance of 71-year-old Victoria Salisz of Boyne Falls.

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department, in cooperation with other police agencies, has conducted extensive searches for both Kleiber and Salisz, but has come up empty and frustrated.

Sheriff George Lasater, Charlevoix City Police Chief Dennis Halverson and County Prosecutor Kraag Lieberman will file a petition with 33rd Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas asking him to appoint a one-man grand jury to look into the case.

The person appointed as a grand jury would look into the two missing person cases, but would also have the power to look into and investigate other alleged criminal offenses.

Grand jury investigations are secret and held behind closed doors. The investigation would break down into two phases: in the first, witnesses would be questioned and testimony taken; in the second, the grand jury could indict people, i.e. charge them with a specific crime or crimes.

Kleiber disappeared in mid-August. Since that time, the sheriff's department and city police have investigated hundreds of clues, questioned several of Kleiber's friends and associates and conducted both land and water search, but haven't been able to find the girl.

Kleiber is the daughter of Anthony "Tony" Kleiber III of Charlevoix and Nancy Ellis of Petoskey. Heather has long, curly brown hair, stands 5'3" and weighs 125 pounds. When last seen, she wore faded blue jeans, a black T-shirt, black suede boots and a brown leather jacket.

Local police have focused on Kleiber as a runaway, but kept all other options open. Two national child finding organizations have recently become involved. They are treating the case as an abduction. Posters and information have been distributed throughout the country and a $1,500 reward is offered for information leading to Kleiber's confirmed location or return to her family.

Salisz was last seen in the spring of 1988. She lived with her husband Steve on Denise Road in Boyne Valley Township, east of Boyne Falls.

She is 5'5" and weighs approximately 165 pounds. She has brown eyes with light brown, graying hair cut below the ears and wears glasses.

Following her disappearance, the Sheriff's Department searched the wooded area surrounding her home and questioned people who knew her. Posters with her picture were also distributed.

Police have been unable to conclusively determine whether Salisz was the victim of foul play or simply left the area.

Anyone with information about the disappearance of either Kleiber or Salisz should contact the Sheriff's Department at (616) 547-4461.

Final plea taken in assault case

The final of five teenagers involved with the assault and attempted robbery of an elderly local woman pleaded guilty to three felony offenses Monday.

In 33rd Circuit Court Joseph Jackson Prevo, 17, pleaded guilty to two counts of breaking and entering an occupied dwelling and one count of assault with intent to commit unarmed robbery. Each offense carries a maximum possible sentence of 15 years.

Other charges against Prevo, including a charge of attempted murder, were dropped as part of a plea bargain agreement.

Prevo has been in the Charlevoix County jail since shortly after the crime occurred Oct. 1. He will remain in jail pending sentencing which is scheduled for Dec. 27.

The other four Charlevoix teenagers charged in connection with the crime were Joseph Blair Ehrcke, 17, Jacob David Leadabrand, 16, Kelly Sue Przybyski, 14 and Colleen S. Stradtner, 14.

The case against the five resulted from an Oct. 1 incident in which Leadabrand and Prevo broke into the home of an elderly woman. The five young people believed the lady had a large amount of money stashed in her house. They planned to steal the money and leave town.

Prevo and Leadabrand broke into the home and tied up the lady, but found no money. After they fled, the lady who had been smothered with a towel until she lost consciousness, regained consciousness and phoned police. Police had all five of the young people in custody within 24 hours.

Ehrcke and Prevo were tried in the adult court system. Ehrcke, like Prevo, has pleaded guilty and is in jail awaiting sentencing.

Leadabrand, Przybyski and Stradtner were tried as juveniles in probate court. All three juveniles pleaded guilty and were sent to various correctional facilities as wards of the state.

Leadabrand pleaded guilty to charges of breaking and entering an occupied dwelling and assault with intent to commit larceny. Przybyski and Stradtner pleaded guilty to conspiracy to break and enter an occupied dwelling with intent to commit larceny.

Probate Court Judge Fred Mulhauser sentenced the three juveniles. All three were ordered to secure (i.e. locked) placement facilities. Their level of security can't be reduced without Mulhauser's review. By law the cases of the three must be reviewed every six months, but by law they may be kept in the state facilities until they are either 19 or 21 depending on circumstances.

In addition to time in the placement facilities, each of the three was assessed court costs of $300. They will also have to participate in the Victim Offenders Restitution program. Mulhauser also stipulated that the juveniles have no contact with Joe Prevo or James, Joe or Levon Ehrcke.

Leadabrand and Prabybski will each have to do 1,200

MADD distributing red ribbons

The Charlevoix Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD) chapter is joining other chapters throughout the state in urging people to enjoy the 1990 holiday season and drive sober so they'll be around to enjoy the 1991 holiday season as well.

"The One On...For Safety," an annual holiday campaign to remind people to drive safe and sober began with a rally Nov. 19 on the Capitol steps in Lansing. The campaign, which is in its fifth year, asks people to tie red ribbons on their vehicles as a reminder of the need to stop injuries, death and suffering which result from drunk driving. Members of the local MADD chapter have been passing out ribbons at Charlevoix shopping centers. Several other area businesses and municipal agencies are also distributing ribbons.

Village Inn Pizza, Little Caesars and Pizza Hut are attaching ribbons to pizza boxes. Charlevoix County State Bank, First State Bank, 7-11, Charlevoix Camera, the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office, Charlevoix City Police Department and Charlevoix City Hall are also distributing the ribbons.

The red ribbon campaign will continue through Jan. 1, 1991. The next meeting of the Charlevoix MADD chapter will take place at 7:30, Thursday, Nov. 29 at the Charlevoix County Sheriff's office. Members of the public are welcome to attend.

EDITH GILBERT

by EDITH GILBERT
Looking forward and looking back.

Upbeat coffee shop conversations are still buzzing over the effect of our local elections.

One local wit, when asked what he thought about the election, commented, "I'm surprised Probert got as many votes as he did!"

The prospect of a new major and two new councilmen taking office in January is encouraging, especially to supporters of the DDA, the Chamber of Commerce, and the Planning Commission.

Now downtown merchants are hopeful that they will get their new lighting on Bridge Street as originally planned. Hint to retailers: what's sorely missed according to shoppers is Burnside Dress Shop and Wildwood's Lingerie Shop.

"Now that people can see the Earl Young type band pavilion taking shape, checks are flowing in with some regularity," according to Bob Hoffman, CPA and treasurer. "We'd like to complete the much needed sound system for this summer as well." The next item on the civic agenda is how to best camouflage the Wharfside wall as an attractive back drop for the band pavilion. Check with Bob. He has some good suggestions.

Local economy is not hurting as in other depressed pockets of our country. Gorgeous new homes and some attractive new condos are going up along Lake Michigan and Lake Charlevoix. This means, come next July, summer residents with cars, boats, planes, houseguests and appetites for shopping and dining will be offering their plastic in local establishments.

Last July, Northwood at Dunmaglass were the talk of the town. I heard many people say, "Why don't we have some of this great entertainment in August?" With luck, plans are underway to fill this void.

On the negative side, I heard more than one complaint regarding play at the City Golf Course. The rule that players cannot share a bag is not unusual. Buy why not rent a bag with clubs just like they rent skis at Mr. McSauba? That certainly is better PR than threatening to call the police on a couple of visitors who want to play golf on the spur of the moment during the week in October.

And speaking of Mr. McSauba ski area, we are so fortunate to have the Boss' family in charge. I spend a lot of time out there every winter and am pleased to report how well the area is run. I've lost count long ago as to how many young people I've introduced to the rope tow. Maybe this year will be my last year, when Brandon, age 5, wobbles up the hill, but don't bet on it!

If it weren't for the one black cloud hovering over the crisis in the Gulf, one could confidently predict a renaissance in Charlevoix next summer. There are signs of intelligent leadership in bud now. Let's hope it will be allowed to flower.

REASONABLE TO ME
L. SCOTT SWANSON

We've lost candy counters

A bag of little Almond Joy candy bars spent a day in our pantry last week. Only a day. After a day, at my wife's behest I removed them. She's one of those people who feel guilty about ingesting large quantities of junk food. She feared her will power would be no match for a blue and white plastic bag filled with little Almond Joy candy bars.

My wife said it was the coconut in the candy bars that she found most threatening. Sensitive kind of husband that I am, I empathized with her and said, "Yes, coconut can do that to a person."

She recalled that when she was a young girl she had an affinity for those coconut Neapolitan candies they used to sell in bulk at dime stores. These candies were pink, brown, white and coconut from one end to the other.

Remember dime stores and buying candy by the half-pound and pound. I do. And I remember it fondly.

Charlevoix used to have a dime store. I believe its corporate name was Dalquist. It was at the corner of Mason and Bridge Streets in the building now occupied by The Clothing Company.

Charlevoix's dime store had bulk candy. The candy counter was right in the middle of the store. A line of glass compartments stood at about a kid's eye level.

The compartments held all kinds of good things: chocolate covered peanuts; Boston baked beans; orange slices; chocolate disks covered with white beads; red hot cinnamon candies. All these things were held captive in the glass compartments.

As a kid, I could stand and watch these captive candies for a long time. It was like the candies were animals in a zoo. Sometimes when I could talk mom or dad into forking over some change, I got to parole some of those incarcerated candies. Deciding which candy left the compartment and traveled first to the scales, then into the white bag and finally into my stomach was a decision demanding some weighty consideration.

The candies listed above were not the only ones. There were more. Those are just the ones I liked. That's probably why I remember them.

With chocolate covered peanuts, you had to be careful. If you goofed up, you could end up with chocolate covered raisins. What a disappointment. Boston baked beans were good, but they tired your jaws. Orange slices and beaded disks both offered a high-octane sugar rush, but as a kid such things weren't a bother.

Cinnamon candies were a personal favorite. When I recalled them, my wife said she hated them, but her sister liked them. My brothers both liked them well enough, but my dad despised them. As kids, a goal of ours was to get dad to eat a cinnamon candy. We'd give them to him and tell him they were something else. But he never was fooled. He would smell a cinnamon covered rat and say, "No. These are those hot things. I don't like 'em."

I'm not sure I even know where the nearest glass candy counter is any more. Some of the big supermarkets have bulk candy in barrels, but it's just not the same. Little kids' fingerprints were a fixture on the old glass candy counters. Fingerprints on a Plexiglass barrel top just aren't the same.

Not only that, but modern day bulk candy isn't given due respect. It sits in barrels right next to barrels of dog biscuits and who knows what else. In days gone by, the candy counter was set off from mere mortal items.

Maybe it's just as well that the era of the candy counter has passed. I, like most adults, can't hold candy the way I used to.

"Why is that?" I asked my wife as we were recalling candy counters. "I used to be able to eat all kinds of candy and my stomach never took offense."

"Oh it probably did," she said. "You're just smarter now and realize that the candy is what's bothering your stomach."

CLOCKWISE

BOB CLOCK

Bob bids farewell

When in the course of human events it becomes necessary to hang it up - don't hesitate.

After more than 40 years in the newspaper business, including 25 years with the Charlevoix Courier and the Petoskey News-Review, I have decided to call it quits. This will be my last Clockwise column for the Courier.

Then it's farewell - at least for a while - to what has been a nice way to earn a living for an awful lot of years.

Looking back, I am astounded at the changes that have taken place in the newspaper business since I started as a reporter and ad salesman for the Cass City (Mich.) Chronicle in the summer of 1950.

I have watched newspapers go from hand-set type to totally computerized page makeup. And the changes are just starting.

Although I had a degree in journalism from Michigan State, my first job out of college was as a warehouseman for the Goebel Brewing Co. in Detroit. A recession was under way and news jobs were scarce.

The brewery pay was fantastic - about $60 a week - and the benefits were intoxicating. All the beer you could drink providing you stayed sober.

A guy who started with me was fired before noon because he couldn't stand up.

After a few weeks with Goebel, I received word from A.A. Applegate, head of MSC's journalism department, that Herb Lenzner, publisher of the Cass City Chronicle, was looking for someone. I borrowed my father's 1937 Ford and drove 100 miles north into the Thumb for an interview.

The Chronicle office had electric lights, but that was the most modern innovation. Furthermore, the pay was discouraging - $40 a week, one-third less than I earned at Goebel. Still, I preferred news work to wrestling beer kegs so I accepted Mr. Lenzner's offer.

I didn't particularly relish the idea of moving to a small town nestled amid endless miles of bean fields, but I had an out: The Korean War had just started and I was classified 1-A.

Of course, I fell in love with Cass City and when I was drafted the following January I was sad to leave.

In the Army I gravitated toward news-type work in various Public Information Offices in the states and overseas. At one point I edited the only two English language newspapers published in Yokohama, and ended my Army career with Stars & Stripes in Tokyo.

After I was discharged, I stuck with newspapering and related fields: reporting and editing for the Pontiac Press, reporting for 29 in-house newspapers published by Ford Motor Co., handling the radio wire for United Press International, teaching journalism, English and Sixth Grade at Holly, and finally moving to Northern Michigan.

The nicest part of newspapering is the people you work with. They're all a little off-the-wall, a little crazy. Cynical, yes. But also as caring as hell.

Why would anyone want to give up such a job and such friends?

For one thing, I am past the age - when I can start drawing reduced-benefit Social Security. I am told that if one doesn't start drawing SS fairly soon after reaching age 62, it will take something like 13 years to make up the difference between reduced-benefit SS and full-benefit SS.

Secondly, I think I have said editorially just about everything I have to say. I know some folks in the trade continue to write columns even though they retire from active news work. They have one or two column ideas and repeat themselves endlessly until death mercifully sees them tucked away in the churchyard.

I would rather step aside while I still have a few fresh ideas.

There are other reasons, too, not the least of which is the weather. Twenty-five years ago, I couldn't get enough of winter. I loved it. I wallowed in it. But my enthusiasm has waned over the years. The thought of having to drive from Charlevoix to Petoskey in one more whiteout gives me heart palpitations.

So this is it. After more than 1,100 Clockwise columns for the Courier and the News-Review, I'm retiring. It's been fun. And thanks.

Serviceman appreciates support

Editor,

After being in Northern Michigan for the past week I know that the feeling of the men of the 554th Military Police Company stationed in Stuttgart, Germany that Americans are not wholeheartedly behind their participation in Operation Desert Shield, is not the case. The fact is that though many people in the United States view this as a political action which could be avoided, they are, nevertheless, still supporting their men.

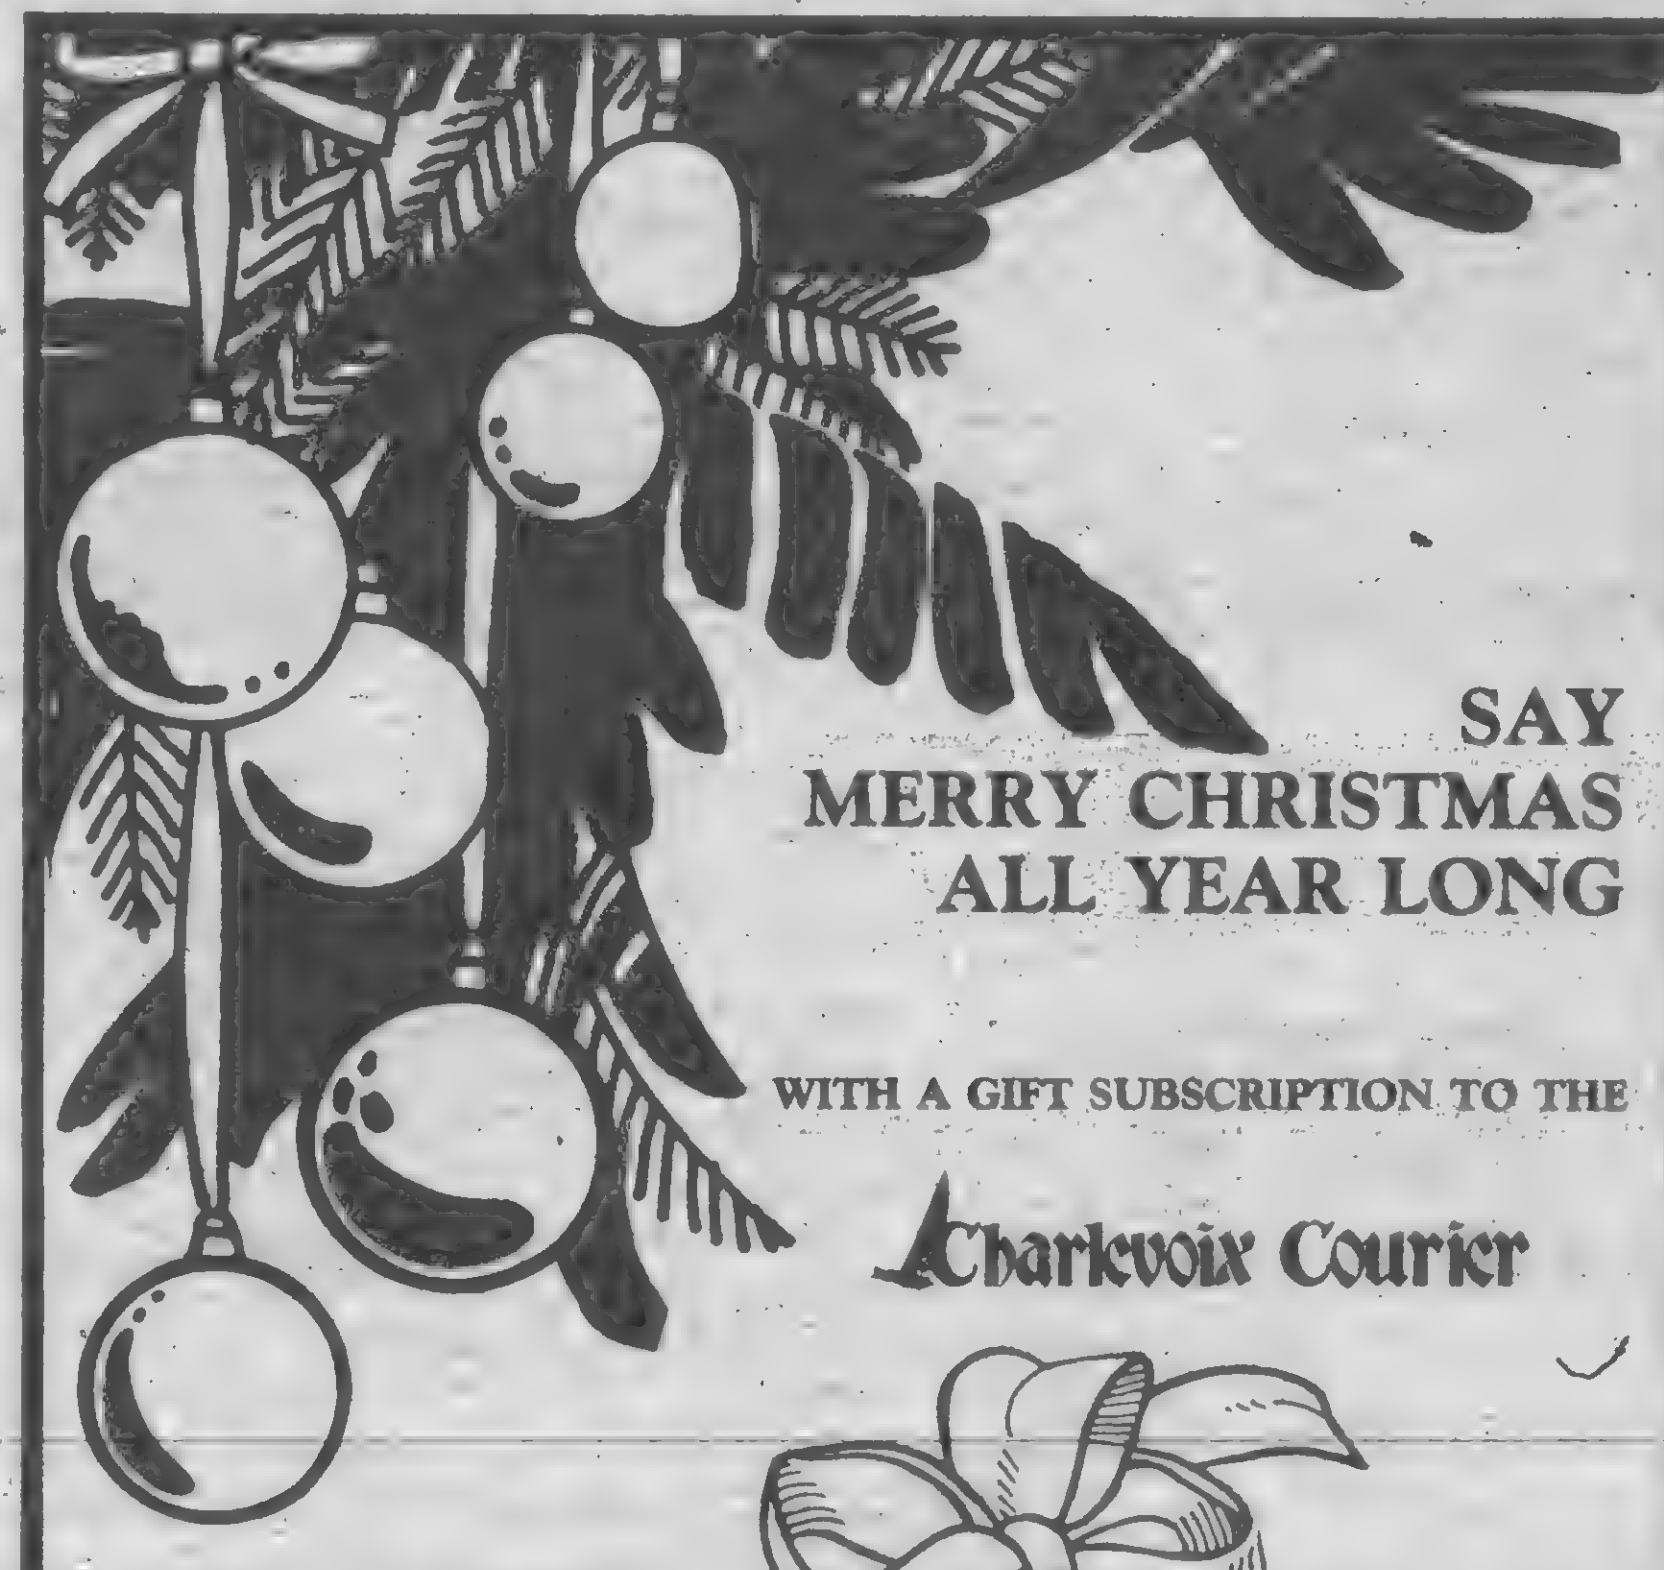

I have seen evidence of this everywhere; red, white, and blue ribbons displayed on cars, light poles, and buildings; articles in the papers announcing that churches, clubs, and organizations are sending packages of anything and everything they think will cheer their boys; pictures of school children writing hundreds of letters and cards to unknown young men who will not be home for Christmas.

The U.S. military forces go where they are sent, and when they are overseas they have a warm feeling in their hearts when they know that those at home are thinking of them, praying for them, and supporting them. They appreciate it and are grateful.

For the men of my unit, the 554th Military Police/Honor Guard Company, I want to thank all you great people in Northern Michigan who make us believe there is a reason who we are there, and not here.

Sincerely,
Cpl. David Andrew Stewart

Bartley - Urch

Jacqueline and James Urch

Jacqueline Bartley and James Urch were married Sept. 15 at Prairie Methodist Church in Buchanan.

Use care with Christmas tree

More than one million lush and sturdy natural Christmas trees are available at 104 "cut your own" tree farms in Michigan this holiday season, AAA Michigan reports.

The most prevalent are scotch pines, averaging about $3 per foot, and spruce, costing an average of $4.30 per foot.

Proper safety tips should be followed to make sure a Christmas tree does not turn into a fire hazard once it is put up in the home and decorated. AAA Michigan offers the following tips to tree buyers:

- A live dry tree is a serious fire hazard. Make a fresh cut in the base of the tree and keep plenty of water in the stand and check water daily.

- Check wiring in light strands for cracks, frays or other deterioration which can be hazardous. Replace old bulbs with new "cool burn" bulbs.

- Do not use candles to decorate a tree. Even a well-watered tree can ignite in moments.

- Keep lights out of reach of young children who may rearrange them in a potentially dangerous manner.

- Keep cords off furniture, curtains, etc. Contact with an electrical arc could ignite them.

- Turn off all decorative lighting before leaving home.

- Feel live tree needles daily. When the needles become dry and brittle or break off easily, the tree should be removed.

- Artificial tree buyers should make sure their tree has been approved by Underwriter's Laboratory or another reputable testing facility for fire and combustion retardance.

Local Lions begin annual Christmas tree sale

The Charlevoix Lions Club will begin selling Christmas trees Dec. 1 in East Park. The Christmas tree sale is an annual fund raising event for the local Lions.

This year, the club will sell Scotch pines, Douglas firs and blue spruce trees ranging in size from 5 to 9 feet. Prices will range from $20 to $40 depending on the size and species of tree.

Lions will man the tree booth from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Friday and from noon to 8 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays. The club hopes to sell 250 fresh trees.

Tree lights raise hospice funds

Eta Nu Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority's annual "Lights of Love" fundraiser for the Charlevoix County Hospice will begin Friday, Nov. 30. The outdoor Christmas tree, located at One Water Street Restaurant in Boyne City, features colored lights which friends and relatives are invited to purchase in honor or in memory of a loved one. Names of honorees will be posted inside the restaurant and proceeds go to the Charlevoix County Hospice.

"The holidays are often the most difficult time of year to get through because of the emphasis on being with family and friends. A light on the tree can be a comforting symbol of that closeness and of the relationship between the donor and honored loved ones," said Margaret Lasater, Director of the Charlevoix County Hospice.

A tree lighting ceremony will take place at 6 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 19. The public is invited to attend.

"Lights of Love" order forms can be picked up from the Boyne City Chamber of Commerce, at One Water Street and from Eta Nu members. For more information, call the Charlevoix County Hospice, 536-2842.

Church hosts toy sale

The Board of Women's Ministries of the Community Reformed Church of Charlevoix will host a toy demonstration and sale at the Charlevoix High School, Wednesday, Nov. 28, at 7 p.m.

Audrey Egbert, a consultant for Discovery Toys, will demonstrate the products available through her company. Discovery Toys chooses their line of products based on stringent standards of quality and developmental value. Discovery Toys provide play experiences that teach children to participate instead of watching; that build their self-esteem; that give them a chance to explore, create and meet new challenges.

All parents and grandparents are welcome to attend this demonstration, which will be held in the high school study hall. Proceeds from the sale will benefit the building fund of the church. For more information, contact Sue Bouwense at 347-4394.

I firmly believe if we will pray earnestly, reflect openly, study intently and wait expectantly, God's vision of wholeness, healing, and value will come to us. I encourage you to participate in a local congregation as you seek God's will and vision for your life. The corporate knowledge and experience found in the midst of a community of faith is invaluable.

I recently attended a conference designed to enliven a new vitality and sense of hope in those individuals who sought to be guided by the will of God. In small discussion groups we spent time reflecting upon all we had seen and experienced throughout each day's events.

In our final session together, our parting words of commitment and blessing were the following: Pray, reflect, study, expect a vision."

Those words have found a place within me and I pass them along to you. Perhaps you are trying to discern God's will in your life. Perhaps you are seeking to find something of substance to fill a sense of

Family business seminar offered

More than 90 percent of all businesses in the United States are family owned. These businesses and the families involved face some interesting challenges and opportunities. To address these issues, the MSU Cooperative Extension Service and North Central Michigan College (NCMC) have teamed up to present "Payoffs and Problems in Family Business." This one day conference is scheduled for Dec. 6 at NCMC in Petoskey.

Seminar topics include: Succession of management and ownership, estate planning, inheritance tax as well as day-to-day problems such as family relationships, stress, communication and goal setting.

Irene Hathaway, Family Resource Management Specialist at Michigan State University and author of "Guide to Starting a Home-Based Business" will present current information. Other speakers include a local C.P.A. and a panel of local family-owned business operators.

It is recommended to have two people from each business attend - the owner and a key family member who is directly involved in the business. Participants will receive a 40 page workbook titled "Goals for Business Operations and Family Life," two Small Business Administration publications and a complimentary issue of Family Business magazine.

Rayders named All-Division

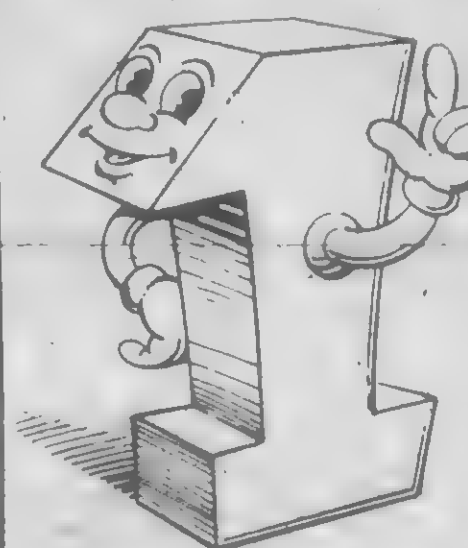

A black and white photograph of a football player in motion. The player is wearing a dark jersey with the number 35 and the word 'CHAMPIONS' visible above it. He is running towards the right side of the frame, carrying the football. The background is dark and out of focus, suggesting a night game or a stadium with low lighting.

Brian Coolman was one of four Rayder football players named to the All Division team. The others were Dan Terryberry, Doug Benoit, and Jason Parrish. Four other players were given honorable mention. They were Scott Kehrer, Erich McIlroy, Scott Campbell and Robert Scholey.

Gina Webster (30) and Mary Jane Grunch were named to the All Division girls basketball team. Webster, a junior forward and Grunch, a sophomore guard, will both be back next year.

BUSINESS

New shop imports directly from Brazil

Somewhere in Brazil, artists and craftsmen are producing fine linens, pottery, jewelry, wood carvings and leather goods which will eventually find their way to the Port of Entry, Brazilian Imports shop in Charlevoix's Market Mall.

Shop owners Nancy Patton and Alcione Wright saw months and months of preparation and planning rewarded last Friday when the shop opened for business. From 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., Saturday, Dec. 1 Port of Entry, Brazilian Imports will celebrate its grand opening.

Items at the shop aren't purchased from an importer. Wright and Patton do their own purchasing and importing.

Wright is from Brazil. She came to the United States several years ago as an exchange student and eventually ended up marrying an American man. On return trips to Brazil she travels throughout the northern and northeastern section of the country and occasionally into the south to find items for the shop.

Patton moved to northern Michigan from Monroe, Michigan. She was interested in starting a business. She met Wright and they formed a partnership. Patton has also traveled to Brazil.

A visit to the shop is something of a cultural seminar on Brazil. One hand-made clay sculpture shows a small Brazilian flour mill. Wright notes that some of the baskets are made by Amazonian tribes and sold through the government. Pieces for a checkers game represent various facets of Brazilian folk lore. Wright explains that the section of Brazil she is from is known for its lace work. Brightly colored shirts reflect wildlife and vegetation found in Brazil's rain forests. A percentage of the profits from the shirts and Brazilian fruits and nuts sold in the shop will be donated to a rain forest protection fund.

Having someone who knows the country and the craftsmen allows the shop to take custom orders. Customers who see an embroidered rug in the shop which they like, but feel isn't quite the proper size for the room they have in mind may order a custom-made rug. Although the shop's merchandise tends to be exotic, prices start as low as $5.

Patton and Wright describe their import business as "very challenging." They said they had to jump through a lot of hoops in dealing with government regulations. The two women say they were fortunate enough to receive a great deal of help and advice from friends and the Traverse City Center of Business and Industry which is affiliated with Northwestern Michigan College.

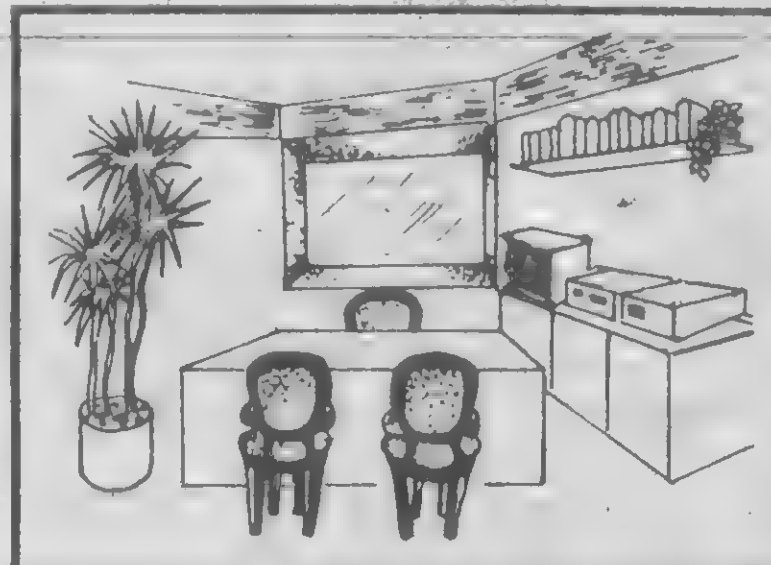

During the Christmas shopping season the shop will be open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday and from noon to 4 p.m. on Sundays.

Nancy Patton, (left in photo directly above) and Alcione Wright have opened Port of Entry, Brazilian Imports in the Market Mall. They import their items directly from Brazil. Shopping in the store can turn into a brief education on the culture of Brazil.

Some of the younger children required a bit of assistance in attaching their ornaments.

Kids decorate city Christmas tree

Matthew Novotny, 2, waves to his grandmother from the bucket of the city lift truck. City employee Greg Skeel is holding Matthew. Skeel and Randy Holecheck took dozens of kids up in the lift truck during the course of the afternoon.

Joey Norton, 5, holds up his Santa Claus ornament for all the world to see prior to placing it on the city Christmas tree.

Ben Norton, 9, points to where he wants to place his ornament on the tree. Local children filled the tree before the day was finished.

With some of the smallest children, the only thing visible was a little hand and ornament reaching out of the bucket.

If your yellow pages answers "no" to any of these questions, then you're not advertising in the right yellow pages.

These are some very important questions you should be asking any directory that you're thinking of running your ad in. We've also conveniently included our answers to the questions—just in case you were wondering.

☐ ☐ IS YOUR BOOK USED BY JUST ABOUT EVERYBODY?
YES NO

Our answer is definitely yes. A recent independent survey shows that 91% of all Charlevoix households have the Ameritech PagesPlus®. But even more amazing is the fact that most people said that they used the Ameritech PagesPlus more often than any other yellow pages. That's a big difference.

☐ ☐ HAVE YOU BEEN IN THE BUSINESS FOR A LONG TIME?
YES NO

We'd have to answer yes, here, too. The Ameritech PagesPlus has been around for over 100 years. We're The Original Michigan Bell Yellow Pages, so customers know that we're the source for just what they need to know.

☐ ☐ IS YOUR BOOK DELIVERED ON TIME?
YES NO

Once again, our answer is yes.

The Ameritech PagesPlus always keeps its promise and delivers the book when it is supposed to. That way you'll know exactly when your ad will be out there working for you.

☐ ☐ IS YOUR BOOK DELIVERED TO MICHIGAN BELL PHONE BOOTHS?
YES NO

Yes, again. The Ameritech PagesPlus is the only phone book that Michigan Bell delivers to its phone booths. So you know that your ad will be there for pay phone callers, too.

☐ ☐ IS YOUR BOOK DELIVERED FAST TO ALL NEWCOMERS?
YES NO

Guess what. Our answer is yes. Michigan Bell keeps us very up to date so we're very accurate. And only our book is right there as soon as a new phone is hooked up.

☐ ☐ DO YOU HAVE AN EXPERIENCED SALES FORCE?
YES NO

Yes, we most definitely do. The Ameritech PagesPlus sales force is professional and knowledgeable with over 10 years' average experience in the business.

☐ ☐ DO YOU GIVE ME YEAR-ROUND ADVERTISING SUPPORT?
YES NO

We do. Only the Ameritech PagesPlus runs television, newspaper and radio advertising all year long. So your customers are always reminded where to find you.

If you have any other questions about why the Ameritech PagesPlus is where your ad should be, call this number: 1-800-327-3470 or (616) 947-5700. We think you'll like our answers to those questions better, too.

hours of community service work with the elderly. Stradner will have to do 750 hours of community service work with the elderly.

Mulhauser said the court in cooperation with social services checked into various facilities across the state to determine which had openings and would meet the needs of each juvenile.

The cost of keeping a juvenile in a secured facility varies depending on the facility involved, but in each of the three instances exceeds $100.

That cost will be divided between the county child care fund and the state. Mulhauser estimated that it will cost the county and state each approximately $65,000 per year to keep the three juveniles in secured facilities.

Mulhauser said the county child care fund's fiscal year runs from October through September. The court budgeted for four and a-half placements. With the addition of the three juveniles, the court is now up to four placements with 10 months remaining in the fiscal year.

SWIMMING POOL. CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

Promoters of indoor pool for Charlevoix are using the above picture of the indoor pool which was at The Inn resort during the early part of the century as evidence that an indoor pool is needed in Charlevoix. "The lakes are still too cold for many Charlevoix visitors and residents who enjoy swimming for fun and exercise," according to a note on the back of the card. Pool proponents are seeking information about the old pool. (Picture courtesy of Bill Dreyer.)

Girl Scouts raise money with wreath

Charlevoix Girl Scouts will host a bazaar and bake sale from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Dec. 1 at Murdick's Ice Cream Shop on Bridge Street. During recent troop meetings, girl scouts made a variety of ornaments, decorations and gifts to sell. They will also be selling baked goods and other items donated by parents and grandparents.

As a community service project the girl scouts will also be making a "helping hands wreath." Each troop has donated 25 cents per girl and each girl's hand print has been added to the wreath. Other people may donate 25 cents to have their hand print placed on the wreath. The completed wreath will be displayed in the ice cream shop window. Proceeds from the wreath will be donated to the Charlevoix County Social Services Department to help needy families during the holiday season.

Proceeds from the bazaar and bake sale will be added to the Charlevoix Girl Scout camp fund for a new troop house scouts are hoping to build within the next two years.

All scouts from Charlevoix and Emmet Counties are also collecting sales receipts from local grocery stores. Proceeds from collected receipts will also go into the building fund.

Girl Scouts from Troop #286 will be making a helping hands wreath to raise money for scout projects. The troop will also be hosting a craft and bake sale.

CHARLEVOIX — Celebrate a more environmental Christmas and recycle your dollars by shopping Charlevoix.

Charlevoix shoppers can save gas and pump their dollars back into the local economy by choosing Christmas gifts from local businesses and participating in the merchant's open house, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 1, throughout Charlevoix.

Shopping locally will keep businesses alive and preserve Charlevoix's small town atmosphere, said Andi Mathews, owner of Country Customs.

"We need to keep Charlevoix alive and shopping Charlevoix will keep the town alive," said Mathews, who has been in business six years.

She revels in the closeness and pleasant atmosphere that comes with knowing her customers.

"I enjoy people coming in who I know," Mathews said. "I enjoy a visit as much as a sale sometimes."

Julia Tucker, 9-Eleven owner, also likes the friendly atmosphere, customer service and unique shops that fill the resort town.

"You can find anything you need right here in Charlevoix," Tucker said. "I think everyone should come in and look around."

In Charlevoix, Christmas is a season of shop-till-you-drop and Santa Claus Saturdays.

Charlevoixians rang in the holiday season the day after Thanksgiving, by lighting the town Christmas tree, and the celebration is off and running.

Merchants will host their annual open house from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 1, at participating businesses throughout town. To entice people to "shop Charlevoix," those businesses will have drawings for gift certificates and treat shoppers to coffee, punch and cookies.

Two banks will host their open houses separately — Charlevoix County State Bank will host its 21st annual Christmas party 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Friday, Dec. 7. First State Bank of Charlevoix will host its annual open house from 4 to 6 p.m. Friday, Dec. 14. The man for this season — Santa Claus — will appear and be photographed with children.

Santa will "do lunch" with children from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 8, at elementary school. Children can have lunch

Two city banks preparing plans for traditional holiday celebrations

CHARLEVOIX — Most of the community will hold its Christmas open house Saturday, Dec. 1, but two banks will save their goodies until later and stretch out the holiday celebration.

Charlevoix County State Bank invites customers and area residents to share refreshments and meet its banking family at an open house from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday, Dec. 7, at the main office on Bridge Street.

The bank is spearheading a drive to mail cards free to all service people. Greetings may be left at the bank for mailing.

Also during the season, automatic teller users should check their receipts to see if the slip says "you are a winner" for a cash prize as part of a Christmas promotion.

The bank also will award three shopping sprees to contest participants to promote shopping in Charlevoix.

Another long-time tradition the bank will continue this year will be the Christmas wish program. The bank tries to grant wishes to people who have no where else to turn. Written wishes should be sent to the bank in care of LaAnne Brown.

First State Bank of Charlevoix will serve Christmas delights and punch during its open house Friday, Dec. 14.

The bank's "pyramid of prizes" is on display and a winner will be drawn at 5:30 p.m. Friday, Dec. 14. Entrants need not be present to win.

The bank's Christmas savings plan with automatic deduction/payment ability also currently is being offered to First State Bank's customers.

Santa will visit the bank from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. Friday, Dec. 14. Polaroid pictures of children will be taken.

Lights contest brightens holiday

When a whole lot of people get together in the best places, things go glimmering.

F. Scott Fitzgerald
CHARLEVOIX — Charlevoix's neighborhoods will be a-glimmer with Christmas decorations that would impress Fitzgerald, who wrote about lights the size of stars.

Charlevoixans who turn out a glimmering wintry wonderland at their home or business will have the opportunity to have their efforts judged in residential and business categories.

Business Christmas decorations will be judged at 5 p.m. Friday, Nov. 30. Businesses that want to be part of the competition should call the chamber of commerce at 547-2101 before the judging.

Residential windows will be judged at 5:30 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 19, by local judges.

Judges will recognize five houses — an overall impressive house, and in four neighborhoods. One house will be recognized north of the bridge, one on the east side of U.S. 31, one west of U.S. 31, and one within a four mile radius outside of town.

Residents can enter their own homes and neighbors impressed with other people's displays may register other people's houses by calling Jackie Kruttsch at 547-2101. If houses are to be judged, she needs to hear about them by Tuesday, Dec. 18.

School board discusses computer improvements

by WENDI WRIGHT

At its regular meeting Monday night, the Charlevoix Board of Education talked at length about school improvement, including the need for computer technology; the "School Success" program the school is currently involved in; and teaching CPR with the help of a practice dummy (otherwise known as "Annie").

Middle School teacher Vince Chew told the board about his trip to a technology conference he recently attended at the board's request. The conference was held at the Infomart in Dallas, Texas. Chew told the board that Charlevoix schools are behind other schools in two ways: using technology as a teaching aid, and teaching students computer literacy.

"We've done nothing since 1986," Doris Pearl, board member, added. "And the world had not waited for us."

Scott Beatty, board member, said that the board needs to devise a master blueprint to outline the route to computer integration. In order to devise such a plan, he added, input from the community and the School Enrichment Foundation would be useful.

Following this discussion, the board approved a motion to allow Superintendent Gordon VanWieren to form a "community technology committee," comprised of local business people, to define the computer literacy needs of potential employers of Charlevoix students.

"If we're going to have the support of the community to upgrade the technology in our schools," VanWieren said, "we have to get people involved." He added that a school technology committee is already in place.

David Smith, high school principal, also brought the board up to date on the school improvement program Charlevoix is currently involved in. Smith told the board that a recent teacher in-service day had been beneficial in that each school, elementary, middle and high school, had developed a "mission statement," outlining goals for school improvement. He said that throughout the session, a lot of questions had been answered, but that more had been raised. He said that all involved were ready for the next step in the program.

Pearl said that she feels the technology committees should integrate their efforts with the school success program.

In other business, the Charlevoix Heart Start, represented by Patty Sitzema, donated a CPR training dummy, "Resuscitation Annie," to the school. Sitzema said Heart Start's immediate goal is to certify all 1991 seniors. By 1994 or 1995, she said, the hope is the program will be fully integrated into the curriculum and that all students will be certified when they graduate.

Finally, the issue of the communication board at the high school was raised again. The student council asked the school board to be allowed to put the board up again as a means of raising funds. The board voted last spring to remove the communication board, because of concern over advertising in the schools, and a conflict with the Sports Boosters. Beatty said as far as he was concerned, that decision still stood. The subject was tabled so the earlier resolution could be examined.

Road commission post sought by three people

By Peg Ohle

Appointments to the Charlevoix County Road Commission usually create some interest, but this year's appointment is creating more than usual.

The appointment of John Kujawski of Boyne City expires Dec. 31. He is a candidate for a third six-year term, but faces competition from retiring County Board Chairman Larry Matthew of Melrose Township and former Road Commission employee Leonard Zakrzewski of Boyne Falls.

The Road Commission is a three-man board loosely organized to represent the areas around the county's three cities—Charlevoix, East Jordan, and Boyne City.

At a meeting of the Townships Association last week, the three candidates were interviewed on various aspects of the job. The association subsequently endorsed Matthew. Township people have said they consider residency in a township an important criteria for the job because most of the Road Commission's work is done in township areas and they feel a township person can best understand the

All quiet on Hayes golf course

When the Hayes Township Board approved rezoning approximately 400 acres of property around the Dunmaglas golf course from Agricultural to Rural Residential, they made it possible for Scots Ventures to proceed with plans for a housing development to go along with the golf course that is under construction.

While the Agricultural zone permits only one house on each 10 acres of property, Rural Residential permits one house on each five acres of land. This lower acreage requirement would permit Scots Ventures to build enough houses to make the project feasible, project developers said.

However, a number of Hayes Township residents did not approve of the rezoning and petitioned the county to place the proposition on the November election ballot. This was done, and Township residents voted to rescind the Township Board's action.

That, in effect, returned the property to the Agricultural zone with the 10 acre per house requirement. Since the voters' action, there has been no contact between the township and Scots Ventures, according to Township Clerk Ethel Knepp, and no work is being done on the development.

No one from Scots Ventures was available for comment last week. It is believed the principals have gone to Florida for the winter.

Girl Scouts from Troop 288 created a wreath of hands this past weekend. Hands sold for 25 cents or four fingers and a thumb for a quarter. Proceeds will help needy children during Christmas. Among the scouts working on the wreath were (from left) Sara Firman, Michelle Riley and Carrie Blanchard.

Clarification

A story in the Christmas Shopping Tab enclosed in last week's Courier may have left some people with an incorrect impression that the Bahnhof will close Dec. 16. A special holiday program the store is running will end Dec. 16, but the store will continue to be open throughout the holiday season.

Sleeping like a baby

I can sleep through a lot, but there are limits.

The baby woke up at about 4:30 one morning last week. Why? I do not know. She normally sleeps through the night. Her mother and I waited a few minutes to see if she would go back to sleep. Fat chance.

Finally, I got up and went into her room to see what was troubling her. She was sitting in her crib, holding her blanket and cradling.

"Bott. Bott," she demanded. No good morning. No how do you do. Just get a bottle and get it now.

"Oh, all right. I'll get you a bottle."

I picked the kid up and hauled her into the kitchen and prepared a bottle. Then we went into the living room. I watched TV while she made short work of the bottle. She enjoyed the bottle much more than I enjoyed watching TV at 4:30 in the morning.

After finishing the bottle, the baby was awake, happy and ready to play. I was awake, unhappy and by no means ready to play.

I hauled out a spare blanket and sprawled on the couch. The baby joined me on the couch. Happy as a clam, she had her teddy bear and blanket to play with and a drowsy daddy to crawl on.

She picked up one of the throw pillows and dropped it on my face.

"Pillow. Pillow."

"Yeah. Yeah. That's a nice pillow," I mumbled. "Why doesn't the baby put her head on it and go to sleep?"

The baby giggled at me. Sleep?

She retreated to the foot of the couch and began playing. I figured she would tire and drop off to sleep soon enough. I was already tired and wanted to fall asleep right away. I tried to do so discreetly. The baby isn't used to seeing sleeping adults. When she spots one, she quickly moves to investigate. I tried to fall asleep without attracting her attention, but apparently my eyelids alerted her when they slammed closed. A moment later I felt a little hand grabbing my ear.

"Ear. Ear."

I ignored her, hoping she would go back to the other end of the couch.

I had my eyes closed, which was a mistake. I should have kept my guard up.

The next thing I knew, I felt two little fingers, one in each nostril.

"Noooo...se. Noooo...se. Noooo...se."

I opened my eyes before they were pried open from the inside. I conceded the battle. The baby had won. I stayed awake and played with her until she was ready to allow the household to go back to sleep.

Letters to the Editor:

McSauba is well run

Editor,

I would like to commend Bo Boss and the City Recreation Dept. for the work done at Mt. McSauba. Every year it keeps getting better. Last year they moved the "little tow" so the beginning skiers would have their own area. This year they have cut a new run to give the experienced skiers more of a challenge. I realize that there had been some controversy for the raising of prices over the years; but the fact remains that Mt. McSauba keeps improving. Anyone who doubts this need only remember what it looked like ten years ago.

Clock praised

Editor,

To produce a weekly column consistently marked by clarity of thought and individuality of style for over 25 years is an accomplishment which I, for one, admire tremendously.

But the Clockwise column will not be remembered most for its longevity. What really distinguished Clockwise was its unique perspective on this town. It is one of the few local chronicles that unflinchingly acknowledged the singularity, the color and the extraordinary cast of characters that make Charlevoix. Charlevoix. Plus, it never took the place too seriously which can be a terrible mistake.

Clockwise will be missed but Bob Clock should realize that Courier columnists never die...their deadlines just get extended.

Oppose war policies

Editor,

To the citizens of America:

When the bodies start coming home from the Persian Gulf it will be too late for your tears. Act now before you regret it. You can prevent a war with the Arab nations by simply writing your senators and congresspeople and telling them you are against any further involvement in the middle east and are opposed to a war in the region.

As I see it:

1. The fight is between the middle east nations and the U.N.

2. This administration's reasons for war, i.e. protecting access to oil fields, are so thin that we would lose a war. We have nothing on the line over there. The Vietnamese had everything to lose, that is why they won. Let's not do this all over again.

3. A lot of rich people would get richer if there was a war and a lot of poor working class people would, once again, see their tax dollars grossly misused.

4. The people should demand the immediate release of all hostages.

5. The people should demand the immediate withdrawal of all American Troops and/or a peaceful solution to the existing problem.

6. Government propaganda would have us believe that war is inevitable. This administration is preparing us for war so that if it comes, we citizens will simply roll over and accept it.

7. This administration is so high on war that other options are ignored. There is not dialogue, only chest-beating.

8. This administration is using the Mideast crisis as an excuse to do something it has wanted to do for years, and that is establish a massive army in that region.

9. With elections only two short years away, president Bush is thinking a war will surely get him re-elected.

10. A war in the Mideast would drag on for years and cost thousands of lives, funnel billions of dollars away from more important domestic problems, and fan the flames of already existing anti-American feelings in that area.

When I realized what a puppet I had been as a teen-age serviceman in Vietnam, I marched on Washington in 1970 with one million other citizens. The police didn't have enough tear gas to disperse that many peaceful demonstrators. We helped end that war. Take five minutes to save a soldier's life. Say no to war in the middle east. Stop it before it begins. Write your senators in care of the U.S. Senate Washington, D.C. 20510 and your congresspeople in care of the House of Representatives Washington, D.C. 20515.

Detroit's not so bad

Editor,

Once more Bob Clock has missed the mark. The "Prime Time" Story on ABC was slanted as was Clock's Editorial; both painted Detroit with a Broad Brush.

It intrigues me that a man who claims to have lived in the "Cass Corridor" lacks the knowledge or can't remember that Detroit is not a homogeneous society, and the black community which currently constitutes the majority of the citizenry is not out of any particular mold.

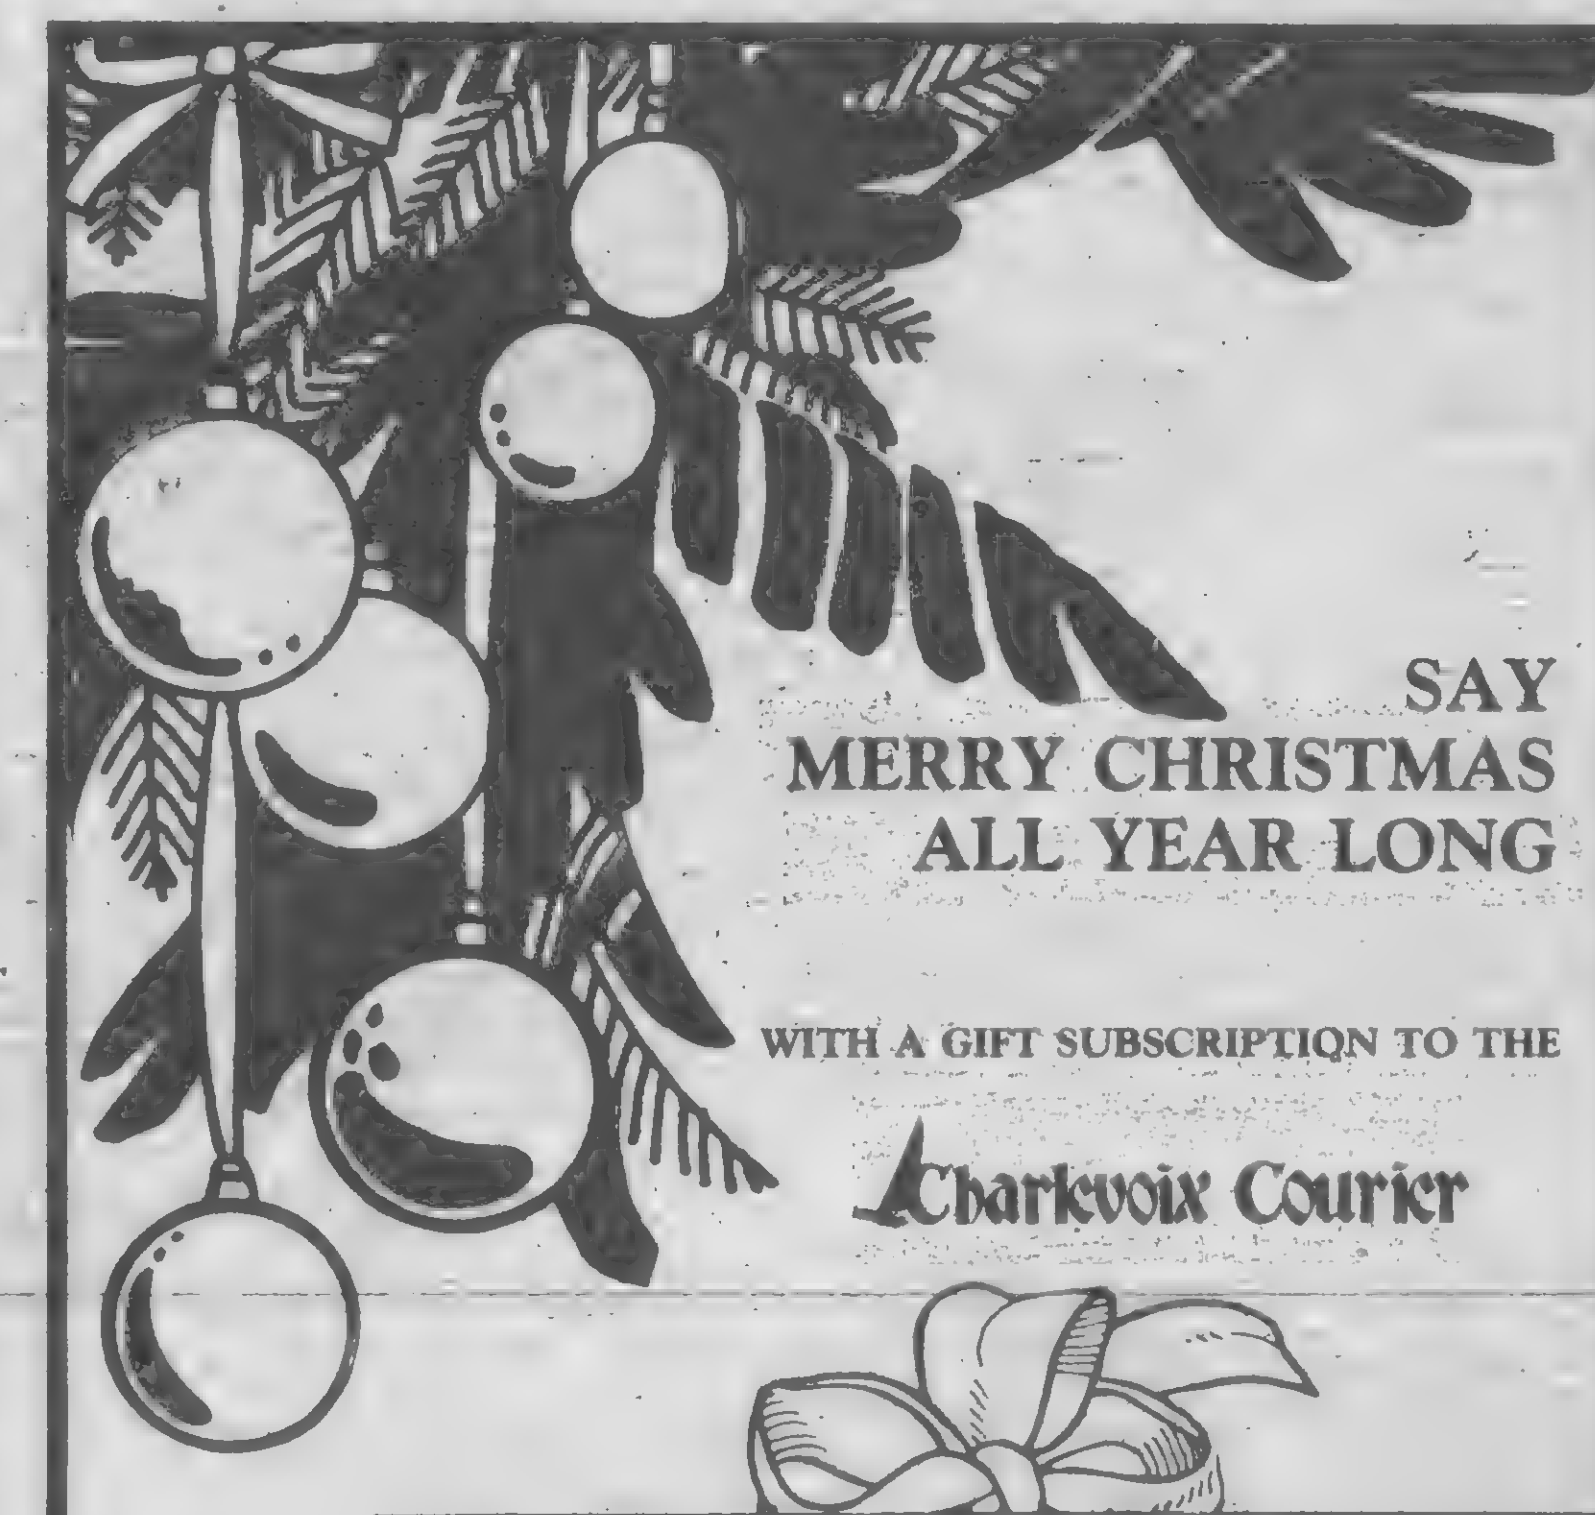

I have lived and practiced law in the city for most of my life and am better aware than he of Detroit's shortcomings.

Mr. Clock's simplistic view of the Black family structure shows a sophomoric approach to a complex problem.

There are many citizens who are concerned with the problems of the city and who strive to upgrade our community. Too bad that his limited experience has not given him a more balanced view. I would be glad to give him a tour of the other side of Detroit and introduce him to people in the city who strive to improve its image.

Mr. Clock's journalistic style lacks a balanced approach, which only helps to detract from our State and the City of Detroit.

Yours truly,
Norman R. Robiner

Behringer - Maloney

Margaret Ann Behringer and John Patrick Maloney exchanged marriage vows Saturday evening, Nov. 10, in St. Peter's Episcopal Church in Charlotte, North Carolina.

The bride, who has been living in Charlotte, is the daughter of Linda Poorman Behringer of Charlevoix and Dr. and Mrs. Jerrold J. Behringer of Defiance, Ohio. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick G. Maloney of Minnetonka, Minnesota. He has been making his home in Mooresville, North Carolina.

The wedding, which was witnessed by 200 guests, featured instrumental music by several professional musicians, including flutist Julie Ranti of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, who was the bride's roommate at Interlochen Arts Academy.

The Rev. Driss Knickerbocker officiated at the double ring rites in which the bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of white silk shantung featuring cutout work about the V-neckline and short sleeves. The fitted bodice and full skirt were set off by a chapel-length train and double layer veil. The bride carried an all-white bouquet of orchids, stephanotis, lilies, and roses.

Susan Dale Olt of Chicago assisted the bride as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Linda Lee Ensign of Denver, Rebecca Ann Jordan of Atlanta, and Jill Adelia Bryan of Charlotte. They wore royal blue moire cocktail suits with pearl and rhinestone buttons. The suits were fashioned with straight skirts and tops accented with white organza shawl collars.

Elizabeth Clarke served as flower girl, wearing a paper white linen dress with handmade lace. Gabriel Bellag was ringbearer.

Thomas Hursch assisted the bridegroom as best man, with Thomas Maloney, Michael Maloney, and Robert Klick assisting as groomsmen. David and Doug Behringer were ushers.

A reception at the Mint Museum of Art followed the wedding ceremony. The rehearsal dinner was hosted by the bridegroom's parents at the Afro American Cultural Center in Charlotte.

After a wedding trip to Jamaica, the newlyweds are at home at 1915 Bay Street, Charlotte. The bride is a graduate of Interlochen Arts Academy, Northwestern University, and Duke School of Law, from which she received a Doctor of Jurisprudence degree. She is a practicing attorney in Charlotte. The bridegroom is a graduate of Minnetonka High School and the University of North Dakota. He is currently employed by U. S. Air as a pilot.

Health Dept. building going up rapidly

Construction is under way on the new headquarters building of District Health Department No. 3 at Garfield and Grant Streets.

The 80 by 100 foot building is being built on property deeded to the Health Department by the County with certain use restrictions. District Health Department No. 3 serves Charlevoix, Antrim, Emmet, and Osego Counties. The new building will house all the services now provided by the Health Department in the County Building Annex on Antrim Street as well as most of the clinic activities now being handled in the East Jordan Health Center.

Northern Health Foundation is in charge of constructing the building. This organization has built several other similar buildings in northern Michigan and they will lease the building to the Health Department for 15 years with options to buy.

Gerald W. Chase, Health Department Administrator, says his Department hopes to move into the new building by Feb. 1.

Big Rock goes back on line following shut down

The Big Rock Point nuclear plant has been returned to service following completion of a scheduled refueling and maintenance outage. The plant's generator was synchronized to the Consumers Power Company electric grid at 3:38 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 28, and operators have been gradually increasing the power level since then.

During the outage which began on September 21, operators replaced 20 bundles of uranium oxide fuel in the reactor and repair personnel completed a number of maintenance activities including overhaul of the generator. Refueling of the reactor is required once a year.

While the plant was out of service, exhaustive inspections of components, pipes and welds in the nuclear steam supply system were carried out. The inspections confirmed that the plant's reactor and related equipment remain in good condition after 28 years of service.

The outage required the assistance of more than 60 additional workers. Some were hired from the Northern Michigan area and the rest were brought in from utility locations downstate or from other companies around the Midwest. Most of them spent more than a month at the site.

Spencer, the son of Gary and Carla Spencer of Charlevoix, attends drill sessions in Cheboygan once a month. He is one of very few high school students who have taken advantage of this training program.

He will be eligible for a college scholarship following high school graduation.

Debate team argues space exploration

With the debate season at its half way mark, Charlevoix High School debaters are sharpening their case and arguments for the final rounds of Northern Michigan League Debate and the state-wide competition which begins soon after the first of the year.

"We have had an excellent start on the season," reports Charlevoix debate coach Connie Ford. "Our team is unusually young, one senior, otherwise all sophomores and freshman, and we are doing very well. At this stage we have accumulated a lot of speaker points for individuals and are well positioned in the league standings."

Ford explained that the team will not know for another week its final standing in the league, but it has placed high in several "invitational debate tournaments" bringing home team and individual trophies.

This year's debate topic, which is selected for high schools across the country, reads "Resolved that the United States government should significantly increase space exploration beyond the earth's mesosphere."

Teams of two debaters on the "affirmative" side must develop cases to support the resolution while the two-person team on the "negative" side must be prepared to argue against any affirmative case they face.

"We have used the league debates to refine our case and improve our arguments," coach Ford explained. "I am especially pleased that our team is quite flexible. Our debaters have tried different cases and different pairings to see what is most effective."

Ford says that following the league debate season, which ends this month with two rounds in Traverse City, the team will enter "swing" debates in Petoskey, where two-person teams will be asked to debate affirmative one round and negative the next.

"We will be travelling to downstate invitational tournaments in early January then we face district competition in mid-January," she concluded.

Home tour helps hospital eye care

The Beta Sigma Phi Chapter of Kappa Sigma recently donated $4,565 to Charlevoix Area Hospital. The sorority raised the money with this past summer's Charlevoix Home Tour. The contribution will go toward emulsifier equipment, which is machinery that will assist in cataract surgery. Total cost of the machinery is approximately $43,000.

Sorority members have made regular contributions to the hospital. Three years ago, home tour proceeds helped purchase surgical equipment that allowed the hospital to begin cataract surgery.

Use care when using wood stoves

That friendly wood-burning stove can become your worst enemy if not properly installed, warns Farm Bureau Insurance.

"A large percentage of the home fires we see during the cold months are caused by wood-burning appliances," said William Monville, director of property claims for Farm Bureau Insurance. "If used properly, wood heat can be a safe and economical way to heat your home. But used improperly, it becomes a danger to property and life. We are very concerned about the extent of this danger in Michigan."

Ron Converse, who makes farm and home safety surveys for Farm Bureau Insurance, reports that thousands of Michigan residents use wood heat appliances in their homes or farm buildings.

Converse said he has special concerns about this heating season because many wood stoves may be fired up again after having been idle for two or three years.

"For the past few years, energy costs have been relatively low, so many people have not depended on wood as a fuel," he said. "Now, with the rising cost of oil and other heating fuels, people are relying on their wood stoves again. Those stoves and chimneys must have thorough inspections before being returned to regular use."

"I think knowledge is the key," converse said. "As long as people follow the proper guidelines and learn the rules of safe operation, we should be able to contain the number of house fires caused by wood heat."

So what are some ways to avoid wood heat fires?

- Use dry, well seasoned hardwoods in your wood stove. They do not cause as much creosote buildup. Creosote is a sticky, tar-like substance that accumulates in your chimney.
- Green wood, or certain woods like pine, are not recommended, since they are great contributors to creosote buildup.

- Inspect and clean the chimney regularly. One spark can set a creosote-filled chimney on fire. Keep your chimney as clean as possible, and always keep fire extinguishing gear nearby and in working order.

Airport plan to cost $3.7 million

City council members reviewed a preliminary airport master plan Monday night which may lead to increased city property taxes.

The $3.7 million plan calls for an additional runway parallel to the current one as well as a paved ramp large enough for 50 planes and a new terminal building. Other aspects of the plan would improve or add to the taxiway, parking lot, access road and fencing.

Most of the plan would be 90 percent federally funded, five percent state funded and five percent locally funded. Preliminary estimates call for the federal government to contribute $3,042,000, the state $290,000 and the city $357,000.

Initial phases of the plan would probably be done next year. Those phases involve the acquisition of a few parcels of property at the southwest end of State Street and the acquisition of some height easements near Carpenter Avenue. The first item constructed would be a 21,000 square yard paved ramp capable of holding 50 planes. The current ramp will only hold two or three planes.

The city's share of land acquisition and ramp construction costs is expected to be approximately $98,000.

At Monday evening's meeting, city manager Mike Wiesner said, "I see a real problem with the current millage levy." He added, "I would recommend that the millage be increased to fund that."

Military truck crashes into downtown store

A 5-ton military truck deployed itself through the wall of The Clothing Company store Sunday morning.

Despite its camouflage coloring the truck stood out like a sore thumb in the middle of the store. A crowd of approximately 200 people gathered and watched as the truck was towed out of the store.

The truck was part of a convoy from the 182nd U.S. Army Reserve unit based in Traverse City. The unit is being deployed to Saudi Arabia, but was traveling to Wisconsin prior to deployment.

The truck which crashed through the wall was being towed by another truck. As the trucks came down the south hill on Bridge Street, the tow truck lost its brakes. Approaching the corner of Mason and Bridge Streets, the driver of the tow truck, Ramon Castillo, faced a decision. With cars parked on Bridge Street waiting for the stop light, Castillo could either crash into the rear of the cars or try to turn the corner.

Castillo came close to making the corner. The tow truck got around, but the truck being towed snapped loose and crashed into the store.

Nobody was in the store. The accident happened at about 9:25 a.m. The store was scheduled to open at 11 a.m. The truck being towed was also empty.

Local firemen cut off the cab of the truck and another military vehicle pulled the truck out of the building.

Getting the truck out of the building took less than an hour. Cleaning up the damage is expected to take much longer.

The truck hit on the Mason Street wall of the building and scattered debris all the way to the far wall.

"It looks like a bomb went off," Jacqueline Mabey, the store's general manager, said Monday afternoon.

Not only did the store lose a lot of merchandise, but a beautiful old display case was also destroyed.

A military truck on its way from Traverse City to Saudi Arabia via Charlevoix and Wisconsin crashed through the wall and into The Clothing Company Sunday morning. The truck was being towed by another truck which lost its brakes coming down Bridge Street's south hill. The driver of the tow truck avoided hitting several cars waiting for the stop light by attempting to turn onto Bridge Street. The truck being towed broke loose and went into the store, which fortunately was not open at the time. No one was seriously injured in the accident.

...airport discussed

Mike Borda, the engineer who designed the new master plan, said the airport is limited by available land at the site. He said the main goal of the plan is not to make the airport larger or to bring in more aircraft, but to make the airport safer to operate.

Currently airplanes have to take off, land and taxi back on the same paved runway. When the new runway is completed, planes will land on the new runway and exit to the old runway to taxi back to the terminal and hangars. The new runway will reduce the chances of one plane landing on top of another.

Monday night's public hearing was only a review of the preliminary plan. Borda said he will bring a final master plan to the city sometime near February for council approval.

...truck crashes

Insurance adjusters were at the store Monday. The structural integrity of the building was also being checked.

Mabee said she isn't sure when the store will be able to reopen.

"Everything's kind of on hold," she said. "There's a lot of work to be done." She added that she and the rest of the people at the store appreciate all of the support they have received from the community following the accident.

Exchange student to be here for next semester

Norman & Elaine Tolman of Charlevoix will welcome a new "daughter" in January. Ana Ines Novales Algorta, a Youth For Understanding (YFU) International Exchange student from Uruguay will be a student at Charlevoix High School and will live with the Tolman family until July 1991.

TV show seeks clues to lost girl

America's Most Wanted, a national TV show, has broadcast photos and a plea for tips concerning a missing Charlevoix girl. In a Friday night telecast on the Fox network the show aired two pictures and spent between 15 and 20 seconds asking for clues about 14-year-old girl Heather Kleiber who has been missing since Aug. 17.

The show received approximately two dozen calls in response to the plea. The Charlevoix County Sheriff's department and Charlevoix City Police Department also received a few additional calls and are following up on the tips.

Kleiber was 13 when she disappeared and turned 14 Monday. Although the show pronounced her last name "Kleeber," it is properly pronounced "Kliiber."

OPINIONS

EDITH

by EDITH GILBERT

As I was leaving the Argonne Restaurant the other evening, a couple stopped to chat briefly. "Are you lonesome?" they asked me. "Lonesome!" I cried out in surprise. "Who's got time to be lonesome in Charlevoix?" Those of us who've chosen to live up north are always explaining to those who are not equally enlightened what we DO up here all winter. One of the things we do is get involved. Another thing we do is enjoy the variety and excitement of the weather, which can be a plus or a minus, depending.

The minus factor is scurrying to the Post Office in a blinding blizzard, when snowflakes blow horizontally, and Round Lake turns the dark green color of pine trees. The plus factor is driving down Bridge Street at night, lacy Italian lights looped over the trees like hula hoops, shop windows brightly decorated, and the lone, lighted Christmas Tree in the park silhouetted against a moonlit lake. It's a charming small town scene that big city department store windows try to emulate.

Then there's the tension of repeated incidents when all the lights on the north side go off for several hours. We're used to that. We have candles and some of us have wood burning stoves. But it's still nerve wracking. Also it's embarrassing when one forgetfully, but automatically flicks the light switch on as we walk from room to room. We call friends and ask if they have light and heat. It's our secret hope that they will offer to take us in just in case—but that's never been necessary yet. With no TV, no radio or computer I cogitate on what life must have been like for Abe Lincoln and his mother in that log cabin. Now that's lonesome.

They didn't even have a telephone!

Am I lonesome? Not with all the telephone calls and doorbell ringing that goes on in this house. A telephone caller from Florida has read The Complete Wedding Planner and has a question. A local caller wants me to know that the powers-that-be have arranged for a sign to be put up at the Golf Course next summer announcing the fact that one can rent golf bags and clubs. Hurray for that bit of news. Gardi Stern calls from Chicago and commiserates with me over my star-crossed checkbook, which he read about in an earlier column. He can't wait to return here next summer. Heidi James calls from TV station 7/4 to invite me to appear at noon on Mon. Dec. 17 to talk about weddings. (How can I lose 20 lbs. in 10 days?) And Jeanie Seymour tells me about her heart warming visit with her son, Kent, who is serving in the U.S. Army. They spent two wonderful weeks sightseeing together in Germany. Now he reports back to active duty and in two weeks he will be shipped off to Saudi Arabia.

And then the letters. Jimmy Coleman, former year 'round resident, and faithful reader of this column, writes from Scottsdale, Az. and brings me up to date on his Concord lifestyle, his family, his marriages, his divorces. In a nostalgic vein he tells me that

REASONABLE TO ME

L. SCOTT SWANSON

Looking at disasters

Disasters are well attended in this town. When a military truck crashed through the side of The Clothing Company this past Sunday morning, a crowd of perhaps 200 people soon gathered to look things over. Local fires and sometimes even traffic accidents have also been known to draw crowds.

I suppose a person might climb up on a soap box and decry these gatherings as the product of morbid curiosity, but I choose not to do that. In kind of a twisted way, I think gathering for disasters is something reassuring in a small community. It means our disasters are infrequent enough so that we have yet to become jaded. There are places in this world where disasters occur so often that nobody takes proper notice of them. Not here.

I have read old newspapers and talked to old people about disasters from days long past. We're much better at dealing with disasters than we used to be.

Improvements in building construction and fire fighting equipment and training have generally diminished both the frequency and devastation caused by fires.

Most northern Michigan towns had a great fire during the lumbering era. I'm not sure which particular fire would qualify as Charlevoix's great fire. In those days, everything was made of wood and when one building got going, others soon caught. In addition to that, before electric lights every light bulb was a flame.

Not only did fires start more frequently, but they were also more difficult to extinguish. Now, the fire department has big fire trucks capable of pumping thousands of gallons per minute. In the old days, they had horse-drawn tank wagons.

In one area community, when the whistle blew they used to pay a fee to the first farmer to get a team of horses to the fire barn to pull the fire wagon. Then the fire department got its own team. Eventually, the fire department got a truck and sold the team of horses to a local farmer. As legend has it, even after they were on the farm, when the horses heard the fire whistle blow, they would leave the farm and come into town.

From what I've been told, the first fire trucks, by today's standards, weren't anything to get excited about. Hard rubber tires that allowed fire trucks to go through sand better were considered to be a major advance.

The availability of water is another thing which we take for granted these days, but must have been a terrible problem at one time.

These days there's usually a hydrant available to supply water. But what did firemen do before there were hydrants? They probably spent a lot of time either fetching or waiting for more water.

Who invented the fire hydrant? Who had the insight to step back from fighting a fire and say, "You know, if we could pipe water here instead of running to fetch it, putting this fire out would be a lot easier."

In wreckage situations, people always first wonder what happened and next begin wondering how things are going to be fixed.

Sunday morning, the first thing people asked is "What happened?" One truck was towing another and its brakes went out coming down the hill. The driver faced a choice of hitting some cars stopped by the traffic light or trying to make the turn onto Mason Street. He tried to make the turn, but it didn't work out.

"How are they going to get that truck out of there?" They cut off the cab, then hooked another truck up and towed out the truck. It was really a pretty slick operation.

Once the truck was removed, the crowd disbursed. Later, as I developed photos of the incident, I paused for a second and wondered just how useful the photos were.

"I suppose these are for those few people who didn't view this for themselves," I thought.

Letters to the Editor:

Builder took a chance

Editor,
As zoning administrator of Norwood Township, I have followed the Shindorf Wetland Violation very closely. Your article contains several inaccurate statements.

Mr. Shindorf did get permits to build the first cabin in 1981. However he is fully aware as a builder in this area, that no permit is valid over one year, although many may be renewed for one additional year.

The log cabin in question was started in the spring of 1989. Mr. Shindorf did apply for a Soil Erosion permit in the fall of 1988. He was advised on the initial on-site visit by Rick Pierson that he needed to contact the DNR for a Wetland Protection Permit and on several occasions after that date. The Soil Erosion permit was issued to Mr. Shindorf on July 28, 1989.

To my knowledge, Mr. Shindorf never did apply for a DNR Wetland Permit, not did he ever apply for a Norwood Township Zoning permit or a Charlevoix County Building Permit, Mechanical Permit or Electrical Permit. He did apply for a Charlevoix County Health Department permit which was approved - however, the property was so wet that the septic field could not be located on the site where the log cabin is. The field had to be located on the lot where the first cabin was built in 1981.

Norwood Township filed a misdemeanor complaint with the Charlevoix County Prosecutor's office on June 5, 1990. The Charlevoix County Building Department has failed to file charges on this violation to date.

A letter dated July 14, 1989 sent to Mr. Shindorf by the DNR informed him that he was in violation of the Wetland Protection Act and asked him to cease and desist all work on the site immediately. He chose to ignore this letter and continued to work on the structure.

On September 18, 1989 Mr. Shindorf was notified in writing that he was in violation of Norwood's Township Zoning Ordinance. He ignored this letter and continued construction.

In my opinion Judge Harvey Varnum sentenced Mr. Shindorf as he should have - Mr. Shindorf was found guilty by his peers of violating the Michigan Wetland Protection Act. He had full knowledge of the Wetlands Protection Act and chose to ignore it. He created his own hardship by his own choices, and reasonable use of the property had been made with the structure erected in 1981. By his action the Judge has attempted to defend this Michigan wetland.

Thank you,
Doris A. Pearl

Rainbow board appreciates support

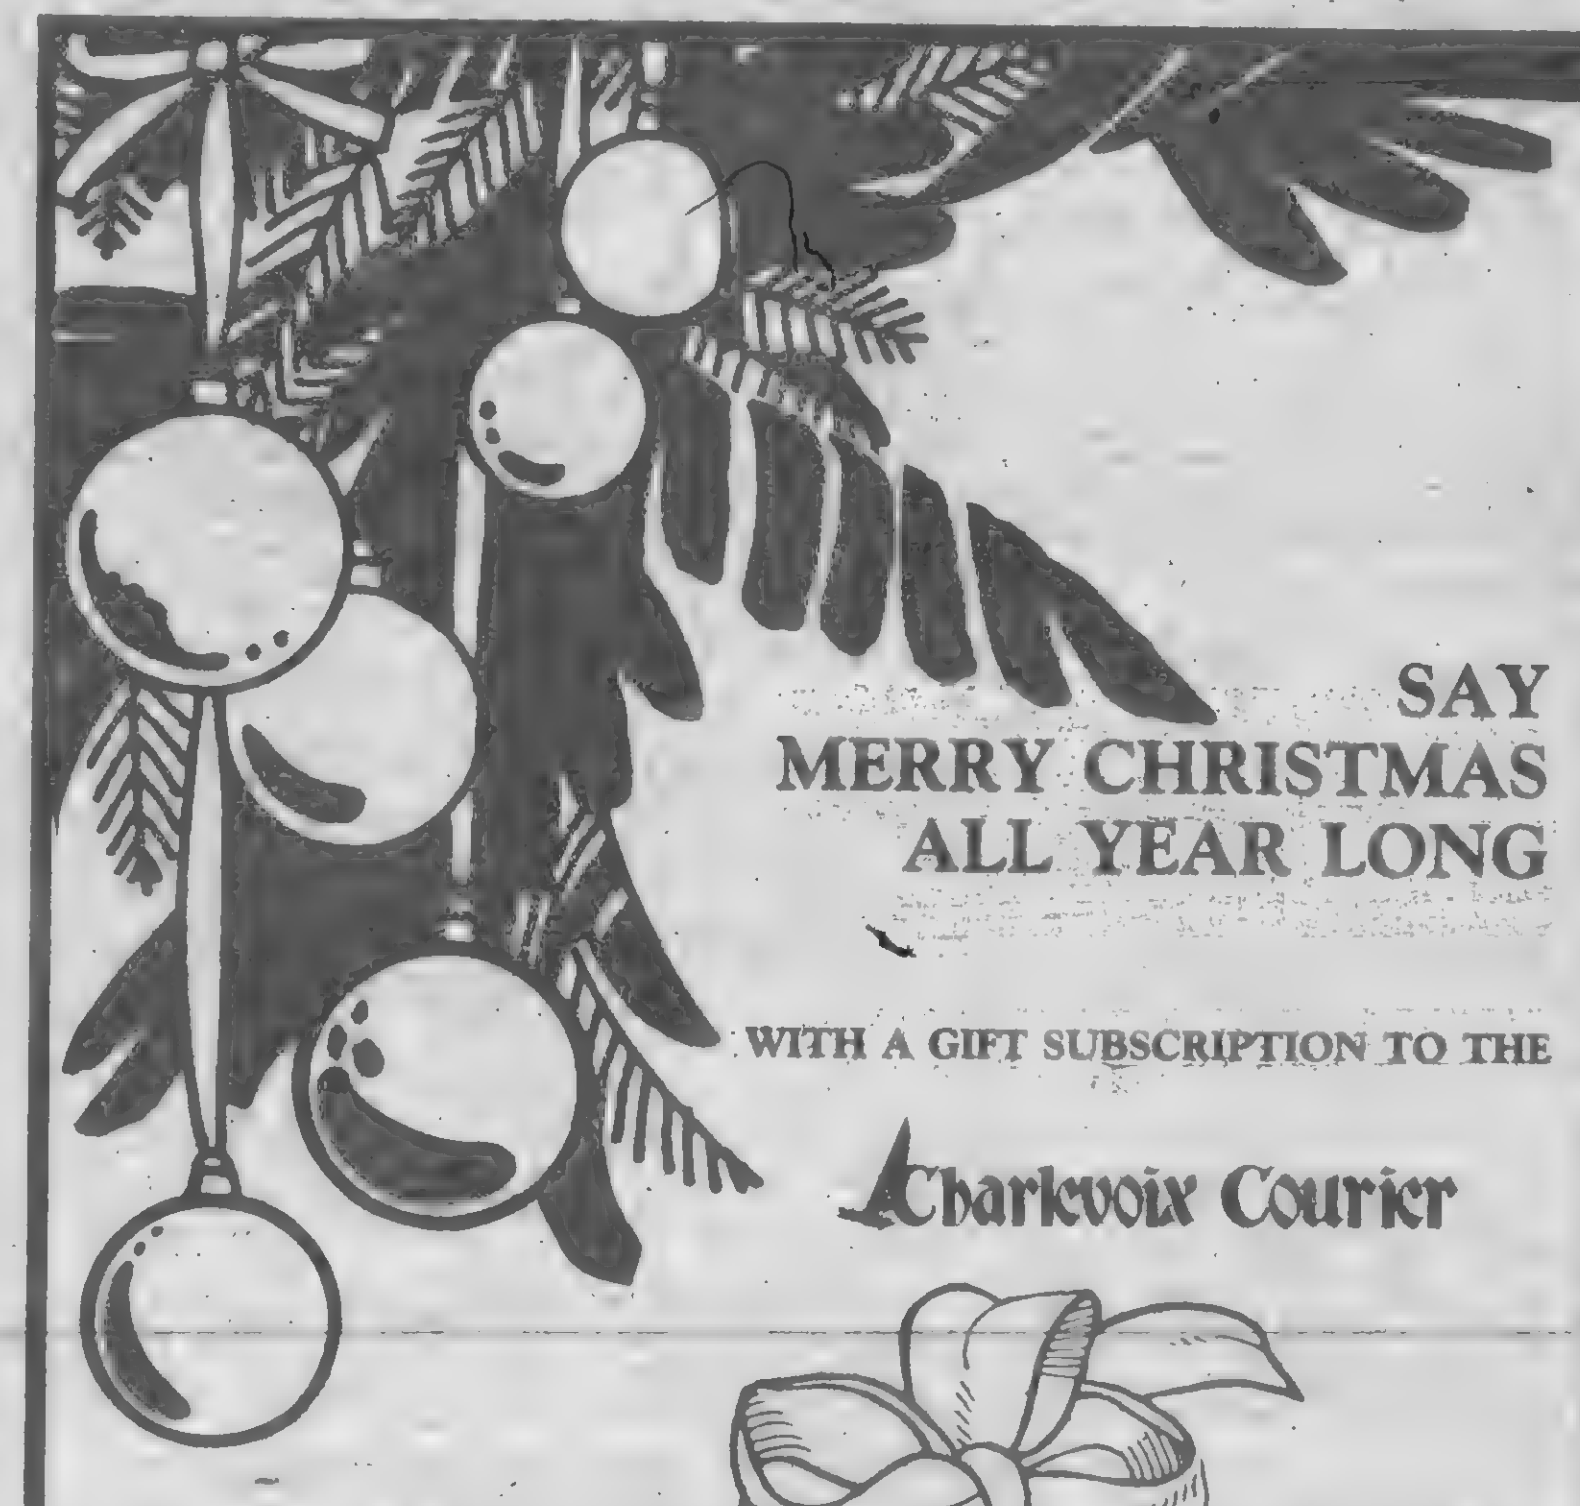

Editor,

As we are fast approaching the end of another year, the Rainbow Shoppe would like to take this opportunity to thank the Charlevoix Community for their loyal support during the year of 1990. Through their contributions, patronage, and all the volunteers working at the store, we were able to financially reach out again to needy organizations. Collectively, we contributed over 15 thousand dollars to such establishments as Compassionate Friends, Senior Citizens, Alanon, The Ministerial Association, Charlevoix graduates all-night party, Community Food Pantry, Charlevoix Area Hospital and many, many more monthly emergencies.

Our sincere appreciation is extended to everyone who made this possible. Hopefully, with your continued support next year, we will be able to surpass our outreach to the Charlevoix Community.

Gratefully,
Rita Orlowski

Barnard Grange enjoys Christmas program

The Barnard Grange hosted an old fashioned Christmas program Sunday evening. More than 100 people attended the event at the Grange Hall on Barnard Road.

Both children and adult Grange members presented a variety of songs and music for the program. As Christie Empey sang Silent Night, she was accompanied by Jamie Stebe on the key board and 25 Junior Grange members singing the song in sign language.

Other songs and musical presentations included: Vicki Stevens singing Up On The House Top; Kristin Stutzman playing several Christmas carols on her fiddle; and Tabatha Potter playing her flute. Among the adults to perform were: Norm Empey and family, Mary Warner, Nancy Stoel, Sheri Jones, Rod and Kim Stevens, Sheryl Thaseleer, Christina Thaseleer and Charles Thaseleer and Leon Bolhuis.

Santa Claus arrived following the program and parked next to a large Christmas tree and passed out candy to three dozen children while the adults enjoyed punch, cookies and coffee.

Work continues on senior center

The Charlevoix Senior Center's new building on Norwood Road will soon be ready for limited occupancy, according to Sherry Black, Center coordinator.

The new building is being constructed in two parts. The first part is the renovation of the old Charlevoix Township Hall, and the second part is an addition to the hall. The people of Charlevoix Township deeded the building to the Senior Center more than two years ago.

Building costs of the project are being paid for by monies raised by the Senior Center, a Frey Foundation grant, and grants from the State Department of Services to the Aging. Some of the State money has been held up because of procedural oversight, which has slowed the process. One of the biggest expenses yet to be met is the hook-up to the City sewer system, which will amount to several thousands of dollars.

However, the City is planning to run its sewer line to the ball fields in back of the Senior Center next spring, and by waiting until that time, the cost to the Senior Center will be less.

The renovated building will have heat, water, and interior finish within a short time, so the Senior Center can carry on its crafts and class work there. The meal program will continue in the V.F.W. Hall for a while longer.

Charlevoix architect Lou Orłowski, who drew the building plans, has been a volunteer overseer of the project. Charlevoix Township Supervisor Oscar Stroud, who was instrumental in releasing the Township Hall to the Senior Center, has also been active in following through on the project.

VFW Auxiliary plans for future

The Ladies Auxiliary to the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Post #1153, met for its business meeting at the Post Home Dec. 6, with President Angie Borths presiding. Guests of honor were 13th District President Darlene Poleske, of Posen, and Past District Pres. Corrine Rogers, Central Lake.

Auxiliary members were complimented on their flag floor work and their comprehensive notebooks showing the activities of the Auxiliary this year. It was reported that members have contributed more than 200 hours of community service, including rehabilitation, etc. during the month of November.

Members were reminded to remit to National Home for their seals, and also for the address labels recently received. The Auxiliary continues to sell gold-colored pins in the shape of a Key to Michigan, with the proceeds used for national cancer aid and research. They are also collecting Glen's green grocery slips for the same purpose. The pins are available from Arlene Staley, Cancer chairman.

Anyone wanting red, white, and blue ribbons to show support for our overseas troops may contact the Auxiliary. A large ribbon will be displayed on the trees at the Post Home. Cards will be sent to all local overseas men and women.

The Auxiliary will also deliver a Christmas floral tribute to all members who are shut-ins: Arlene Staley, Marilyn Finck, and Betty White are on the floral committee. The public is asked to write to congressmen stating that the auxiliary is not in favor of any war activities.

A contribution was given to the Charlevoix Christmas Pantry. It was also voted to send a contribution to the Children's National VFW Home at Eaton Rapids, Michigan in memory of Clarence Goldstick and Marie Olach.

Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting by Angie Borths, Betty White and Rosalyn Goldstick. The next meeting of the Auxiliary will be held Thursday, Jan. 3. All mothers, daughters, wives, and granddaughters of over-seas veterans are urged to join the VFW Auxiliary.

Emergency grants are available

Charlevoix County will soon receive approximately $22,500 for emergency food and shelter from the Federal Emergency Management Agency. Any private voluntary or public organization wishing to apply for a portion of these funds should contact Vasco

Zucchiatti at the Department of Social Services, phone 547-4471.

County commission districts may change

By Peg Ohle

Some time within 60 days after Charlevoix County is notified of its 1990 official census, but before May 15, a committee of five will meet to divide the county into Commissioners' Districts for representation on the County Board.

The committee is called the "County Apportionment Committee" and by statute it is made up of the County Prosecutor, County Clerk, County Treasurer, the chairman of the County Republican Committee, and the chairman of County Democratic Committee.

Specifically, the job of this committee will be to set aside the county's 15 townships and three cities into five or more contiguous districts of as near equal population as possible.

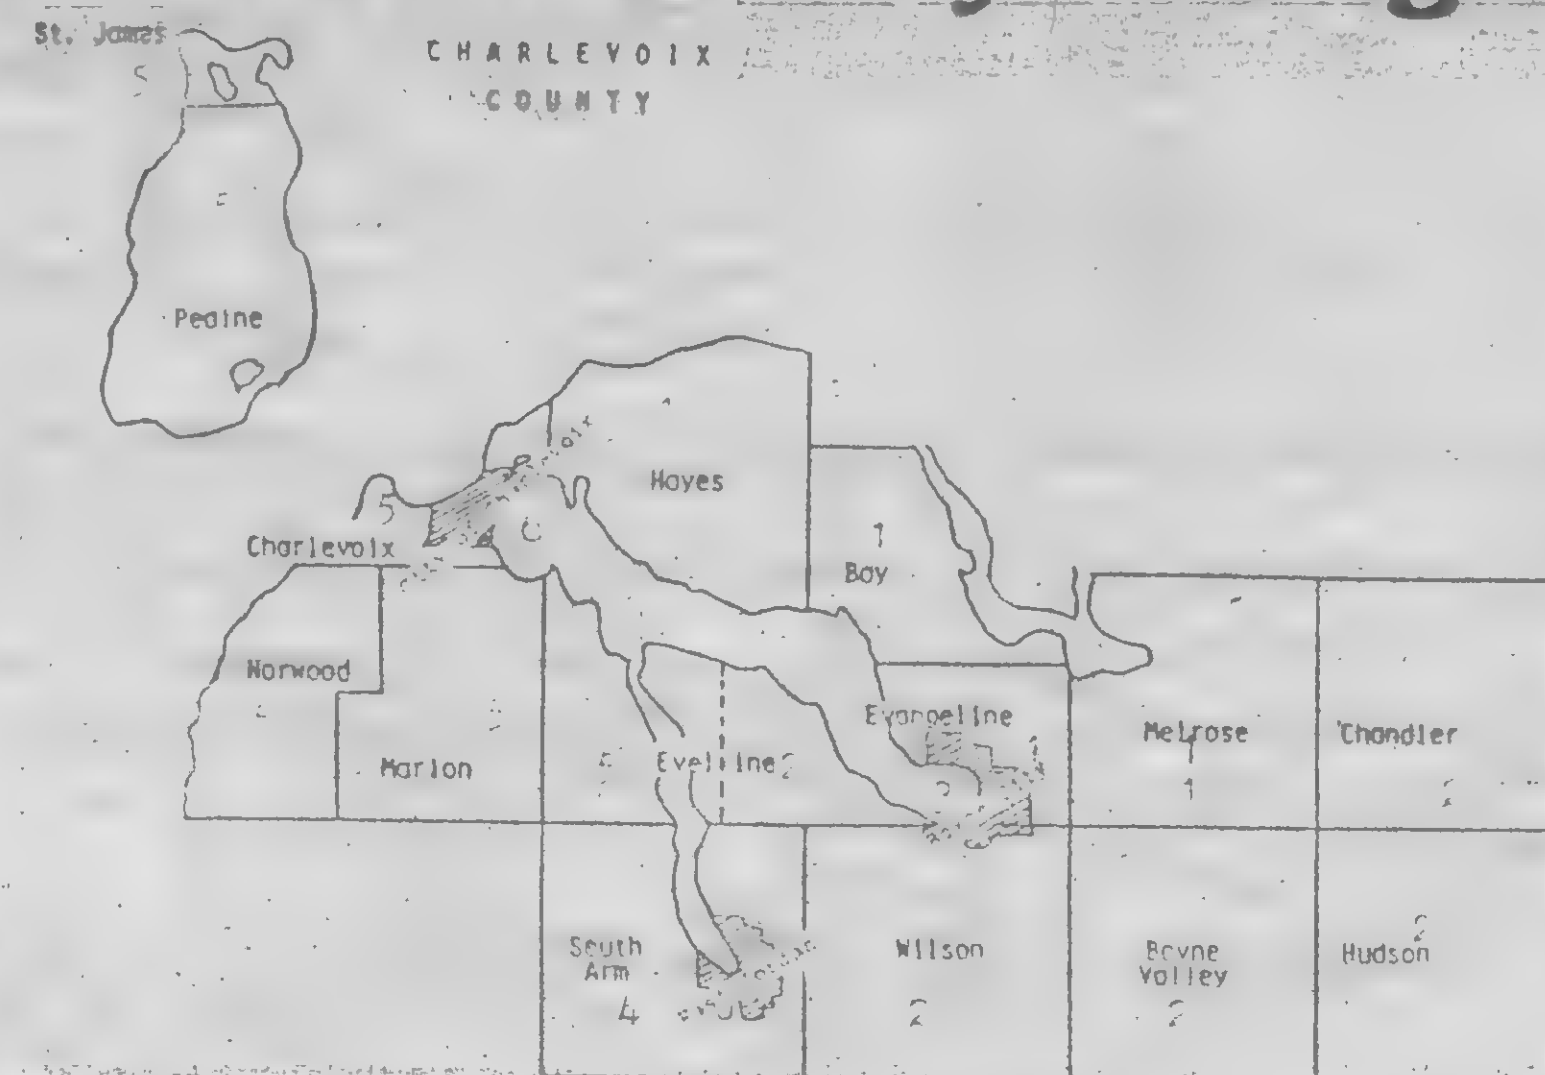

This is done every 10 years following release of census figures. Charlevoix County has not received its official census figure, but the unofficial figure is 21,381, up from 19,907 in 1980.

The last redistricting, following the 1980 census, resulted in cutting the number of districts in the county from 15 to six and the number of County Commissioners from 15 to six. As noted above, statute requires at least five districts in each county, but there may be as many as 35. (Not likely in a county of just more than 20,000 population.)

The accompanying map shows the present districts: No. 1, Hayes, Bay, Evangeline, and Melrose Townships; No. 2, Chandler, Hudson, Boyne Valley, Wilson, and eastern Eveline Townships; No. 3, City of Boyne City; No. 4, City of East Jordan and South Arm Township; No. 5, western Eveline, Marion, Norwood, Peaine, St. James, and Charlevoix Townships; and No. 6, City of Charlevoix.

When the County Board of Commissioners organizes for its two-year term in January, it will be for the last time under the present districting. There will be three returning commissioners: Walter Hufford of the City of Charlevoix, Phil Johnson of the City of Boyne City, and Donald Smith of District No. 5. Joining them will be the recently elected commissioners Carl Price of District No. 1, James Behling of District No. 2, and Howard Hosler of District No. 4.

This map shows Charlevoix County commissioner districts as they currently stand.

Legion Auxiliary stays active

A pot-luck dinner for all Legion and Auxiliary members preceded the December business meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary Leslie T. Shapton Unit #226 at the Legion Hall Dec. 4. It was reported that gifts of fruit and toiletries were taken to Grandvue Convalescent Home for Thanksgiving for all patients there.

Josephine Bindi, Sunshine Chairman, also reported 17 cards had been sent last month to shut-ins, and 31 cards were signed at the Dec. meeting for shut-ins and service men and women. Members were also given red-white-and blue ribbons at last meeting to display to show support for our armed forces overseas.

A contribution was sent to the Chapel of the Four Chaplains, Philadelphia. It was also reported that a donation of $100 was sent to the Charlevoix Community Pantry for Christmas food and gifts.

The Auxiliary is also still selling Micro-Wave cookbooks for $7.

The Legion and its Auxiliary are also collecting the small aluminum pull tabs from cans of pop and beer. These are being used by the State and National Legion to be redeemed and purchase medical equipment for children's hospitals. So far, the State Legion has purchased 19 machines at $2500 each.

The Auxiliary also made a donation to the Children's Hospital, Grand Rapids.

Glenn R. Pemberton, 80, of Charlevoix, died Dec. 4, 1990, at Charlevoix Area Hospital.

Masonic graveside service will be held in the spring at Brookside Cemetery, Charlevoix.

Mr. Pemberton was born July 19, 1910, in Alanson, the son of Charles and Florence (Paige) Pemberton. He attended Petoskey High School and on June 24, 1933, he married the former Freda E. O'Neil in Charlevoix. They always made their home in Charlevoix.

Mr. Pemberton owned and operated Pemberton Sales & Service in Charlevoix for 25 years and served as a deputy sheriff for the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department for 12 years under Sheriff Glenn Rose. He then served with the city police department for 15 years before retiring in 1972.

He was a member and past master of Charlevoix Lodge No. 282, F.&A.M. and a charter member of the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club.

He is survived by his wife Freda.

Arrangements were handled by the Winchester Funeral Home, Charlevoix.

Mary Novotny Hardy

Mary Novotny Hardy, 77, of Charlevoix, died Dec. 3 at the Penfold adult foster care home.

Private family services were held and interment will be in Brookside Cemetery, Charlevoix.

and Mary (Patrick) Novotny. She grew up in Charlevoix and graduated from Charlevoix High School in 1932 and attended Charlevoix County Normal. During World War II she resided and worked in the Detroit area. In 1945 she moved to San Diego, Calif., where she resided until two years ago when she returned to Charlevoix.

Mrs. Hardy is survived by two brothers, James Novotny and Frank Novotny, both of Charlevoix; four sisters, Mrs. Rose Mann, Lily Novotny and Mrs. Chick (Edna) Gallagher, all of Charlevoix and Mrs. Albert (Helen) Flowers of Jachumba, Calif.

Veterans may get tombstones

A little known service of the Department of Veterans Affairs is that of furnishing markers for the unmarked graves of deceased veterans, according to Ron Geer, Charlevoix County Veterans Counselor.

Memorial monuments are also available to commemorate veterans whose remains have not been recovered or identified, were buried at sea, donated to science, or cremated and remains scattered.

For veterans entombed in a mausoleum, bronze niche markers are available.

Any deceased veteran discharged under conditions other than dishonorable is eligible for a marker. A copy of the deceased veteran's discharge certificate or a copy of other official documents pertaining to military service must accompany the application. Service prior to World War I requires detailed documentation, such as muster rolls, extracts from State files, military or State organizations where served, pension or land warrants, etc.

The markers are available in either upright or flat types. While the markers themselves are free, the cost of installation must be paid for from private funds.

Further information is available from Geer at 547-7220.

Rural conflict is subject of study

The clash between farmers and urban second home owners as evidenced in northern Michigan from time to time is not just an area problem.

According to a story in The Christian Science Monitor, farmers in New York State are lobbying for right-to-farm laws to protect them from city people who want country life without the odors and noises that go with it.

The article quotes a spokesman for the New York Farm Bureau who says farmers need protection from "the suburban fringe that continues to push out into the country", adding that what the farm group wants is to "fully inform new residents on what to expect when they come in".

The Monitor story also reports that an Illinois farmer was arrested for operating his tractor at night because non-farm neighbors objected to his farming activities.

"Too often, nonfarmers are willing to live in a rural environment but not willing to accept the characteristics of the rural environment," the Farm Bureau spokesman noted. "If they were better informed before they signed on the dotted line, it wouldn't be as much of an issue."

Arts center exhibits prize winning photos

Seven northern Michigan photographers won special honors in the Tenth Annual Juried Photography Show now on display at McCune Arts Center sponsored by the Crooked Tree Arts Council.

David Ochsner of Johannesburg won a $300 first prize; Peggy Midener of East Jordan a $150 second prize and Ethan Strouf Third prize of $75. Funds for the prizes were furnished by the Arts Foundation of Michigan.

A total of 49 works accepted are exhibited including honorable mentions awarded Autumn Sherman of Vandervbilt; Bill Tribble of Harbor Springs; Curtis Fonger of Indian River and Phil Ohmer of Charlevoix. The CTAC exhibit was open to all photographers in the western lower peninsula and members of the Arts Council who might reside outside the area. Juror was Linda Menger of Midland, Associate Professor of Art/Photography at Delta College. Co-chairs of the competition were CTAC members Dr. and Mrs. (Pat) Ulich of Petoskey.

The Arts Council operates the McCune Arts Center and sponsors a year around program in visual and performing arts, art classes and workshops and also operates the Art Tree Sales Gallery.

The photography show is open free of charge to the public at the McCune Gallery from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday until Dec. 29.

Basketball team opens with a win

Although the game was played on St. Ignace's home court, Charlevoix owned the boards Friday night. The Rayders out-rebounded St. Ignace by 15 and picked up 27 offensive rebounds in beating the Saints 46-33.

Seniors Jason Parrish and Todd Kovach had 14 and 12 rebounds respectively as the Rayders controlled the boards and played sound defense in a slow paced game.

Charlevoix jumped out to a 9-4 lead early in the game and St. Ignace slowed the game's tempo. The Rayders led 11-5 at the end of the first quarter and extended the lead to 29-17 at the half.

St. Ignace closed to within six at 31-25 midway through the third quarter, but baskets by juniors Brian Coolman and Luke LaBlanc got the Rayder offense back on track.

Charlevoix had a nicely balanced scoring attack from their front-court and backcourt. Parrish and Coolman shared scoring honors with 10 points apiece. LaBlanc contributed nine points and guard Paul Wakulat had eight.

Senior forward Todd Kovach twisted an ankle early in the game, hampering him the rest of the way. He picked up a dozen rebounds despite the ankle problem.

Charlevoix opens league play Friday night at Boyne City.

Wrestlers start well

Brian Darrah, Dan Browe, Jason Pajtas and Shawn Young all went 5-0 in leading the Rayder wrestling team to three wins in five matches at the Glen Lake Wrestling Invitational Saturday. Each of the four Rayder wrestlers pinned all five opponents.

As a team, Charlevoix beat Roscommon 44-32, Maple City-Glen Lake 54-20 and Frankfort 54-32 while losing to Elk Rapids 42-33 and to Mason County Central, the winner of the meet, 42-36.

The Rayders won despite not having wrestlers to fill four weight classes.

Charlevoix's undefeated wrestlers wrestled in the following weight classes:

Darrah, 152 pounds. Pajtas, 135 pounds.
Browe, heavyweight. Young, 125 pounds.

Chris McCallum was 4-1 on the day wrestling in the 140 pound weight class. McCallum pinned three opponents.

B.J. VanLoe was 4-1 in the 135 pound class, pinning four opponents.

Nick Himebaugh was 3-2 at 119 pounds, pinning three opponents.

Josh Martin was 3-2 at 160 pounds, pinning three opponents.

Keith Parrish was 2-3 at 189 pounds, pinning two opponents.

The Rayders wrestlers won 36 of 45 matches.

This Saturday the Rayders will be wrestling at St. Ignace.

Freeway extension takes another step

The Michigan Department of Transportation (M-DOT) has approved the alignment and design of US-131 by-pass of Cadillac, aiming to start construction early in 1995.

State Transportation Director James P. Pitz said the plan calls for construction of a four-lane freeway extending from the existing freeway south of Cadillac north for 9.2 miles to just north of 41 1/2 Mile Road. It will by-pass the city to the east.

"The new freeway will relieve congestion in Cadillac and improve tourist and commercial access to the area," Pitz said. "It continues our long-standing program to build a safe and modern highway through western and northern Michigan, and we're pleased that the work is going forward."

The estimated cost of the project is $40 million, including the required right-of-way. Property acquisition is scheduled to begin in 1993.

M-DOT is nearing completion of an environmental impact statement covering a 20-mile-long corridor for a new highway extending from Cadillac to north of Manton. Funding is in place to build the first 9.2 miles. The highway will be extended northward as funds become available.

The approved design proposes construction of interchanges at the existing freeway south of Cadillac, at M-55 and at Boon Road. Bridge overpasses would be built at Whaley Road, Crosby Road, the Conrail railroad tracks, 13th Street and 30 Mile Road.

Preparing for the project, M-DOT in 1991 will resurface the existing two-lane US-131 from Boon Road north for eight miles to M-42 and build passing lanes at two locations. The cost will be approximately $2 million.

Plans for the proposed new freeway may be viewed at M-DOT District office at 100 E. Chapin in Cadillac.

Freeway extension takes another step

The Michigan Department of Transportation (M-DOT) has approved the alignment and design of US-131 by-pass of Cadillac, aiming to start construction early in 1995.

State Transportation Director James P. Pitz said the plan calls for construction of a four-lane freeway extending from the existing freeway south of Cadillac north for 9.2 miles to just north of 41 1/2 Mile Road. It will by-pass the city to the east.

"The new freeway will relieve congestion in Cadillac and improve tourist and commercial access to the area," Pitz said. "It continues our long-standing program to build a safe and modern highway through western and northern Michigan, and we're pleased that the work is going forward."

The estimated cost of the project is $40 million, including the required right-of-way. Property acquisition is scheduled to begin in 1993.

M-DOT is nearing completion of an environmental impact statement covering a 20-mile-long corridor for a new highway extending from Cadillac to north of Manton. Funding is in place to build the first 9.2 miles. The highway will be extended northward as funds become available.

The approved design proposes construction of interchanges at the existing freeway south of Cadillac, at M-55 and at Boon Road. Bridge overpasses would be built at Whaley Road, Crosby Road, the Conrail railroad tracks, 13th Street and 30 Mile Road.

Preparing for the project, M-DOT in 1991 will resurface the existing two-lane US-131 from Boon Road north for eight miles to M-42 and build passing lanes at two locations. The cost will be approximately $2 million.

Plans for the proposed new freeway may be viewed at M-DOT District office at 100 E. Chapin in Cadillac.

This picture greeting card from Charlevoix was mailed in 1931. The cutie message at the top reads, "Having a glorious time here. Our license is OK for Four," apparently referring to the four people having a good time in the car.

EPA agrees to fund water plant repair

The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has reconsidered an earlier position and will seek federal and state funds to fix an intake problem at Charlevoix's water treatment plant. The EPA expects the repair to cost approximately $390,000.

There have been intake problems at the plant near Lake Michigan beach since shortly after it began operating in 1988. The plant draws its water through a filter system in the lake bottom. However, under certain conditions the filter system plugs up and restricts the flow into the plant.

The problem usually occurs on windy summer days when the lake is churning. On certain days, a combination of intake problems and high water usage has meant that for short periods of time the city was using more water than the plant could produce. Water stored in tanks at the plant covered the deficit until the restriction or use eased.

This past summer the Charlevoix city council issued lawn sprinkling restrictions as a precaution against running out of water.

Roger Grimes, assistant regional council for the EPA, said there are different theories about why the plant doesn't function up to expectations.

"Our thought was that the engineering company did not consider thoroughly enough the effect of the system operating under these conditions (high intake in turbid waters)."

Grimes said the engineering firm speculated that the system might not have been constructed properly. They, at one time, contended that conditions might have been turbid when the filter was put in which would have allowed silt to get in the filter.

Although the EPA has decided to fund repairs, funding may not be available in the coming year. The repairs might not take place until 1992. Repairs are expected to involve enlarging the intake filter in the lake bottom.

Veterans party planned

The annual Christmas party for the American Legion, Leslie T. Shapton Unit #226, and the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post #1153, will take place jointly at the American Legion Hall, Sunday, Dec. 16, at 1 p.m.

The party will feature a potluck dinner. Meat and drinks will be furnished, but guests are asked to bring a dish to pass and their own table service.

All members of both groups, plus their Auxiliaries, families and friends are urged to attend the party. Any veterans and families in the area, not members are also invited to attend.

Each person bringing a child to the party, is asked to bring a gift for the child with that child's name on it. Santa Clause will distribute the gifts to the children, plus gifts of candy. Photos of Santa with each child will also be taken.

There will be a "White Elephant" gift exchange for the adults. Those wishing to take part should bring items approximately $3 to $5 value for the exchange. Men and women mark gifts with respective gender.

Flooded recycling market means $2 drop-off charge

You might call it a fundamental problem in garbage economics. The supply of recyclable goods is exceeding market demands.

A local recycling center has begun charging people $2 to drop off recyclables. According to the center operator the reason for the charge is simply supply and demand. People are responding to calls for recycling and providing a supply of recyclable goods which exceeds the market demand for recycled products.

Skip Canfield, owner and operator of Northwest Recycling Centers in Traverse City and Charlevoix says collecting recyclables is no longer the problem, but the price he gets when he sells recycled goods has plummeted.

"Our tonnage is going up, but the price is going down," he says. As an example he cites paper which he once could sell for $70 per ton, but now sells for $20 per ton. Canfield said paper mills have more recycled paper coming in than they know what to do with.

Until two weeks ago Northwest Recycling was charging Charlevoix resident $2 per month for once a month curbside pick up and nothing for recyclables brought to the center. Now they are charging $2 per load of recyclables brought to the center and will be increasing the monthly pick up charge from $2 to $3. Canfield said the price increase is necessary to cover the center's cost of preparing the material for marketing.

Canfield is critical of government subsidized recycling programs. He says government subsidies help flood the market and allow subsidized recyclers to sell at low prices and further deflate the market.

The government should stay out of recycling according to Canfield. "The private sector will do a better job anytime than the government will," he maintains.

Only six or seven households have used the recycling curbside pick up service in Charlevoix. Most people were hauling their recyclables to the center.

Canfield said the response to the drop off charge has varied. He said some people have said they're surprised the center wasn't charging from the time it opened last year. He said about 15 percent of the people have complained.

Deadlines for next week's edition will be: Display advertising, 5 p.m., Thursday, Dec. 20; Classified advertising, 10:30 a.m., Friday, Dec. 21; News, noon, Friday, Dec. 21.

County budget rises 3.7%

The proposed 1991 county budget which was presented to the public last week by the County Board of Commissioners totals $4,402,753, an increase of 3.7 percent from last year.

Six of the county's eight service divisions show budget increases for next year and two show decreases.

The largest increase, $87,430, is in the Judicial Division; followed by Public Safety, $81,063; Capital Outlay, $45,215; Human Services, $11,510; General Government $10,563; and Board of Commissioners, $7,000.

There was a decrease of $78,697 in the "Other" category, which includes such items as insurance and bonds, retirement, social security, contingency, county fair, Community Growth Alliance, etc. The other decrease, $9,231, was in Operating Transfers.

One General Government department, that of Youth Activities, which was funded last year at $36,359, was completely eliminated from this year's budget since the department has been discontinued. This department was in charge of writing grants for money for parks and other recreational projects, including operation of the Ironton Ferry. The employment of Michael B. Davis, who headed the department has been terminated.

Property and other taxes will pay for well over half of the county's operating expenses. They amount to $2,824,655. State grants will bring in $677,282; charges for services will amount to $528,266; licenses and permits will amount to $157,050, and interest and rentals will bring in $139,000, to which will be added several other small sources of income.

Only one member of the public appeared at the budget hearing last Wednesday. Lis Clapham, St. James Township Clerk, appeared to request that funds for a full-time Sheriff's Deputy on Beaver Island be included in the budget. (See related story).

Members of the County Board expect to approve the budget at their regular meeting on December 27.

Charlevoix County State Bank recently contributed $2,800 to the fire department to fund the purchase of additional rescue equipment. The main component of the equipment is a Hurst Ram which can be used either to pull or push wreckage at an accident scene. The Ram is powerful enough to lift the rear end of the fire department tank truck even when the tanker is full of water. The money also purchased a pump valve manifold and some heavy chains and hooks to be used with the equipment. Bank officers Sherrie Loucks (left) and LoAnne Brown (right) are looking over the new equipment with fireman Barry Wood.

Davis retires from State Police

State police director Colonel R.T. Davis, a native of Charlevoix, has announced that he will retire as of Jan. 19, 1991.

Governor James Blanchard appointed Davis department director in May of 1987. With a new governor taking office in January, Davis was going to be replaced. He had the option of returning to the rank of Lieutenant Colonel, but said he felt that doing so would not be in the best interest of the department.

Davis was raised in Charlevoix and still spends a great deal of time here. While director he returned as a guest speaker for local community groups.

Davis began his law enforcement career in 1958 as a patrolman with the Ann Arbor Police Department. He joined the state police in 1968 as a trooper assigned to the Mount Pleasant post.

During his three years as State Police Director, Davis was instrumental in updating the technology of the department. He oversaw implementation of the Automated Fingerprint Identification System (AFIS), opened three posts and a crime lab and upgraded the .38 calibre service revolvers to 9 mm semi automatic pistols. The weapon upgrade affected 2,200 state police officers and the lead of the state police has been followed by many local police departments including Charlevoix's.

"I leave one of the premier law enforcement agencies in the nation," Davis said. "I am confident that the Michigan Department of State Police will continue to be the standard by which all other law enforcement agencies are measured."

There will be a retirement dinner for Davis Jan. 25 at the Kellogg Center in East Lansing. Local people interested in attending the dinner should contact Bob Nelson at the State Police public affairs office in Lansing.

...recycling costs rise

Waste Management Incorporated (WMI), the company which hauls waste and operates the Cedar Ridge Landfill, changed to a pay-by-the-bag from a pay-by-the-month system this fall. One reason for that was to promote recycling.

Canfield and WMI official Don Pizzurro both say the by-the-bag price system has resulted in more recycling.

Although the by-the-bag system is generating more recycling volume at a time when volume is a problem, Canfield still thinks it's a good idea for the long run.

Pizzurro said, "The bag program seems to be doing well. We have noticed a volume reduction."

When WMI went to the by-the-bag collection, they put a recycling bin at their headquarters on U.S. 31 south of town. People may drop recyclables in the bin during business hours Monday through Friday.

Currently there's no charge to put recyclables in the bin.

"We're still not charging and we're trying not to," Pizzurro said. WMI is paying $3 per cubic yard (a cubic yard is about half a pickup truck load) to take the bin to Northwest Recycling. Pizzurro said they're currently filling the bin about every 10 days. He said use of the bin has increased since the center began charging individuals for drop offs.

Canfield says bin collection has its downside. He said it works fine for responsible recyclers, but there are problems when people put materials in the wrong bin compartment.

Michael somebody (We can't say who because he was much more willing to talk to Santa than to some stranger with a camera.) was one of hundreds of local children to talk to Santa Claus this past weekend.

Out of the Blue

There's Christmas on earth not once a year
But millions of times a day!
Out of all new births there might appear
One who'll show us again Christ's Way.

REASONABLE TO ME
L. SCOTT SWANSON

You can bake but can't hide

Spinach and liver are safe. Nobody ever hides that stuff to keep me from finding and eating it. Christmas cookies and candy are a different matter.

The other evening the baby and I were sitting in the living room watching TV. My wife strolled in from the kitchen and asked me, "Have you been good today?"

I thought about that for a second and then answered, "Good is kind of a relative term, but given my potential to be far worse, I guess I've been fairly good today."

"Well, all right," she said, holding out her hand and offering me a chunk of candy. "Try this."

I took the candy and looked it over. It was made of three layers. The outside layers were dark chocolate and the middle layer was caramel.

I took a bite. I liked it. I broke off a small corner and gave it to the baby. She liked it.

"This stuff's all right," I said.
"Good," my wife replied. "It's some of the Christmas candy I'm making."

Then she left the living room and went back to the kitchen.

The next day when I came home from work I found fresh chocolate fudge on the kitchen table.

"Try some of that," my wife said.

Not one to quibble when I get my orders, I picked up a piece of fudge and bit into it.

"What do you think?" the cook inquired.

"Not bad. Not bad at all," I answered, taking another bite. "It's a new recipe."

I felt a little hand tugging at my kneecap. I looked down and saw a baby staring up toward the piece of fudge I was holding. Apparently she felt mom's new fudge recipe required a second opinion.

Mom felt differently. "Don't let her have any of that. She's had too much already."

Chocolate candy one day and fudge the next. I was kind of anxious to see what would happen the following day.

The following day both the candy and fudge had disappeared.

"Where'd that fudge and candy go?" I asked.

"You don't need to know yet," my wife said. "If I told you where they are, you'd eat them all right away and by Christmas there wouldn't be any left."

"So you've hidden them. Is that it?"

"I've put them away for a while."

I made no fuss. I just smiled smugly.

When I was a kid, my mom used to bake chocolate chip cookies and only allow my brothers and me to eat about a dozen apiece before she hid them. But we always found them. Sometimes we'd have to dig them out of the freezer in the basement and eat them frozen; or thaw them out if we had the patience. But we always found them.

The other night after my wife went to bed, the baby and I did some checking around.

"Pay attention kid," I instructed the baby as she toddled in my footsteps. "You have the privilege of watching the master in action."

Under a cloth on a table on the side porch there were good things to be found. The fudge and candy were just as good as they'd been before. And those little cookies aren't bad either.

Clock praised

Editor,

ECHO...ECHO...ECHO...

...just echoing the comments by Dave Knight and Ken Winter regarding Bob Clock's retirement, but more importantly his response as a newsman during his career.

We have enjoyed Bob's reporting of the news (not inventing - just sincere, honest, precise reporting), his thorough investigation for specials, his delicate treatment of touchy subjects, his wry humor and his pleasant attitude.

We also will miss his tender quips -- until of course, we learn his "nom de plume" for we're sure his pen will surface again sometime - somewhere.

Stay at peace

Editor,

The Persian Gulf crisis demands understanding and action by all people who believe in a non-violent resolution of conflict. We commend the unprecedented international consensus supporting the UN's wide-ranging economic embargo of Iraq and occupied Kuwait. But the embargo needs time to become effective.

We ask others to join us as we:

1. Condemn the actions of Saddam Hussein and Iraq's leadership for its violent invasion of Kuwait as a gross violation of International Law.

2. Ask that there be no unilateral actions by the U.S. military against Iraq and Kuwait.

3. Call for immediate negotiations under the aegis of the U.N.

4. Insist the U.S. participation in the U.N. sanctioned embargo must adhere to the International Law and allow food and medical supplies to enter Jordan, Iraq and Kuwait, and assist in meeting the immediate needs of the hundreds of thousands of refugees in the area.

Please join us in urging President Bush and Congress to seek a peaceful solution to the Persian Gulf crisis through the U.N. and/or the Arab League.

Thank you,
Ellen Addington

Supporters thanked

Editor,

To all the voters of the 103rd district who, on November 6, displayed their trust and confidence and returned me to serve another term as their State Representative, I am very grateful. Your support, and loyalty will not be forgotten.

At the closing of each legislative session I am always left with the feeling more could have been done legislatively. Then, when I reflect upon the past two years it is evident some major accomplishments had been made. Perhaps some people feel not enough has been done, but keep in mind that the more complex the issue, the greater the controversy, and the harder it is to solve the problem. This is one reason I have never made campaign promises I am uncertain can be kept.

With the help of my able-bodied and capable staff, it has been very rewarding to have been able to solve the many varied problems requested of my office. There are very few situations we find are impossible to resolve. All in all, in keeping your interest and benefits in mind, I have always attempted to do my very best and will promise that your needs and wishes will continue to be at the fore of my actions during this upcoming term.

I wish to also send a message to those who did not cast their vote for me in this last election, and that message is that your views and requests are just as important to me as my supporters. Always keep in mind that I maintain an open-door policy and welcome any and all visitors to my Lansing office at any time.

Voters, thank you again for your loyal support. May all of you have a happy holiday season and a prosperous new year.

Sincerely,
Ralph Ostling

Island needs deputy

Editor,

We have a Deputy Sheriff on Beaver Island named Jim Owens. He works 18-20 hours most days, is on call 24 hours a day, is paid part-time and mows yards to support his family. How long can we expect him to stay under those conditions?

We need police protection same as folks living on the mainland. Sheriff Lasater and the County Board have ignored our requests to pay our Deputy what he deserves.

Whatever happened to "government for the people?"

Old pool remembered

Editor,

I learned to swim in the Natatorium you pictured in the Nov. 28, 1990 edition, as did my sister in 1910 and 1911 under the tutelage of Prof. Fisher. My recollection was that the structure was built over Pine Lake with no base but water. We were buckled in around the waist and were attached to a fishing pole while Fisher walked around a second floor balcony giving us instructions on the breast stroke shouting one, two, three KICK, and repeating it the length of the pool and back. If we failed to follow his instruction he would dip the pole and we'd get a mouth full of water and a real scare.

Happy care-free days, spending two months each year at the Inn Hotel. I still love Charlevoix and have visited there each year since renting houses on Park Ave., Dixon Ave. and Michigan Ave. 1991 will make my 82nd year there.

FAMILY

Rauser - Pischner

Amy Jo Rauser became the bride of Michael John Pischner Saturday afternoon, Sept. 22, in Holy Trinity Catholic Church in Comstock Park, Michigan.

The bride is the daughter of Gary and Mary Jo Rauser of Comstock Park, and the bridegroom is the son of Roger and Connie Pischner of Charlevoix.

Father Steve Cron officiated at the ceremony in which the bride was given in marriage by her father.

The bride wore an ivory summer satin gown with a sweetheart neckline. The bodice was accented with iridescent pearls and sequins over lace appliques, and the chapel-length scalloped train was also accented with iridescent pearls and sequins. Her braided pearl headpiece and scalloped lace-trimmed veil were designed and made by the bride and her mother. Her cascading bouquet was of ivory lilies and snapdragons accented with pink rosebuds, lace, and pearls.

Patty Stevens served as maid of honor, and bridesmaids were Lisa Kindt, Amy Pischner, Marcey Hurst, Heidi Bolduc, and Pamela Pischner. Carrie Hoogewind was junior bridesmaid. The attendants wore tea-length royal blue jacquard dresses and carried bouquets of ivory lilies and snapdragons accented with fuchsia.

Katie Hoogewind, as flower girl, wore a tea-length ivory satin jacquard dress with accented royal blue sash and bow. She carried a family tree pillow made by Lisa Kindt, sister of the bridegroom.

Francis Pischner served as best man, and Steve Kindt, Chris Putman, Jeff Rauser, Todd Rauser, and Neil Wimmer were groomsmen. Ushers were Joe Borths and David Abraczinskas.

Music for the ceremony was provided by solists Barry, Mary Lee, and Missy Pischner.

The parents of the bride and bridegroom hosted a reception at Meljer's Banquet Hall in

Amy & Mike Pischner

Grand Rapids, with Roger and Judy Abbott and Barry and Mary Lee Pischner serving as masters and mistresses of ceremony.

The rehearsal dinner was hosted by the bridegroom's parents at the Swan Inn Restaurant the evening before the wedding.

For their wedding trip, the newlyweds traveled to Niagara Falls then down the entire coast of Maine before returning home by way of Canada. They are living in Charlevoix, where the bridegroom is a carpenter employed by Site Planning Development. The bride is an I-V Technician in the Pharmacy Department of Northern Michigan Hospitals.

Local veterans supporting our servicemen in the Gulf

Although problems in the Middle East have taken several Charlevoix people away from the community, the community has not forgotten those people.

Beginning with this week's edition, Charlevoix service people stationed in the Persian Gulf with Operation Desert Shield will begin receiving the Charlevoix Courier compliments of the local Veterans of Foreign Wars (VFW).

Commander Bill Behrens said the veterans of Post 1153 in Charlevoix wanted to do something to let Charlevoix's service people know that their hometown backs them.

Behrens noted that veterans of the Viet Nam war were among the most adamant about letting troops in the Persian Gulf know the community supports them. The Viet Nam vets said they felt forgotten when they served. They and the other veterans are determined that Persian Gulf forces will not be left to feel forgotten.

Charlevoix's VFW Post is one of the largest in the area and has just shy of 100 members.

More than a dozen men and women from Charlevoix are a part of Desert Shield. (See accompanying list.) Approximately 70 people from Charlevoix and surrounding communities are in the Gulf.

Scott Crain of Charlevoix left for Saudi Arabia Sept. 3. He celebrated his 19th birthday two weeks later. His mother, Anna, is one of many parents who wait anxiously for the sons and daughters to return.

Anna Crain and other area family members of Persian Gulf service people founded a support group called Show Your Colors (SYC) in October. The group meets on the second Sunday of each month at the VFW hall in Charlevoix where they exchange news and plan projects to support the troops.

Crain was instrumental in compiling the list of local service people and will serve as a contact person to add names to the subscription list as other local service people are sent to the Gulf.

Service people in the Gulf crave news from home and Crain predicts that the VFW's effort to send the hometown newspaper will be well received. "They'll read every word of it," she says. "The only news they get is letters from family and friends and the paper."

Crain said boredom is a problem for the troops because there's only so much they can do in a desert.

Jerry Johnson, a veteran who spent almost two years fighting in Europe during World War II, says the worst part of a war is sitting, waiting and not knowing what's going to happen. "Each day when you're sitting there is about three weeks long," Johnson said.

Johnson said that as a soldier any word from home is greatly appreciated.

"Anybody with family and friends over there should write to them," Johnson said. "That's the biggest thing that could happen as far as keeping morale up."

C.H. Butcher was stationed with the Air Force in Europe for 18 months during World War II. He said it's important to soldiers to be able to keep in touch with news from home. He said that was something he missed and continues to feel the effects of today.

"It's just like there's a year gone out of my life because of the lack of news from the States," he remarked.

Butcher and Johnson expressed different views about the politics behind the situation in the Gulf.

Butcher favors the deployment of troops, calling it a matter of our nation helping its friends.

Johnson questions sending troops overseas when there are so many problems within our own nation which need to be addressed.

Although they have different views about the politics, Johnson and Butcher are of the same mind when it comes to letting the people in the trenches know their countrymen support them.

Behrens spent two and a half years in Burma during World War II. He said the holiday season is a hard time for anybody when they're used to being with their family, but have to be away from home. He recalled that he once got a Christmas card from his mother in August.

Fortunately, delivery has improved and service people with Operation Desert Shield are getting cards, letters, and now the Charlevoix Courier, in a more timely manner.

Several local people are a part of Desert Shield

The following list was compiled by Anna Crain and the local Veterans of Foreign Wars (VFW). The list will be updated during the coming weeks and months. People who know of other service people from the Charlevoix school district who are serving in Operation Desert Shield should contact Crain or officers of the VFW Post 1153 in Charlevoix.

Local veterans say one of the best things people can do for the service people listed is to write to them and let them know your thoughts are with them.

Church sponsors live nativity scene

Only a few days remain between now and our celebration of the birth of our Lord Jesus Christ. Often those fleeting moments become strenuously hurried with last minute details and gatherings.

Let us be certain to take time to reflect upon the season's true meaning and the story which has given meaning to not only a celebration but a transformation of our lives.

You'll find it in the Bible in the gospel of Matthew Chapters 1 and 2, and in the gospel of Luke Chapters 1 and 2. Tell the story. Sing the carols and let the light and love of their message illumine your hearts.

These days of preparation and anticipation offer each of us moments to celebrate and reflect. Each of us can continue to be concerned about issues that contribute to world peace and attempt to do the little things in our own lives that may somehow allow that light of peace to shine.

The Christ Child is a gift of light and love to all who will receive Him. Peter, Paul and Mary have given a gift and prophetic work to all who will listen. I share with you excerpts from one of their songs. I trust that you too will find these words to be an inspiration for today and a vision for tomorrow.

"...Light one candle for the terrible sacrifice justice and freedom demand.

Light one candle for the wisdom to know that the peacemakers time is at hand.

What is the memory we value so highly that we keep it alive in that flame?

What's the commitment to those who have died? We cry out, "They've not died in vain!"

We have to live for and always believe in that justice will somehow prevail.

This is the purpose.

This is the promise.

This is why we will not fail.

Don't let the light go out! It's lasted for so many years.

Don't let the light go out! Let it shine through our love and our tears.

Don't let the light go out!"

A Dramatized Live Nativity will be presented at East Park in Downtown Charlevoix Friday and Saturday, Dec. 21 and 22 between 6:30 p and 8:30 p.m. There will be five showings of the nativity per night; each showing 15 minutes in duration, beginning on the hour and the half-hour. Sponsor of the event is the Charlevoix Assembly of God.

An expanded performance of the Live Nativity will be presented Sunday, Dec. 23 at 6 p.m. in the Assembly of God Church, located on Hwy M66, two miles South of US 31.

Nursing home plans moving forward

Northern Michigan Hospitals in Petoskey and Charlevoix Area Hospital have teamed up to build a new, 60-bed nursing home in Charlevoix.

The Michigan Department of Public Health granted extensions to the Certificate of Need to allow the two hospitals to work out a corporate transfer with Liberatore Health Care Inc., which was originally granted approval to build more than a year ago.

The state also allowed the hospitals to "extend" their construction start past the deadline in order to submit revised cost estimates. Revisions to the original plans were made in order to accommodate certain health department regulations and to make the building more aesthetically pleasing for both patients and the neighborhood.

The nursing home will be located off Upright Street and behind the physicians' office building near Charlevoix Area Hospital.

Present construction plans call for 49 skilled care beds and 11 Home for the Aged beds for those who do not require constant care. Goodin and Bigelow Construction of Traverse City has been awarded the contract to build the $2.4 million building.

"The building has been designed to enhance the Charlevoix and Boulder Park neighborhood," said Richard Krueger, Charlevoix Area Hospital Administrator. "We did not want an 'institutional' look to the building. We wanted to present a feeling of comfort and ensure that it fit into the natural setting of the area."

Although some site clearing has begun, the major part of the construction won't begin until early spring 1991. An official ground-breaking ceremony will be held at that time. An expected completion date has not been set.

The one-story building will have semi-private rooms, with an attractive dining area and day rooms featuring cathedral ceilings with skylights. The day rooms will open onto a landscaped courtyard. Separate dining facilities for private family dining will be available. Activity rooms, physical therapy facilities, in-house laundry and kitchens are also included. Child day care facilities for employees are being considered.

Deborah Saur, planning consultant for the project, noted, "This facility will fill a definite need for continuity of care for patients from this northern region. In the past, area patients discharged from the acute care hospital often had to be transferred to distant nursing homes for their care. Now they will be able to be closer to home and near their families."

Northern Michigan Hospitals in Petoskey strongly supported the need for another nursing home in the area, said NMH President Jeffery T. Wendling.

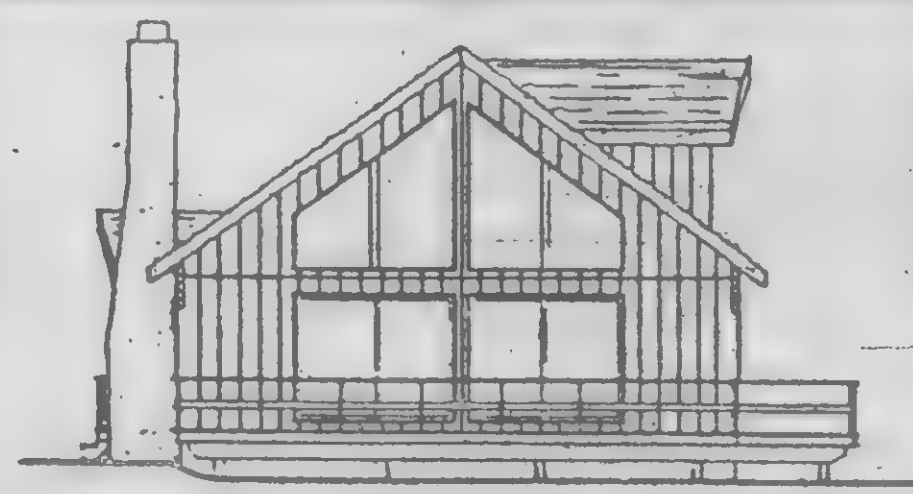

"With the changes we've seen in the health care system over the years, we have recognized there's a need for additional nursing home beds in our service area. The nursing home in Charlevoix will help accommodate that demand," Wendling said.

Wendling and Krueger joined in expressing appreciation to Ralph McRae of Charlevoix, who saw the need for a nursing home and was instrumental in seeing it come to realization. They also thanked Saur for her work in heading-up the planning and securing state approval for the building.

The nursing home in Charlevoix is not the first project the two hospitals have cooperated on. They both own share in HealthWares, Inc., a durable medical equipment and home nursing care company.

Rayders beat Boyne

Charlevoix used quickness and a balanced scoring attack to come from behind and beat Boyne City 71-64 Friday night in Lake Michigan Division basketball play.

The Rayders trailed early in the second half, but turned things around late in the game to beat Boyne City on the Ramblers' home court.

Boyne City forwards Eric Smith scored 25 points and Joe Jankowski scored 21 points, but that wasn't enough to offset the Rayders' versatile attack. Forward Todd Kovach and guard Paul Wakulat each had a double-double statistically. Kovach had 17 points and 12 rebounds while Wakulat had 17 points and 10 assists. Kovach also picked up five assists and four steals to round out his game. Junior guard Luke LaBlance contributed 15 points including a pair of three-point baskets.

Jason Parrish and Dan Terryberry scored just six and four points apiece, but anchored the Rayders' low post-defense and helped keep the long tall Ramblers off of the glass.

Wrestlers take third

Charlevoix produced four individual champions and placed third among seven teams at the St. Ignace wrestling tournament Saturday.

St. Ignace won the invitational with 177.5 points, Sault Ste. Marie placed second with 151.5 points and Charlevoix finished third with 144 points.

Individual champions for Charlevoix and their results in their final matches were:

Shawn Young, 125 pounds, decided his Cheboygan opponent 13-3.

Jason Pajtas, 145 pounds, pinned his Sault Ste. Marie opponent in 3:48.

Brian Darrah, 152 pounds, decided his Sault Ste. Marie opponent 10-2.

Dan Browe, heavyweight, pinned his Manistique opponent in 2:15.

Lake levels rise above average

For the third consecutive month, precipitation on the Great Lakes Basin was above average. As a result, the water levels of all the lakes in November rose slightly above the levels predicted last month. In particular, a near record supply of water to Lakes Michigan-Huron caused the level of that lake to level off from its normal seasonal decline. Nevertheless, all the lakes are expected to resume the normal seasonal downward trend in December.

The Great Lakes forecast, published in the Monthly Bulletin of Lake Levels for the Great Lakes, shows that Lake Superior is expected to remain below its long-term average levels during the next six months. Lakes Michigan-Huron are expected to remain near their long-term long-term average until rising slightly above average in April. Lakes St. Clair and Erie are projected to continue above their long-term averages throughout the forecast period. Lake Ontario is projected to remain near or slightly above average throughout the same period.

A more detailed summary of Lakes Michigan-Huron water levels follows.

Lakes Michigan-Huron at the end of November were at elevation 578.07 feet (176-20 meters) above the mean water level at Father Point, Quebec, or 15 inches (38 cm.) above Chart Datum. This was about 6 inches (15 cm.) above what it was a year ago, and about 2 inches (5 cm.) above one month ago. The November monthly mean level of 578.00 feet (176.17 meters) was about 3 inches (8 cm.) below the long-term average for November. The lakes, however, remained about 29 inches (74 cm.) above their all-time low November monthly mean level, which was recorded in 1964. The forecast shows that at the end of December the level of Lakes Michigan-Huron will be about 2 inches (5 cm.) below what it was at the end of November. The lakes are expected to continue their seasonal decline into February. The water level in May 1991, is expected to be about 1 inch (3 cm.) above the long-term average for that month, or about 9 inches (23 cm.) above what it was at the same time in 1990.

City manager clarifies airport tax position

City manager Mike Wiesner wishes to clarify his position regarding funding for planned improvements at the Charlevoix Municipal Airport. Due to either misstatement or Wiesner's part or misinterpretation on the Courier's part a story in the Dec. 12 edition of the Courier did not accurately convey Wiesner's position.

The city council is considering airport improvements which carry a total price tag of $3.7 million. Preliminary estimates call for the federal government to pay $3,042,000, the state to pay $290,000 and the city to pay $357,000.

Project plans call for the improvements to be made over a five-year period. As the council reviewed the plans at a Dec. 10 public hearing, Wiesner commented on the time table and availability of local funds.

In a phone conversation with the Courier this past week, Wiesner explained the point he sought to make.

He said that given the present city millage levy of nine mills for general operations, he doesn't feel the city will be able to generate its share of airport improvement funds within the five-year period.

Wiesner said he wouldn't recommend increasing the city's millage levy to allow airport improvements to be completed within five years. The alternative is to take more than five years to complete the improvements.

Islanders seeking full-time deputy

By Peg Ohle

The citizens of Peaine and St. James Townships on Beaver Island last week told the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners they feel they are being treated unfairly.

They sent 61 letters, most of them signed by more than one person, to the County Board for presentation at the Board's Dec. 12 meeting. Commissioner Don Smith, who represents the townships on the County Board, read portions of the letters to other Board members.

The letters suggested, in varying tones of demand, that the Island's Deputy Sheriff, Jim Owens, be put on a full-time basis so he would be compensated for the 65 to 80 hours a week he devotes to law enforcement and other duties on the Island.

"We're tired of being full-time taxpayers receiving only part time law protection," one Beaver Island resident wrote.

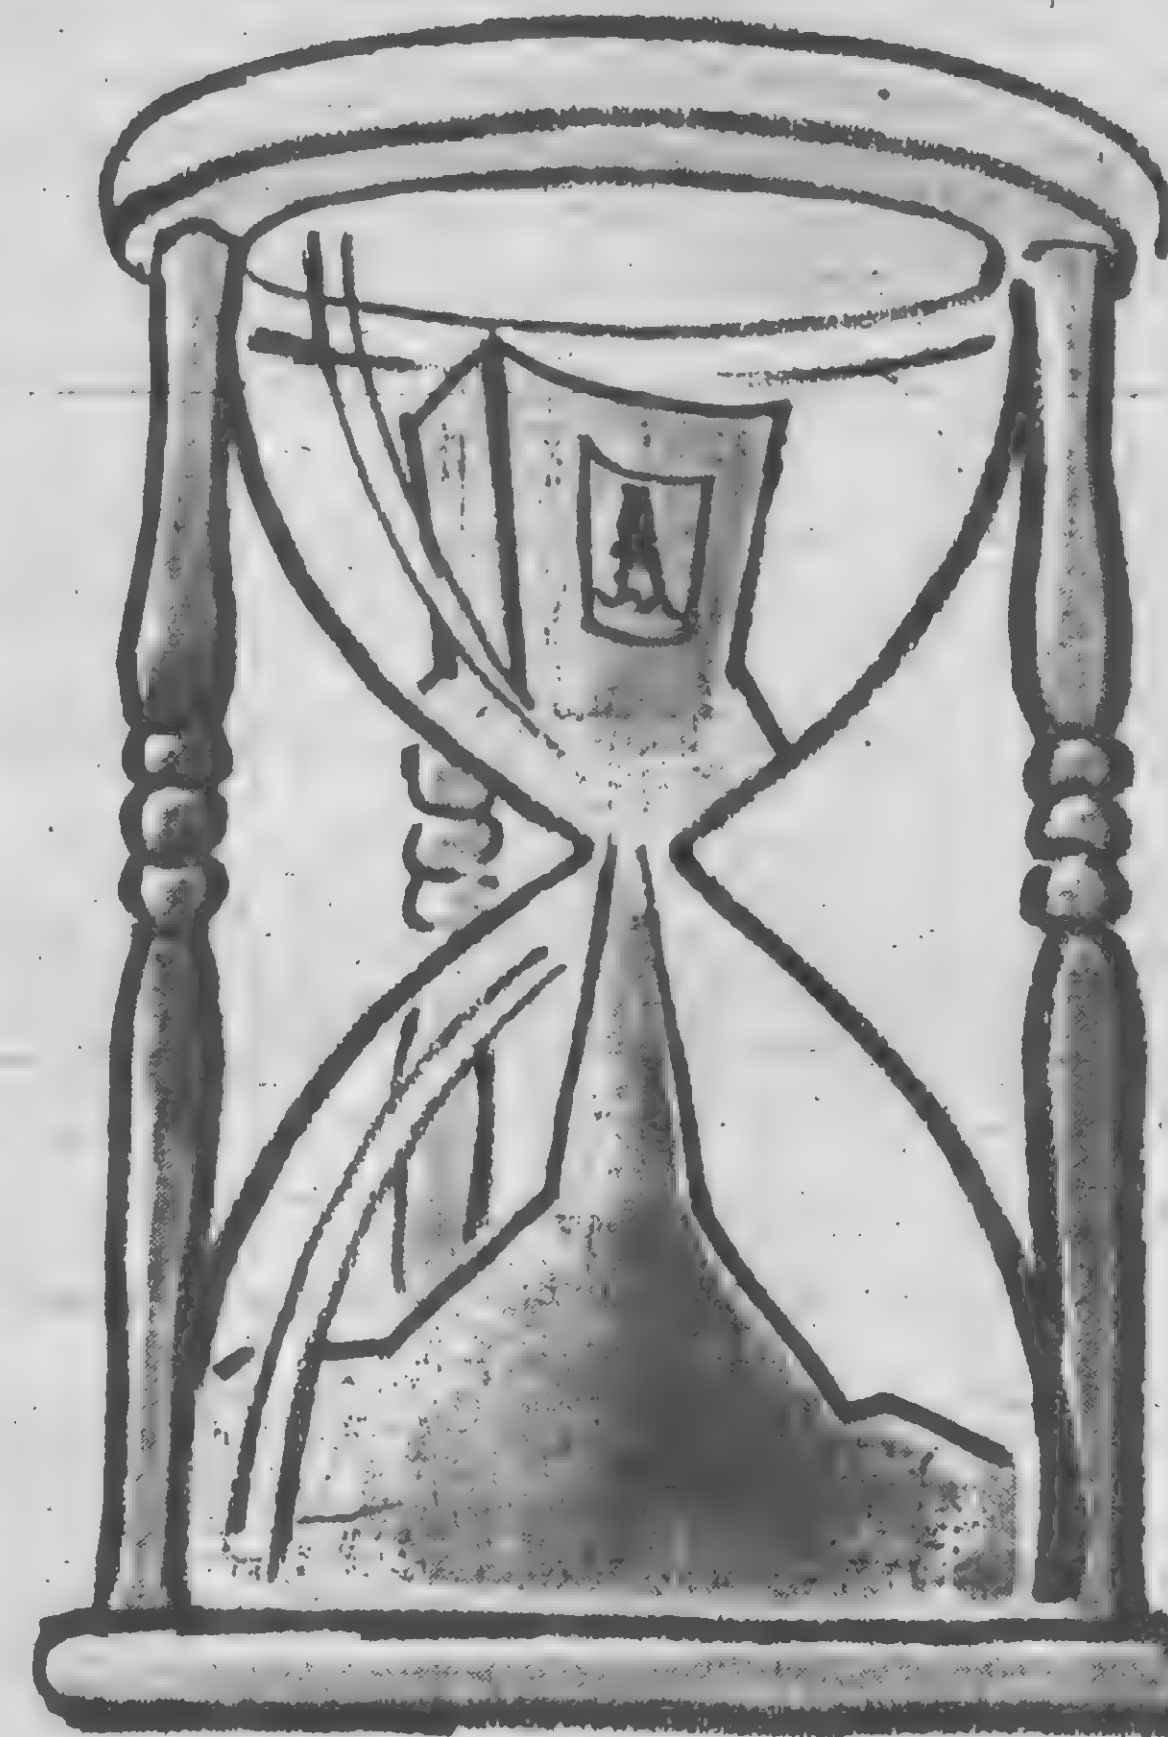

St. James Township Clerk Lis Clapham was present at the meeting to reiterate the feelings of Island residents. "We pay more tax money on the Island than eight other townships on the mainland," she noted.

The County Apportionment Report for 1990 confirms that statement. Next year, Beaver Island property owners will pay $156,971 for county services, including Grandview and the Transit System.

Clapham noted that Peaine and St. James Townships have been adding $3,000 each to Deputy Owens' part-time county salary, but because they are now confronted with heavy expenses for their new Solid Waste Transfer Station, they face a budget deficit.

Smith estimated it would cost the county about $10,000 more to put Owens on a full-time basis and suggested that amount might be cut from some other budget sources, notably the Board of Commissioners, the Soccer Program, and the Contingency Fund. After much further discussion, it was decided that perhaps Peaine and St. James Townships could continue to pay part of Deputy Owens' salary and the county could find enough more to fund a full-time position for him.

Local Christmas project helps 400

A hand truck and a little red wagon rested quietly near the back door of the Congregational Church last Friday morning. They were the only things standing still in the midst of a sea of motion.

A Ryder rental truck filled with bread and other food pulled up on the street and parked near the church's back door. Two men began wrestling handtrucks carrying crates of food out of the truck into the church and up some steps.

Seven women surrounded tables which had been pushed together in a large back room of the church. They took the bread from the carts and began stacking it on the tables.

A short time later bread was stacked 10 wide, five long and three deep at one end of the table. At the other end of the table, boxes of margarine were stacked five wide by five long and four deep.

In the church stairway, a local farmer explained the difference between Empire, Macintosh and Delicious apples. You can cook with Empire and Macintosh. Delicious are no good for cooking, but they're good eating apples.

A short time later a lady looked into some of the more than 100 paper bags of food sitting on tables.

"Are there more apples?" she asked. "Because I have about 10 (bags) here with no apples."

A couple tables away a short lady stood on her tip-toes to peer into bags and make sure that everything that was supposed to be in there was in there.

Down in the basement it was quieter. A single lady stood in the midst of bags of mittens, hats and scarves making sure everything was in order.

Upstairs, Santa Claus walked in carrying a tray of blueberry muffins.

The Charlevoix Community Christmas Project served approximately 160 area families this Christmas. Almost 400 people received food or cloth-

Loaves of bread were unloaded from a moving truck and stacked on tables prior to being placed with other food in more than 100 grocery bags of food which were distributed as part of the Charlevoix Community Christmas Project.

ing. How many people take part in providing the food and clothing. That's tough to say. About 125 volunteers actually do hands-on work with the project. They either collect, package or deliver things. Some of the volunteers are young people. Others aren't.

They just have to act like it. Mary Margaret Geiken, one of many who help organize the project said a list of those who help takes up "pages and pages."

The Christmas project involves all of the local churches. Different people from different churches chair project committees.

The project's main mission is to provide a Christmas dinner and food staples to some people who otherwise might not get such things on Christmas day. The project began about 10 years ago and continues to grow.

Charlevoix is just off the end of trail

As the peak snowmobiling season approaches, Charlevoix snowmobilers find themselves just off the end of a major trail system extending from the Jordan River Valley to the Mackinac Bridge.

For years area snowmobiling enthusiasts have talked about creating a snowmobile trail from Charlevoix to East Jordan.

The idea has a lot of things to be said for it.

While East Jordan has the natural setting, dealerships and mechanical support for snowmobilers, Charlevoix has a larger number and variety of hotel and motel accommodations.

Snowmobiling became wildly popular in the area. Continued on page 3 popular in northern Michigan in the late '60s and early '70s. That popularity faded in most places during the late '70s with East Jordan being a notable exception.

...still off the trail

East Jordan had, and has, some established snowmobile dealerships and also is situated at the edge of the Jordan River Valley which contains some of the most scenic groomed snowmobile trails in the state.

In recent years snowmobiling has begun to reestablish itself as a popular winter activity throughout northern Michigan. Charlevoix has seen evidence of this at the hill climb event which is part of the Mount McCausa Snow Challenge in February. More than 50 snowmobilers compete and many others attend.

The Charlevoix County Snowmobile Council is nearing completion of a trail which will connect the Jordan Valley trail system to the Chandler Hills system in the northeastern section of the county. The Chandler Hill trails connect to other trails which will allow a snowmobiler to ride all the way to Mackinaw.

John Fiedorek of Charlevoix serves on the board of the snowmobile council. He says there have been and continue to be people interested in establishing a trail between Charlevoix and East Jordan.

Dan Moore is with the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) recreation division in Lansing. He coordinates the development of snowmobile trails in Michigan.

Moore said the recreation division has approved the concept of a snowmobile trail between Charlevoix and East Jordan.

So what's the hold up?

"The real problem is there isn't any state land to get from here to East Jordan," Fiedorek explains. "You have to get leases and with liability concerns people are leery about getting involved."

According to Moore someone did some preliminary work a few years ago toward laying out a trail. But that design called for much of the trail to run along county roads. To meet DNR specifications more than half of the trail would have to be away from roadways.

Although the concept is approved and a lot of people want the trail, a reasonably comfortable route has to be found and that route can't be on roadways, Moore explained.

Fiedorek and Moore said that acquiring the necessary leases and easements from property owners can be a long drawn-out process although there can be benefits to the property owners.

Charlevoix County State Bank and its employees donated $1469 to the Charlevoix Community Christmas Project. Approximately 125 people do hands-on work with the project but many other people such as the bank employees contribute in other ways.

Bank fulfills Christmas wishes

The Charlevoix County State Bank contributed money to the Charlevoix Community Christmas Project and fulfilled Christmas wishes for many other people this past week.

A matching program in which the bank matches donations from bank employees brought $1469 to the Community Christmas Project. The matching program is in its third year with this year's contribution being the largest to date.

The bank used to give out Christmas pictures of kids with Santa, but about four years ago bank officers decided to replace that program with a Christmas wish program. People submit Christmas wishes and the bank tries to fill as many as they can.

This year there were between 100 and 125 requests.

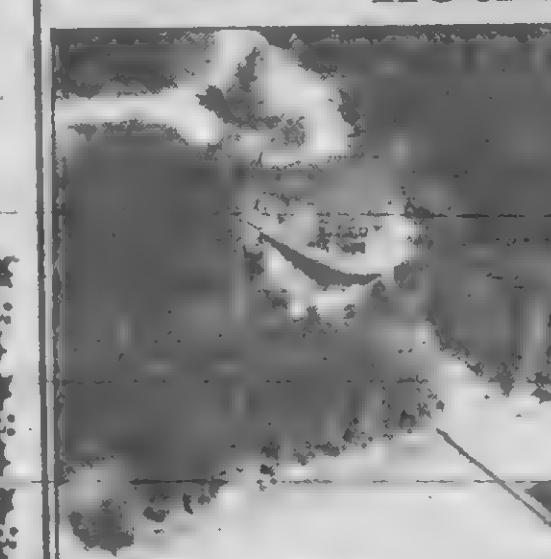

Examples of fulfilled wishes include:

One household didn't have a Christmas tree. Funds were limited and the family couldn't afford a tree. Arrangements were made for a tree and gifts to go beneath it.

The father in another family had recently undergone surgery. Limited funds meant that several children were sharing a bed. That family now has a new bunk bed.

Maintaining career

It's not unusual to read about a two career family enjoying life in Charlevoix year 'round with their two children. O.K. Mom takes kids skiing to Mt. McSaubia in the winter and sailing on the blue lake in the summer. No big deal.

What is a big deal, in my mind at least, is for a mom to fly off four days a week to let's say, San Francisco, Baltimore and New York, and sometimes points in between, every week! You see, this mom is a flight attendant for United Airlines and has been for 19 years.

Four nights a week she's flying the friendly skies with a smile. Three nights a week she's home mothering on Oyster Bay—usually, Thursday through Sunday or Friday through Monday.

I asked Frances Martin, better known as Francie, how she manages such a complicated schedule, juggling a full time job, plus a home, husband, children, and look-as-young-and-rested as she does.

"I couldn't do it if it weren't for my husband, C.T. and Connie Bradley, my babysitter. C.T. takes the children to Connie's in the morning where they are picked up for school. Our son, Taylor goes to Montessori. Our daughter Michelle goes to public school. Then the bus returns them to Connie's and C.T. picks them up at 5:30 gives them dinner and puts them to bed."

"What happens if a child is sick?" I asked.

"Neither one has been sick in 2 years," Francie replied. "If it were necessary, I could stay home."

Francie and C.T. were married in 1979 and C.T. works for Industrial Magnetics in Boyne City. Both families are well known in Charlevoix. C.T.'s parent are Elaine, (First State Bank) and the late Claire (Art Dry Cleaner). Francie's family has summered at the Chicago Club for years. In fact, it was Francie's grandmother, Irene Douglas, who introduced the first pair of swans to this area. The rest is history.

But getting back to Francie's fast paced lifestyle, "What did you do when you were pregnant?" I wonder.

All airlines have the best maternity plans available, Francie assures me. "We are allowed to fly through our sixth month and then we get a 3 month leave after the baby is born. Of course, we can apply for more leave if we wish."

"You must meet a lot of people that you know in your travels?" I surmise.

"It's remarkable how few people I meet. The only Charlevoix person I ever met was Janet Begrow on a flight to San Diego. We had a wonderful time together! I treated her to a first class meal."

Francie is based in Chicago, which means she drives every week to Grand Rapids (3 hours) and catches a flight to Chicago (25 minutes).

"How come you don't fly out of Traverse City?" I asked.

L SCOTT SWANSON

The baby's turned literary

One Flew over the Cuckoo's Nest is a good book. I've read that twice. The Godfather is a good book. I've read that twice.

Danny and the Dinosaur is all right as books go, but after reading it a dozen times the experience kind of wears thin. Yet if my 13-month-old daughter has her way, I will read Danny and the Dinosaur at least another dozen times—probably within the coming week.

My wife Kathy and I are both literate folk. She reads strange science fiction stuff and I read sensible things. Even before we had children we both swore that we would read to them while they were young and do everything we could to foster in our children an interest in reading.

Shortly after we were married, Kathy arrived at home one day lugging a box full of children's books. She'd got them at some kind of used book sale. This was long before we'd started any kind of construction on the kid.

"Aren't you kind of jumping the gun a bit?" I asked.

"No. These are great books. I can look them over before we have a kid."

The baby wasn't much on reading during the first few months of her life. During the first few weeks after the kid arrived, Kathy and I weren't much on reading either. Given the kid's sleeping pattern, if indeed there was any pattern to it, whenever Kathy got a free moment she didn't read she slept.

For the first few weeks, when the kid cried, I found it so disconcerting that I couldn't read with all that commotion. After a few weeks, I got over that. I got to where the kid could sit in my lap and wail at the top of her lungs and I could casually flip through the pages and continue reading.

"The kid's been fed. She's got a clean diaper and a dirty attitude. Chapter two."

As she grew older, she began taking an interest in books. She wasn't interested in reading them. She just liked to haul them around and occasionally chew on the. With our baby, the term Readers Digest was for a time more literal than literary.

But in the past month, the baby has decided that there's more to a book than just its taste and texture. There are letters and words in there. And mom and dad can tell you what those letters and words are.

Now there is no peace in the house. The minute Kathy or I sit down, the baby goes to the shelf and grabs a book. Holding it out in front of her, she rattles over preclaiming "Book. Book." Then she throws the book in the lap of the appointed parent and climbs up in pursuit of it. Let the reading begin.

We've got a baby's first alphabet book. The baby will now point to certain letters and say a letter. The letter she says isn't always the one she's pointing to, but at least she's got the principle down.

Her favorite letter is Q. I find that peculiar. Next to X, I think Q is probably the most useless letter in the alphabet. Ask any Scrabble player who's ended up stuck with it and you'll find out just how wretched the letter Q can be. But for some reason it's the baby's favorite.

We have a book of nursery rhymes. It tells about Little Jack Horner; Bo Peep; The Cat and the Fiddle; Hickory Dickory Dock; Yankee Doodle; and Jack Be Nimble. They appear in that order. I assure you. After more than a hundred readings, I have the order committed to memory. In fact I now have the entire rhymes committed to memory. I shall spare you a recitation.

The baby seems to favor Hickory Dickory Dock. She thinks that's a funny one, particularly when her mother reads it to her. I've read and reread the rhyme a multitude of times and fail to find the humor in it. It's just over my head I guess.

Danny and the Dinosaur is a bit more complex. There are characters and a plot and other

Letters to the Editor:

Hunters cause problems

Editor,

I am a landowner in Charlevoix County and now that another firearm deer hunting season is over, I am left in a quandary. For several years my husband and I have tried to set up a hunting schedule on our farm to give the hunters permitted to be there a good and safe hunt. We have had the hunters meet so they know each other by sight, establish where each will be sitting so no one will disturb the others' hunt or shoot anyone by mistake, and keep vehicles off our property except for about an hour at noon to collect any down deer. For several years all these great plans have gone awry. Outside hunters have trespassed endangering everyone in the area as well as ruining the hunt for those with permission to be there. Groups have come onto our property either to "search" for wounded deer or to drive deer. Both these activities ruin the hunt for those sitting in their blinds as well as again making it dangerous to be out there.

This year things have really gotten out of hand. Not only has all of the above occurred, but hunters were seen leaning against some of our buildings while waiting for their friends to drive a deer by. A hunter not 200 yards from our house shot a deer which was between him and the house. The deer fell less than 100 yards from my home.

I have children whom I keep around the house during the firearm season. I have dogs and horses which I also keep close to the house. With our carefully planned hunt, I felt reasonably safe in my own home. Now with people shooting toward my house, I don't feel safe at all. I feel very angry.

I don't know if there are just a few yahoos ruining things for the others or if in fact most of the firearm deer hunters are yahoos. Much as I would like to give a safe and pleasing hunt to a few of our friends and neighbors, I find that that is

10 Commandments

Editor,

Perhaps this time of the year it is appropriate to step back and review the direction our individual lives and our country are taking.

Today when we have a number of cities reaching close to 600 murders annually; with Senators under investigation for greed, at the least, with the electorate left to foot the bill; with banks in almost as much trouble as the savings & loan industry; with large corporations overextended on credits and interest payments and two of the larger accounting concerns in our country considering bankruptcy is might be time for each of us to contemplate why.

We have many people, it seems mostly young adults, who have taken advantage of the credit society to purchase things they can ill afford and don't really need. The banks are more than happy to help develop and encourage this behavior because any accounts that are not paid in full "earn" near 20 percent interest for the "Generous" bank. Many of these people have numerous credit cards and reach a maximum credit level on all of them only to find there is no way they can really pay these off without a great deal of sacrifice for years...all at 20 percent interest. If an individual tried to charge another individual this rate of interest they could be thrown in jail in most states.

Today the economists want to have lower interest rates to restart the economy by encouraging more people to go into debt and start the whole cycle over.

We have athletes being paid a million dollars a year, or more; who put those earnings in jeopardy because of drug addiction.

The first reaction is to say that we have nothing to do with any of those things, it is the other person who is at fault. It might be well to stop and consider what has gone wrong and what we have done to help this problem. Many retailers are close to bankruptcy. Some would not be in trouble if they had the funds that were lost by shoplifting or the products/money that were taken by employees.

When did all this become a problem? No one really knows; Continued on page 8 things you find in more advanced literature. It's about this little boy named Danny who goes to a museum and meets a dinosaur. Then Danny and the dinosaur spend the day playing together. In this book, Danny and the dinosaur are the good guys. There are no bad guys. The book contains a message which I think all mankind can benefit from. The message (as I see it): Dinosaurs are OK.

The baby's favorite moment in the book is when the dinosaur makes a noise like a car horn. I quote from the pages of the book: "Honk. Honk. Honk."

I must confess this is indeed a gripping passage of prose.

Other books on the baby's preferred reading list are: Ping the duck; Too Many Babas; and something about Emily and Little Bear.

I persuaded the baby to try listening to the Emily and the bear story. She would have been satisfied hearing Danny and the Dinosaur again, but given the number of previous Danny readings, I felt a strong need to broaden our reading horizons.

The Emily and Little Bear book is longer than the others. We didn't make it to the end the first time we read it. We started too close to nap time.

Oh well, we can and will start again at the beginning some other time.

Regretfully,
Hilda Frey

Potter - Valdes

Anita Potter and Steve Valdes exchanged marriage vows Saturday, Nov. 18, in the Community Methodist Church in Half Moon Bay, California.

The bride, who is the daughter of Harry and Betty Potter of Charlevoix, has been living in Mountain View, California. Her bridegroom is the son of William and Betty Valdes of Alexandria, Virginia. He has been making his home in San Jose, California.

The Rev. Larry Thomas officiated at the double ring rites before approximately 50 guests.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore her mother's wedding gown. It was fashioned of ivory satin in a "simple and elegant" style, with princess seaming, a fleur-de-lys neckline, and a train. Her veil was edged with ivory satin piping and her headpiece was composed of handmade satin roses, pearls, and antique lace leaves. The bride carried a bouquet of lavender roses and white dendrobium orchids.

Laura Boykin assisted the bride as maid of honor. She wore a dark green velvet off-the-shoulder tea-length gown and carried a bouquet of white narcissus and lavender freesia.

Scott Engers served as best man, and Rick Potter, Mike Valdes, and Tim Valdes were ushers.

Traditional wedding music by Handel and Beethoven were played during the ceremony.

A reception was held at the San Benito House, after which the new Mr. and Mrs. Valdes departed for a wedding trip to Banff and Lake Louise in western Canada.

The rehearsal dinner was held at the home of the bridegroom.

The newlyweds are at home in San Jose, where the bridegroom has his own law practice and the bride is Customer Service Supervisor for the Signet-ics Company.

Babies receive gift

A Christmas tradition at Charlevoix Area Hospital is to send all babies born in December home in a special Christmas sock made by the women of the hospital's Guild. Two-day-old Samantha Marie tries on her sock for size. She is the second child of Mary and Charles Carver of Ellsworth. Members of the Guild made 24 socks for babies expected at the hospital.

Alward - Lambert

Amy Lynn Alward and Hugh James Lambert, Jr., were married December 1 at the Ellsworth Christian Reformed Church. The Rev. Leonard Riemersma performed the double ring ceremony before 250 guests. A brass arch and candelabra trimmed in azalea garland and satin with gold bows decorated the church along with large flower sprays of white azalea, pale yellow carnations and roses. Matching bows marked the pews.

The bride is the daughter of Bill and Sandy Alward of Ellsworth. The groom is the son of Patricia Lambert of Charlevoix and the late High James Lambert.

Given in marriage by their parents, the bride wore a gown of white satin with a high Victorian neckline. The bodice was embellished with silk floss lace, pearls and sequins, and had leg-o-mutton sleeves with sheer detail. The skirt featured silk floss medallions and a hemline edged with lace. The back flowed into a chapel train. The bride carried a cascade bouquet of star-gazer lilies, ivory roses and white azalea buds.

Organist Virginia Rubingh played traditional wedding music and the vocalist was Jackie Alward, aunt of the bride.

Shelly Essenberg attended the bride as maid of honor and bridesmaids were Angie Lambert, sister of the groom and Katy and Laura Frey. They wore teal brocade tea-length gowns with a sweetheart neckline. The low back was accented with bows. They carried arm bouquets of ivory roses and star flowers tied with satin ribbon. Grace Farrell, cousin of the bride, was the flower girl wearing a short full dress of white satin and lace with puffed sleeves. She carried a lace and wicker basket of rose petals.

Scott Denny attended the groom as best man and groomsmen were Todd Essenberg, brother-in-law of the groom, and Butch Breakey, uncle of the groom. Ryan Bruce was the ring-bearer.

A reception hosted by the parents of the bride was held at the Ellsworth Elementary School. The rehearsal dinner at the Lamplight Inn in Central Lake was hosted by the mother of the groom.

Following a wedding trip to southern Michigan the couple is residing in Charlevoix. The groom is a partner with K&J Excavating, Inc. and the bride is employed at Harbor Industries.

Visually impaired visit Traverse City

Eighteen visually impaired older Charlevoix County persons and their spouses and friends were treated to a bus trip to Traverse City recently to hear, feel and see the decorations and other signs of "Christmas in the City".

The trip was planned by Jerry de La Silvern of Charlevoix, who was assisted by the Commission on Aging, the County Transit System, and several donors of gifts and money.

Starting with lunch at the Charlevoix Senior Center, the group boarded a Transit System bus, and as they sat down, they found a note pinned to the seat which advised them of a gift they would receive from a local business person.

They traveled south along the highway which many had not traveled for several years. In fact, one 75-year-old woman said she had not been out of the county for more than three years. Car trips which had been part of her life stopped when her husband died.

The group stopped at a shopping mall and walked from store to store admiring the Christmas lights, glittering tinsel, and Christmas music. Full-sighted persons helped those who could not see as well by describing the scene to them.

"It was people helping people. It was a beautiful, wonderful trip," said Helen Bishop of East Jordan, who was one of the travelers.

but consider that the courts ruled there could be no mention of God in our public schools about thirty years ago. Since then it has been replaced with sex education classes. Forty years ago radio stations could not play the song Rum & Coca Cola because of the word rum. We have come a long way since then, in the name of freedom of expression. Are we better off because of these "rights" being protected? We restrict ads for cigarettes on TV but we allow the Mapletown exhibit to be funded by our tax dollars because of freedom of expression and few complain. It is one thing to allow the exhibit, but should the tax payers add credibility by funding it?

Today many are concerned about our children learning about the use of condoms in the schools but those same children do not know the Ten Commandments that have served humanity particularly the Judeo-Christian culture for over two thousand years. Perhaps it is time to review all ten: what they really say and consider what our cities, our politicians and our life would be like if we all worked a little harder to practice all ten, not just the ones that are convenient or "still in tune with the times".

Many churches have not mentioned the ten commandments and only preach the "social gospel" of today. After all, six of the ten commandments are negative. They feel the moral gospel is not popular, in part because it is too difficult. There are all kinds of statistics indicating how many people have left the mainline denominations. Perhaps they are looking for stronger direction? The great percentage of athletes that have recovered from drug addiction travel with crusades explaining that it was getting back to God that helped them recover. I am sure that recovery process was not easy.

How many of us can recite all ten commandments? I may do many and injustice by taking the time and space to list the ten commandments, but there are some, I am sure, who have not seen them for years and some who might not have seen them at all.

1. I am Yahweh your God, You shall have no gods except me.
2. You shall not take the name of the Lord your God in vain.
3. Remember to keep holy the Lord's day.
4. Honor your father & your mother.
5. You shall not kill.
6. You shall not commit adultery.
7. You shall not steal.
8. You shall not bear false witness against your neighbor.
9. You shall not covet thy

Wedding book offered in paperback

Authors are always happy when their book is finally off the press and on the shelves of book stores, but when the book is so successful it is reprinted in paperback, there is reason for more celebration.

Such is the case with Charlevoix author Edith Gilbert, whose book, "The Complete Wedding Planner," recently made its paperback debut. The book was originally published in 1982 and a revised hard cover edition was published in 1990. More than 100,000 copies have been sold nationally.

The author says the wedding book is an outgrowth of two earlier books she wrote, "All About Parties" and "Let's Get the Table." She is a member of the Association of Bridal Consultants and recently attended the national convention of Wedding Coordinators in Louisville.

She says it is interesting to compare wedding trends and innovations in different parts of the country. As an example, she tells of one wedding where the bride's attendants were stationed along the church aisle and, as the bride passed by, each gave her a flower for her bouquet.

Another bride who wanted all her young nieces and nephews at her wedding and reception near Christmas time hired a Santa Claus to entertain the children at the reception. "It can be a clown, an Easter bunny, a magician, or anyone else, just so they entertain the kids," Gilbert noted.

What surprises the author most is the number of questions about wedding procedures she receives by phone from all around the country. "Just the other day, a woman from Brighton phoned the Detroit Free Press with the question, 'My daughter is marrying a man whose parents are both doctors. How do I handle this in a wedding announcement?'"

The Free Press referred the question to me. "The Complete Wedding Planner," published by Warner Books, is available at local book stores.

Knights contribute to Center

Charlevoix Knights of Columbus members presented checks to two of their favorite charities last week.

Clem Olach and Ed Buday made the presentations at the annual Bergmann Center luncheon. The Bergmann Center received $678.41, and the Charlevoix House received $758.60, monies which were raised through the annual Knights of Columbus Tootsie Roll sale.

Bergmann Center is a work activity center for mentally and physically handicapped adults. It provides remunerative work with supervision and instruction and encourages good work habits, correct handling of tools, good attendance, and punctuality. Many local industries sub-contract small jobs to the Bergmann Center, among them Lexalite, Hoskins Manufacturing, Michigan Maple Block, Altair, Allied Signal, Lexamar, Harbor Industries, and Weathershield.

Kenneth E. Brill is executive director of the Bergmann Center.

Charlevoix House is a residence for a small number of mentally and physically handicapped adults who are learning independent living. They are taught proper health care and living habits to make for useful lives. Four Charlevoix House residents are Bergmann Center clients, two of them full time and two part time. John and Anne Pfluecke oversee Charlevoix House.

Both the Bergmann Center and Charlevoix House are under the direct supervision of Northern Michigan Community Mental Health, a division of the Michigan Department of Mental Health.

Brill and Anne Pfluecke were on hand to receive the Knights of Columbus checks and to see some samples of the work done by Bergmann Center clients.

New board named

The Northwest Michigan Industrial Association announced its 1991 executive committee at the annual meeting, held Thursday Dec. 6 at the Wolverine-Dilworth Inn in Boyne City.

Vice-President: C.T. Martin, Industrial Magnetics, Boyne City.

Secretary: Bill Joy, Petoskey Electric Motor, Petoskey.

Treasurer: Fred Polhemus, Metaltec, Inc., East Jordan.

The industrial association, comprised of 55 member companies from five-counties, is an affiliation of manufacturers and businesses which provide services to manufacturers. By pooling resources, the group offers training seminars, employee safety programs and other efforts designed to meet the needs of manufacturers doing business in Northern Michigan.

The nine-member board also includes: Bob Kinney, Town and Country Cedar Homes, Petoskey; Bruce Reid, Medusa Cement Co., Charlevoix; Bill Olstrom, Harbor Industries, Charlevoix; Bud Germond, Demmer Corp., Petoskey; Jack Grubaugh, Michigan Maple Block, Petoskey.

For membership information, call Sheri Rhoads, Administrator, in Boyne City at 582-6482.

Vacation Property Network real estate offices in Charlevoix, Beaver Island and Boyne City have been sold to local Realtors Greg Smith, Richard Lobenherz and Richard Georgi.

VPN sold to three local owners

Vacation Properties Network (VPN), a Minnesota based firm, is selling their local offices to three local Realtors. Richard Lobenherz, Greg Smith and Richard Georgi announced last week that they have formed a corporation to take over the Charlevoix, Boyne City and Beaver Island VPN offices.

Georgi, former owner of the offices when they were known as Ski & Shore, sold to VPN in 1987. VPN also acquired other offices in Minnesota, Michigan, Wisconsin, Florida and Colorado. The local offices will remain connected with the VPN national referral network and will continue to use the name. "Restructuring within the national firm has made this opportunity available," Smith, the present managing broker, said. "We're excited about having local ownership again."

Sandy Puhl (left) and Karen Bakker (right) recently won two contests sponsored by Country Customs. Puhl won a Christmas Bunny in a drawing. Bakker won $50 in sewing notions and a gift certificate for $50 in a sewing contest. Bakker's entry was a folk doll angel dressed in Christmas colors and holding a golden harp.

Bergmann Center celebrates Christmas

By Peg Ohle

Clients of the Bergmann Center entertained their families and friends last Wednesday with a holiday luncheon and their 1990 Christmas Revue titled "We Love Christmas."

It was a full-blown production of five Acts in which the 38 clients sang such Christmas favorites as "Frosty the Snowman," "Rudolph, the Red-Nosed Reindeer," "Jingle Bells" and "Joy to the World." There were some solo parts in many of the productions, which gave individuals a chance to show what they can do.

Marlynn Hughes directed the Revue as she has for the past several years, and all ears and eyes were on her as she started the songs with her pitch pipe.

Special thanks were given to volunteers and staff members for helping with the production, and participants were complimented for "conquering their stage fright and sharing their talents."

Terry Isenbarger brought in the Charlevoix High School Band to provide some Christmas melodies which concluded a happy afternoon for the Bergmann Center and all associated with it.

SCRAPBOOK

On a cold winter's day in Charlevoix back in the 1920s, one could stand on the sidewalk downtown and watch a dog sled race. (Picture courtesy of Gerald Goss.)

3-year-olds may be screened

Parents of three-year-old children who will begin kindergarten in 1992 are invited to bring the children to one of three Developmental Screening Clinics sponsored by the Char-Em Intermediate School District. The clinics give parents an opportunity to have their child informally screened to identify any potential learning difficulties which may arise during the school years. The clinics also provide parents information about normal childhood development and to give the parents and children a chance to interact with other parents and children.

The clinic program is a free service with appointments made on a first come, first serve basis.

The schedule for the three clinics is:

Jan. 9 at the Community Reformed Church in Charlevoix;
Feb. 13 at the United Methodist Church in Harbor Springs;
May 8 in Charlevoix.

People interested in having their child screened should contact Pat Gauthier (547-9947) at the Char-Em office for an appointment or additional information.
